Retirement Act Scored; Roads Ask Court Test

Injunction Suit Filed by 155 Carriers in D. C. Tribunal.

Petition Calls Law 'Unconstitutional'

Cost of $60,000,000 Is Seen in First Year; Decision Delayed.

Denouncing the railroad retirement act as an "experiment" which will cost them $60,000,000 the first year, with the prospect of substantial increases every year thereafter, a group of approximately 150 of the Nation's leading railroads yesterday went into the District Supreme Court with a plea that it be declared unconstitutional and invalid.

After a brief hearing, during which the railroad attorneys outlined their pleas to Justice James M. Proctor, the case was continued until tomorrow. This was done so that New York representatives of the carriers could be present.

The retirement act, passed last June, provides that common carriers in interstate commerce pay into the Treasury a certain percentage of their salary rolls, while the employes are to contribute 2 per cent annually to the fund. It also rigidly regulates compulsory retirement ages and make it mandatory for the roads to pay their retired employes a certain percentage of their salary for life.

Four Basic Complaints Made.

The roads grouped their charges around four basic complaints. They alleged that Congress exceeded its powers under the commerce clause of the Constitution, "because the provisions (of the act) have no reasonable relation to the promotion of efficiency or safety of interstate transportation; because the means it prescribes therefor are unreasonable and arbitrary, and because it applies to all employes, including those not engaged in any commerce, those engaged exclusively in intrastate commerce and those not engaged in interstate commerce or work so closely related thereto as to warrant regulation in order to promote efficiency or safety of interstate transportation, and also ap-

Soviet-Tokyo Rail Talks Off

Breach Over Control of Chinese Eastern Adds to Tense Relations.

Tokyo, Aug. 13 (U.P.).—Breach of negotiations between Moscow and Tokyo for sale of Russia's interest in the Chinese Eastern Railway precipitated a new crisis in tense Russo-Japanese relations today.

The railway crosses Manchukuo, Japanese-controlled state, and formerly was owned jointly by Russia and China. Manchukuo seized the Chinese interest and sought to purchase the Russian portion.

The negotiators failed to reach an agreement on price, and the Manchukuo delegation announced their departure was booked for Thursday.

Chuichi Ohashi, vice minister for foreign affairs in Manchukuo, head of their delegation, said he was ready to return to Tokyo to continue the conversations any time Moscow reduced the price.

The break-up followed a lengthy conference between the Soviet Ambassador, Konstantin Yurenev, and Ohashi.

Bitterness developed on both sides during the futile parleys under the supervision of Tokyo. J. M. Rudi, Russian director of the Chinese Eastern Railway—a strategic railway in north Manchuria, owned jointly by Russia and Manchukuo—bluntly charged that banditry and other forms of terrorism along the line had increased during the negotiations.

A charge that Japan had inspired terrorism to intimidate Russia into selling her interests also was voiced in a Moscow newspaper.

Rudi said 46 persons had been killed and 102 wounded in terroristic acts this year.

Special Session Seen in Louisiana

New Orleans, Aug. 13 (A.P.).—It was learned from an authoritative source today that a special session of the Louisiana Legislature may be called for tomorrow for impeachment of certain high officials in New Orleans.

The rumored action was interpreted as another phase of the struggle between Senator Huey P. Long and Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley for control of politics in the city.

The New Orleans States said that Gov. O. K. Allen, Long's lieutenant, was expected to issue a speedy call for assembly of the Legislature, possibly tomorrow, at which Senator Long would also attempt to push through new measures aimed at strengthening his power in New Orleans.

Auto Injury Fatal To Spanish Prince

Gonzalo Bleeds to Death After Minor Crash in Austria.

Vienna, Aug. 13 (U.P.).—The curse of his line, hemophilia, today struck down Prince Gonzalo, youngest son of former King Alfonso of Spain, following a slight motor accident near Krumpendorf, in southern Austria.

The accident occurred at 7:30 p. m. and the youth died at the family villa at Poertschach, Carinthia Province, at 12:45 a. m., before medical attention could save him.

Doctors were called, but it was too late. The physician in charge, Dr. Keyser, examined the body and told the United Press:

"He showed no outward signs of an accident, but died of internal bleeding which no operation could have halted."

The 20-year-old youth's injuries at first were considered minor. They were suffered when the car in which he was riding with his sister, the Infanta Beatrice, turned off the road to avoid a motorcyclist and struck a wall.

Beatrice drove back to the Villa at Poertschach, were Gozalo insisted "nothing has happened."

A little later he felt ill, lapsed into unconsciousness and died. The infanta was shaken up by the crash, but otherwise unhurt.

Mercury Falls Here as Rains Curb Drought

Six States May Salvage Part of Crops and Save Cattle.

Temperatures recorded at the Weather Bureau here yesterday were:

10 a. m.	68	5 p. m.	71
11 a. m.	68	6 p. m.	70
Noon	69	6 p. m.	72
1 p. m.	70	7 p. m.	72
2 p. m.	70	8 p. m.	71
3 p. m.	70	9 p. m.	70

Accompanied by gray skies and a persistent, light drizzle in the afternoon, Washington experienced its coolest day since June 8 yesterday, with the mercury averaging 67½ degrees.

Yesterday's maximum was 71, recorded at 4 p. m. On June 8, before summer began officially, the average reading was 68 degrees.

Uncomfortable early morning sleepers snapped on electric lights or fumbled through the darkness for blankets yesterday morning, as the mercury slid to its minimum of 64, where it stayed until 7 a. m.

Today will be cloudy and somewhat warmer, with moderate winds, the Weather Bureau predicted.

Hopes of salvaging slim harvests increased in six agricultural States yesterday following a week-end of rains, the Associated Press reported.

More Rain Looms.

Some of the Central States were promised more showers, particularly Indiana and Illinois. Forecasters said weather changes should be more rapid from now on, indicating the drought's long seige might be lifted.

In most places, however, the precipitation came too late to aid the major field crops. However, it came as money from the skies for farmers faced with an acute water shortage.

Where there were substantial, rains, prospects for obtaining late crops were refreshed, the Associated Press asserted. A new lease on life was given scorched pastures, and their owners believed more live stock could be saved.

Natives at Henryetta, Okla., rubbed their eyes when rain fell at the rate of one inch in one hour, a sight they had not seen since June 11. Light rains pelted most of the State.

Regarding the rain as an answer to prayer, Cheyenne Indians prepared a celebration feast.

To the red men it was the Rain God's answer to their spectacular animal dance on the banks of the North Canadian River last week-end.

Navy Flier Killed By Plunge in Sea

Maneuvers Crash Fatal to Ensign Jelsey.

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 13 (A.P.).—Ensign James H. Jelsey, jr., of Michigan, was drowned today off the Virginia Capes when his fighting plane from the aircraft carrier Lexington fell into the sea during maneuvers.

He was 24 years old and was graduated from the Naval Academy with the class of 1931.

Parkersburg, W. Va., Aug. 13 (U.P.).—To spare her 9-month-old daughter from an incurable ailment, Mrs. Daisy Long, 29, wife of C. D. Long, principal of Jefferson Grade School here, drowned her child and then threw herself in front of a passenger train Sunday. The child was subject to convulsions.

The coroner's verdict was murder and suicide.

15,000 Tons Of Rock Fall At Niagara

Huge Slide Alters Contour at Horseshoe Falls on Canadian Side.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Aug. 13 (A.P.).—A gigantic pile of rock, estimated to weigh 30,000,000 pounds, rose above the water in Niagara Gorge tonight, visible evidence of the first major rock slide from Horseshoe Falls.

The rock fall changed the contour of the falls considerably. It also altered the course of the turbulent waters of the upper rapids, sending more water toward the American side.

Water was flowing over what yesterday was dry rock as sightseers thronged to the shore of Goat Island in an effort to obtain a view of the jagged, saw-like rim of the falls and the huge pile beneath it. But mist obscured the view.

Water Tossed 200 Feet in Air.

The huge chunk fell from the cataract at 8:20 a. m. today with a deafening roar that seemed to still the sound of water pouring over the precipice. The rock landed in the gorge, sending a spout of water more than 200 feet into the air.

The lip of one of America's wonders lifted as if from a charge of dynamite, heaved, groaned and slid away with a roar. Where there was only a dribble of water yesterday a huge stream began to pour.

John H. Jackson, general manager of the Queen Victoria Park, maintained by the Canadian government on that side of the falls, estimated the rock weighed 15,000 tons.

Huge Rocks at Ledge.

The ledge at the foot of the falls, Jackson said, is huge and some of the pieces of rock are 30 feet square. Others seem to be about 50 feet thick.

The break was halfway to the apex of the horseshoe-shaped falls from Goat Island. The island is between Niagara Falls on the American side and Horseshoe, which is entirely in Canada. The rock began to crumble about 250 feet from the shore of the island.

The first rock slide at the falls

Crater of Old Volcano May Warm Naples.

Naples, Italy, Aug. 13 (U.P.).—A plan to utilize heat from the fiery depths of Mount Vesuvius to warm the buildings of Naples will be studied by a scientific expedition proceeding today to the crater of the famous old volcano.

The scientists believe they can discover a practical method for harnessing the terrific heat from the bottom of the crater, whence for centuries great rivers of lava and ashes have flowed over the countryside, spreading death and destruction.

The daring group was named by the National Council of Research to descend into the crater, quiet temporarily, and make a survey of its scarred interior.

Bullet Wound Kills L. C. Brockman Here

L. C. Brockman, a building contractor's estimator, died in Emergency Hospital early last night where he was operated on for what police said was a self-inflicted bullet wound. He was an employe of G. N. and C. H. Keller, contractors, and police said he shot himself in his home. No motive for the shooting was revealed.

The dead man's wife and a daughter survive him at 1467 Irving street northwest.

A bullet fired from a .32 caliber revolver penetrated Brockman's right temple. He was found lying on a bed by his daughter, Lillian, 22.

4 More Die For Murder Of Dollfuss

Trial Judge Nearly Faints as Noose Throttles Doomed Men.

Execution of Policemen Brings Putsch Gallows Victims to Eight.

Vienna, Aug. 13 (U.P.).—Four policemen were hanged here tonight on conviction of participation in the Nazi putsch of July 25, during which the late Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss was murdered.

The men were executed at 10:30 p. m. as part of the relentless campaign of the Fascist administration under Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg to exterminate all opposition and punish men who rose against the state.

The men were Franz Leeb, 32; Josef Hackl, 28; Ludwig Maitzen, 29, and Erich Wohldrab, 26.

Wohldrab was first to be drawn up in the throttling noose. Hackl, Leeb and Maitzen followed in that order.

Judge Almost Faints.

A drizzling raid fell during the gruesome ceremony. The judge before whom the culprits were tried trembled and gulped glass after glass of water, his eyes fixed on the busy gallows. Several times he swayed and almost fell.

The hangings brought to a total of eight the lives the state has taken in reparation for the putsch which cost the life of Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss.

Five others were given long sentences at hard labor. They are Aemil Schrott, 40, and Johann Debeck, 27, life sentences; Franz Froelich, 28, and Leopold Steiner, 29, 20 years, and Franz Pangerl, 34, 15 years.

Leeb also was found guilty of "public violence." The men were

Dr. Beebe Foils Shark Attack in 40 Feet of Water

Hamilton, Bermuda, Aug. 13 (U.P.).—As relaxation from his record-breaking descents in a bathysphere, Dr. William Beebe, New York scientist, played around on the ocean floor in 40 feet of water off here today with sharks, barracuda and other presumably dangerous fish.

The deep-sea diving specialist, who set a record of 2,510 feet last Saturday, took a party out with him for helmet diving in the comparatively shallow water near shore.

He has often contended that sharks won't attack human beings and he had a chance to prove it.

Using a dynamite gun, Dr. Beebe, visible in the clear water off the coral reefs of Bermuda, had just stunned a "puffer" fish when a 5-foot shark swooped down for it. The rest gasped as Dr. Beebe calmly took the iron handle of his retrieving net and poked it at the shark which shot off at great speed.

Dr. Beebe came up, but went down again. His friends saw several sharks, barracuda (presumably even more dangerous to man than the ordinary shark) great eels and other fish flit about him harmlessly while the scientist collected butterfly fish unmolested.

U.S. Purchase Of Own Bonds Is Revealed

Buying Seen as Move to Offset Inflation Blow to Market.

Morgenthau Makes New Effort to Clarify Silver Policy.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

As Treasury officials yesterday made another effort to allay fears that their silver program would result in inflation, they revealed that during the week which ended last Friday night the Treasury purchased in the open market $45,098,100 of its own securities for investment accounts.

This was in addition to the previously announced purchase of $22,000,000 of Home Owners Loan Corporation securities. Although Henry Morgenthau, jr., Secretary of the Treasury, said the purchases made last week did not set a record, they were regarded as an indication that the Government gave strong support to its own securities when their prices were weakened by the silver nationalization announcement.

Prices of Government securities strengthened yesterday, giving cheer to those Treasury officers charged with the duty of carrying out a $1,700,000,000 financial operation next month. With such a huge borrowing operation only a few weeks ahead, the Treasury has become acutely conscious of bond prices and for that reason wants no talk of currency inflation.

Letters Made Public.

It was for that reason that Mr. Morgenthau yesterday undertook to clarify the Administration's silver policy by making public two letters to him from President Roosevelt and a letter of instructions he sent William A. Julian, United States Treasurer, outlining in general the method for the new currency issue.

These letters confirmed the week-end explanations that the Treasury, while issuing silver certificates for all of the free silver held by the Treasury on June 14, last, would issue currency only in a face amount equal to the cost of white metal acquired since that date. This latter policy, however, is subject to change at any time.

The Secretary of the Treasury said that in order to understand the several developments affecting silver of the last few days it was necessary to keep in mind that the Treasury's silver holding should be

Tax Sale in Ireland Stormed by Farmers

One Killed, 100 Injured as 5,000 County Cork Men Assault Police—Woman Stops Fray by Walking Between Battle Lines.

Cork, Irish Free State, Aug. 13 (A.P.). Soldiers wearing helmets and armed with bayonets patrolled the streets tonight afater gaining the upper hand in a fierce fight with 5,000 farmers in which one man was slain and upward of 100 injured.

Jeremiah Lynch, a farmer, died of wounds as his determined companions battled to prevent a tax sale.

Police, later reinforced by soldiers, at first believed only several dozen had been injured, but tonight it was learned that eight doctors had set up a private dressing station near the farm where the fight occurred and that many injured were attended.

Woman Braves Battle.

The courage of a woman, Mrs. Eamonn O'Neill, whost husband is one of the county court members of the Dail, was credited with saving many more from injury. While bullets were flying she rushed between the battling farmers and officers and pleaded with them to cease. Fearing that they would strike her, both slackened their fire.

Without regard to her own safety Mrs. O'Neill helped Lynch out of the farm yard where the battle raged.

The policemen were attacked as they were guarding a yard where cattle, taken from two farmers for failure to pay land taxes, were being sold. Ultimately the defending force was augmented by a military detachment.

A spectacular charge was made by twelve men in a motor lorry, which plunged at top speed through a cordon of police around the barricaded cattle yard.

One Seriously Wounded.

One of the wounded men was in a serious condition tonight with a bullet wound in the lungs. Five others were shot, and the rest injured by police clubs.

When the 5,000 farmers came to town to protest the sales, they found 300 civil guards drawn up in two cordons before the yard.

The crowd of farmers suddenly parted to let through the lorry which easily broke through the two cordons of guards and smashed through the gates of the yard, like a military tank attacking barbed wire entanglements. The farmers

Roosevelt to Reveal Drought Relief Plan To End Uncertainty

Public Statement Due Soon on His Future Farm Policy.

Expected to Spike Food-Shortage Talk

Safeguards to Prevent Excessive Prices to Be Pledged.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

President Roosevelt will attempt to clear up the fog of uncertainty obscuring the Administration's whole farm and drought relief program by means of a public statement to be issued in the next few days.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace said yesterday the statement will amount to a declaration of general policy.

He made this known as he left the White House after one of a series of conferences in which the President canvassed the drought, directed new measures of relief, and prodded forward his study of "economic security."

Widespread confusion resulting from crop reduction in a year of the Nation's worst drought has determined Mr. Roosevelt to speak out, it is understood. His statement is expected to emphasize that the AAA program is one of adjustment, thus in effect answering critics of crop curtailment.

To Renew Assurances.

Observers believe also that he will give renewed assurances of Federal aid for the West, coupled possibly with further allocations from the $525,000,000 drought relief fund still largely unspent. Furthermore, the President may reassure the consumer against the possibility of food shortage and "gouging" by food profiteers, it is thought.

In conference with Aubrey Williams, acting relief administrator, the President approved plans for Federal purchase of food and food stuffs, which otherwise would go to waste. At the same time, Mr. Williams said, he reiterated his injunction against mixing politics with relief. Any found engaged in such activities will be summarily discharged, he said.

Emerging from his conference with the President, Secretary Wallace declared, "we are not changing our plans in the slightest. We always contemplated a program which was one of adjustment; it is not exclusively one of either reduction or increase in acreage. You'll find I'm on record—back in May—on that."

Price Rises Conceded.

The Secretary conceded the prospect of sharp price rises in foodstuffs this winter, adding, however, that such increases are the "inevitable" result of the drought. He declared that action will be taken to protect the consumer in the event of exorbitant prices, but did not specify what means the Agriculture Department has at its disposal to prevent profiteering.

"It is obvious that now we must be sure the consumer is taken care of," Mr. Wallace said. "And, if as a result of making sure of that, we should relax our acre control too far, then we must be prepared to step in next fall to keep the farmer from being hurt."

By this the Secretary said he meant the AAA will stand ready to make loans or buy at certain prices next fall if crop production proves too heavy. He emphasized that it has not yet been determined whether, and to what extent, acreage reduction will be abandoned next year.

"The weather," he remarked, "happens day by day."

Mr. Wallace said he found the President "knew quite a bit about the drought." He said he informed Mr. Roosevelt that the food supply would be sufficient, "if we use common sense." As for price increases, the Secretary added that surveys by economists have shown that the cost of living will not go up to any great extent.

Will Not Allow Waste.

Mr. Williams said the President agreed that no foodstuffs should be allowed to go to waste. Hence, it was decided that carloads of hay and fruit will be bought, the cutting and picking to be done by relief workers. Under marketing agreements, the administrator pointed out, much fruit ordinarily would not be picked.

"The President again took the stand that any one of our paid staff will not be permitted to be a candidate for office or to engage actively in politics of a partisan character," Mr. Williams said.

Neither Mr. Williams nor Secretary Wallace was prepared to say whether the $525,000,000 drought relief funds will prove sufficient. So far only $165,000,000 has been allocated from this sum. But from now on expenditures are expected

Pendergast Machine Dominates Missouri

Kansas City Boss Carries Control of State in Vest Pocket.

By Elliott Thurston.

Kansas City, Aug. 12.—As Boss Pendergast goes, so goes Missouri.

Epitomized in the Hon. Thomas J. Pendergast and his machine here, the student of public affairs in this country will find most of the answers to the question of what is wrong with American politics. Reformers, moralists, philosophers may draw their own conclusions. The facts speak for themselves:

Boss Pendergast, locally described as the Mussolini of Missouri, is 62—a chunky man, with a large head set upon a thick, muscular neck. He happens to look like the typically caricatured political boss. His unprepossessing political office, in a squat two-story brick building on Main street, is known as the powerhouse of Missouri politics. Petitioners from beggars to bankers climb a flight of stairs to an anteroom, where a mammoth man, once a river steamboat pilot, functions as the boss' secretary—and bouncer. On the walls are pictures of Woodrow Wilson, of former Senator Jim Reed—a chromo of Boss Pendergast, presented by a grateful admirer.

THOMAS J. PENDERGAST.

The boss sits in a swivel chair behind a roll-top desk. He is a man of few words. He was once interviewed by a "success" magazine,

NRA Seeks 500,000 New Labor Pledges

Asks Enforcement Aid of Employers in Service Trades.

NRA moved to draw widespread compliance with code labor provisions yesterday by initiating a campaign to obtain new pledges from 500,000 employers of service industries in exchange for Code Blue Eagles.

Many of these employers already fly Blue Eagles distributed under the President's reemployment agreement. In the new drive, before they can obtain the essential Code Eagle, they must agree to enforce labor provisions, including maximum hours, minimum wages, the collective bargaining guarantee and the ban on child labor.

Nine service trades with millions of employes throughout the country will be covered by the campaign, including barber shops, bowling alleys and billiard halls, shoe repairers and rebuilders, cleaners and dyers, hotels, laundries, parking garages, lots and stations, advertising display installers and advertising literature distributors.

Every postman in the country will become a representative of NRA in the new movement. They will distribute to every employer in the nine trades a letter from Recovery Administrator Johnson and two return postal cards.

Application for Placard.

One of the cards is an application for an official placard reproducing code labor provisions, which a Presidential order requires to be posted in every establishment operating under a pact.

A second card is an application for the Code Blue Eagle, display of which Gen. Johnson emphasized in his letter, "will be evidence of your compliance with the labor provisions of your code and wtih such trade practices as may be agreed upon localy by members of your trade after apporval by NRA."

The new drive is in line with present policy of NRA to crusade for compliance of labor provisions by service industries and to soft-pedal troublesome fair trade practice provisions, including prices for hair cuts and related services.

Most of the service codes originally contained fair trade practice clauses applicable to every member of the industry throughout the country. President Roosevelt suspended operation of all such provisions in service codes last May, however, and since that time machinery has been set in motion to give official sanction to such rules on a local rather than National ba-

Woman Starts 11th Day With Hiccoughs

Los Angeles, Aug. 13 (A.P.).—Mrs. Homer McCormick, wife of a Los Angeles postal official, began her eleventh day of violent hiccoughing today.

This is the second extended attack she has suffered this year. Several months ago the paroxysms kept her without rest or food for five weeks. Physicians have managed to bring her an average of two hours sleep a night. Her only nourishment is milk.

Mrs. Fontaine And 4 Others Hurt in Crash

2 in Hospital After Police Car Overturns on Way to Richmond.

Skidding on the wet highway near Bowling Green, Va., a Washington police car carrying Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Fontaine and Washington detectives to Richmond for the opening of the murder trial of William Davis, alleged leader of the Tri-State gang, overturned twice early yesterday, injuring all of its occupants.

This, and the smouldering ruins of the bombed Forrest Club, suburban Richmond gambling rendezvous, set a sinister background for Davis' trial in Hustings Court on a charge of killing Ewell M. Huband, Federal Reserve Bank truck driver, last March.

The trial yesterday was postponed for a week, due, attorneys said, to the absence of several "alibi" witnesses, who were expected to testify for Davis.

Two in Hospital.

Two of the occupants of the automobile were in serious condition at Johnston-Willard Hospital, Richmond.

Mrs. D. H. Mansfield, policewoman and wife of Detective Sergt. D. H. Mansfield, was the most seriously hurt. She suffered a wrenched back and possible internal injuries. Postal Inspector Leo DeWaard was in an undetermined condition, with possible internal injuries, sprains, cuts and bruises.

When the automobile swerved into a sand bank at the roadside, Mrs. Fontaine was bruised and cut

2 Men Lynched In 2 Murders

Mississippi Mob Wrests Victims From Deputies and Hangs Them.

Ashland, Miss., Aug. 13 (A.P.).—Mobs snatched two colored men from deputy sheriffs today and hanged them from a tree near Michigan City to avenge the killing of two white men.

The victims were Robert Jones and Smith Houey. They were being brought here for trial for the murder of Connis Gillispie more than a year ago.

The tree from which they were hanged was only 150 yards from the spot where Deputy Sheriff Mark Mason was slain while investigating Gillispie's death.

Jones was taken from two deputies en route here from Tupelo, and Houey was taken from two other deputies on the way from Holly Springs.

The two mobs converged near Michigan City and hanged the Negroes from the tree. Their bodies were left suspended until Sheriff R. H. Hudspeth ordered them cut down.

The mobs were masked and deputies said they did not recognize any of the men. Sheriff Hudspeth said he would do his "best to find the guilty parties," and District Attorney Fred Belk promised a "rigid investigation."

to increase rapidly, and Mr. Williams doubted whether present funds would be enough for a work program "of a serious character."

Meanwhile, the Agriculture Department was bringing up to date statistics for an early report on the Nation's food and feed supply. A summary released by the AAA bore out earlier predictions of a market shortage of pork and beef. Distress has been so acute, the Government already has bought 2,000,000 head of cattle for relief distribution.

Linked with the Administration's general relief policy is the study of social security, which the President went over during the day with Secretary Perkins and other officials. The President concurred in plans to study all phases of "individual hazards," Miss Perkins said, although not all of them may be found desirable for inclusion in a legislative program next year.

Miss Perkins, who heads the President's committee directing the survey, announced that Assistant Secretary of Labor A. J. Altmeyer had been appointed chairman of a technical board composed of Government experts working on the problem. With him at the White House were Edwin E. Witte, executive director of the study, and T. H. Eliot, counsel.

Johnson's Senate Race Enters Court

Democratic Rival Seeks Bar From Ballot.

San Francisco, Aug. 13 (AP).—A petition for a writ of mandate to keep the name of Senator Hiram Johnson off the ballot at the coming primary was filed in the supreme court here today by Arthur H. Henning, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator.

Henning charged Senator Johnson announced recently he was a "Roosevelt Progressive Republican," but that there is no such party.

The San Francisco attorney also pointed out that Senator Johnson was registered in the Republican, Commonwealth and Progressive parties, and alleged the primary law had been violated.

occurred January 17, 1931. A piece 150 feet deep and 300 feet wide fell from the American falls then, bringing down an estimated 80,000 tons of rock.

Horatio Collins, assistant chief of the reservation police, estimated today's slide was 200 yards wide and 50 feet or more deep. He was the only person who witnessed it.

Standing at Terrapin Point, near the edge of the falls, Collins said he heard a rumble like thunder, but did not see the first rock give way.

"I saw the second slide soon after," he said. "The brink appeared to crumble halfway between the point and the vortex of the falls.

"A huge hunk fell into the gorge. It sounded like thunder or an earthquake. Water from the bottom of the falls flew higher than the falls. It must have been 200 feet."

The falls was 168 feet high at the point of the slide.

"The water above the falls became muddy," Collins related, "and it continued so for quite some time, looking black as it passed over the brink.

"The changed contour was easily visible to me, but it would not be to anyone not familiar with the cataract."

Rain Ends Drought; D. C. Weather Cool

Cheyenne brave, grunted as he watched the drizzle before his tepee.

Nebraskans looked upon a rain-soaked landscape. In Kansas clouds veiled a sun which had burned the state brown. Valley Falls and Centralia were doused by heavy rains. Elsewhere in the State there were hopes that showers would rescue late garden crops and dampen the subsoil for planting in the autumn.

The Associated Press reported the need for rainfall throughout the Southwest was acute. Missouri had slight precipitation, but grain crops, weather experts said, virtually were beyond redemption.

Gardens brightened with new life in down-State Illinois as rains fell as heavily as 2.44 inches. Orchards took on fresh color, and the chances for a corn crop were heightened. Iowa received random showers from gray, sullen skies.

Accident Makes Nitroglycerine; Savant Saves City

Pasadena, Calif., Aug. 13 (AP).—This city received the scare of its life today when a workman accidentally created 100 gallons of nitroglycerin — but Prof. W. N. Lacey, explosives expert of the California Institute of Technology, saved the day.

Horrified officials of the Crown City Heating Works, two blocks from the city's principal intersection, informed police that a workman accidentally poured three gallons of nitric acid into a tank of glycerin and sulphuric acid.

Police and firemen roped off two city blocks and rushed Prof. Lacey to the plant. The professor quickly selected a number of chemicals from shelves and poured them into the batch of nitroglycerin.

"It's all right now," he announced. "The explosive is neutralized."

sis and then only when 85 per cent of the members of a trade in a particular area vote for the provision.

Observers recalled that last week Gen. Johnson specifically exempted certain service industry employers in towns of less than 2,500 population from most code provisions.

Gen. Johnson's latest letter follows:

"Opportunity to secure the Code Blue Eagle, individualized to distinguish your industry and establishment is now open to all members of your service trade by virtue of Executive order No. 6723, May 26, 1934, and NRA administrative order No. X-53, June 28, 1934.

"If you have not already received the Code Blue Eagle, you may obtain one by signing and mailing the inclosed postcard which requires no postage. Display of the Blue Eagle by you will be evidence of your compliance with the labor provisions of your code and with such trade practice provisions as may be agreed upon locally by members of your trade after approval by NRA.

"Also inclosed herewith is an application postcard for official copies of labor provisions of the code covering your establishment. Under Executive order and the rules and regulations of this Administration, you must fill in, sign and mail this application which requires no postage, and display the official copies of the labor provisions as soon as they are received by you."

Groucho Puts Off Old Funny Face In Straight Role

Skowhegan, Me., Aug. 13 (U.P.).—Groucho Marx, leading gagster of the Four Marx Brothers, abandoned grease-paint mustache, habitual cigar and frock coat tonight to appear in his first "straight" role—and played it straight.

Lakewood Theater was packed for the opening performance of "Twentieth Century," the rowdy comedy of show business written by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur from a script by Charles Milholland. The play was one of Groucho's own choosing.

Groucho, one of the high-salaried performers of stage and screen, thus joined the growing list of actors and actresses who, for small pay and love of their art, are farming themselves out to summer theaters.

Tax Sale Stormed By Irish Farmers

followed. A gun was fired somewhere, and the wild fight was on.

The farmers eventually broke ranks and scattered, but re-formed and stood their ground half way down a street leading to the yard.

This time the police retreated, but reinforcements arrived, and the battle started again, raging as far back as Patrick street, the main thoroughfare.

Outbreaks Over City.

A detachment of military in full kit appeared and eventually took up its position in front of the yard amid boos and jeers from the crowd.

Disturbances also broke out in other parts of the city, and police swung their clubs freely.

The driver of the automobile which broke through the gates was critically wounded by a bullet.

After the fight the crowd paraded through the street, and when the farmers received a report that one of the wounded men was dead they shouted: "Where is the murderer?"

Then the entire group knelt in the street and recited the rosary. Civil guards on duty removed their helmets and joined in the prayers.

Miss Perkins Outlines Idle Insurance Plan

Secretary of Labor Sees Aid to Recovery in Program.

(Associated Press.)

A comprehensive program of unemployment insurance, to include not only wage earners, but farmers and professional classes as well, was outlined last night by Secretary Perkins, chairman of a committee on economic security named by President Roosevelt after his message to the last Congress, outlining his aims for broad social legislation. She spoke over a National Broadcasting Co. network. She said she did not necessarily mean that the entire insurance program would be submitted to the next Congress.

But she recalled the President's statement that "next winter we may well undertake the great task of furthering the security of the citizen and his family through social insurance."

The committee interpreted its setting up "as a mandate to survey the entire field and outline a complete program for economic security," she said. "This program," she added, "will be worked out democratically along lines which are consistent with the competitive industrial system, and which will promote, rather than retard recovery."

The Labor Secretary refused to enter into the controversy between the American Federation of Labor and the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, over what the latter termed the federation's "exaggerated" estimate of present unemployment.

"Whether there are 7,000,000 or 10,000,000 wage earners who do not have employment in privately conducted industry is relatively unimportant," she said. "It is estimated that 13,000,000 were unemployed at the worst stage of the present depression, and not less than 2,000,000 people were without work at the peak of prosperity."

She advocated a permanent set-up to protect the individual "in all hazards likely to involve him in distress and dependency."

"What we have done," she commented, "is distinctly better than a do-nothing policy, but is surely not the best way to meet the problem."

Mother Wins Baby Held for Board

Court Directs Custodian to Return Child to Parents.

Jersey City, N. J., Aug. 13 (AP).—Mrs. Beatrice McNabey, 23, red-haired Baltimore cabaret entertainer, was reunited today with her 2-year-old daughter, Norma Jean Taylor, whom a North Bergen woman had held as security for the payment of a board bill.

Vice Chancellor John O. Bigelow ordered Mrs. Clara Gross to return the child to its mother, and ruled he had no jurisdiction over payment of the bill.

Mrs. Gross said the child had been in her care 14 months at $10 a week and that $530 was due her. Mrs. McNabey, whose professional name is Bea Baxter, said only $250 is due. She was ordered by the court to pay Mrs. Gross' counsel fees of $25.

Then with her mother, Mrs. Pearl Veras, of Detroit, she left the court to go to North Bergen for the child. She said she would return to Baltimore at once.

Straus Sees President Before Return to Paris

President Roosevelt conferred late yesterday with Jesse I. Straus, Ambassador to France, who returns to his post on Saturday, the Associated Press reported. There was no indication of any new debt proposals on the part of the President to France, which has defaulted on the last two payments. The ambassador indicated debts were not discussed.

U. S. Mediation Of Aluminum Strike Offered

Labor Board Begins Move to Settle Walkout; Calls Expert In.

The National Labor Relations Board made its first move yesterday to settle the strike at the mills of the Mellon-controlled Aluminum Co. of America, which involves more than 8,500 workers.

The board suggested that it be allowed to act as mediator and was awaiting approval of this suggestion by both employer and workers.

At the same time it requested the Labor Department to assign Fred Keightly, a veteran conciliator reported to be familiar with affairs leading up to the general walkout, to duty here in order to advise the board on the controversy. The department ordered Keightly to report here today.

Labor Dispute Events.

Other developments in labor disputes yesterday were:

The powerful Republic Steel Corporation has renewed its wage agreement with the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers for its Ohio plants, conforming with a settlement effected ten days ago by the Steel Labor Board.

The National Labor Relations Board scored its first outright victory as the Tamaqua Underwear Co., of Tamaqua, Pa., accepted its decision ordering reinstatement of 61 employes.

E. P. Marsh, Labor Department conciliator stationed at Astoria, Wash., was ordered to Portland, Oreg., by the Labor Department to act in negotiations for settlement of a strike of 400 truck drivers there.

Section 7(a) of the National Industrial recovery act, which the board is chiefly concerned in enforcing, is not involved in the aluminum strike. The workers are demanding a working contract for the union alone, deduction of union dues by the company from wages, and a universal wage scale. The company is objecting to what it terms a "closed shop."

Labor leaders said the aluminum workers have a substantial strike fund which would enable them to hold out for a couple of months, if necessary. On the other hand the Aluminum company has shown no indication of acceding to the union demands.

The Steel Labor Board made no comment on the reports that the Republic Steel Corporation had renewed union contracts other than to say such was to be expected in view of the settlement reached in Washington recently.

Steel Peace Not Final.

American Federation of Labor officials here stated that while the Republic Steel Corporation had agreed to adhere to union wage scales and hours, no formal contract has yet been signed.

The Republic corporation canceled wage contracts at its plants in Warren and Niles, Ohio, and Moline, Ill., on June 30, on the grounds that the Amalgamated association was reported to have been dominated by a radical element.

Word that the Tamaqua Underwear Co. has agreed to abide by the Labor Board's decision came yesterday from Dr. J. E. Achmuty, general manager of the company. The board had found that the company dismissed 61 employes who refused to join a company union.

Meantime, the Associated Press said peaceful conditions prevailed at the six big plants of the Aluminum company at New Kensington, Arnold and Logans Ferry, in Pennsylvania and at Alcoa, Tenn., Massena, N. Y., and East St. Louis, Ill. Pickets kept an all-day watch at the plants.

David Williams, American Federation of Labor organizer, warned workers at a meeting in New Kensington that all picketing must be careful.

Officials of the company said they were in a "receptive mood" for any suggestions Federal conciliators may offer.

Service Men Get 72 Jobs

Inmates of Soldiers, Sailors Home Fewer in July.

Jobs were found for 72 inmates of the Soldiers and Sailors Home during July, according to a report on that institution made public yesterday by Elwood Street, director of public welfare.

There were 221 men in the home during July, T. A. Hudlow, superintendent, reported. In July last year the number was 279. Of those who stayed in the home at 921 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, one was a veteran of the Civil War, 38 of the Spanish-American War and 217 of the World War.

"No definite reason appears for the reduction in the number of men at the home this July as compared with last beyond the possibility of improvement in the Federal transient program with better care in Federal bureau and lodging houses and some restriction on travel by transients," Mr. Street said.

It cost $1,480.38 to operate the home during July. This was $15 less than the cost for July a year ago. The average cost per inmate was $1.19 per day and the average cost of food was 28 cents per inmate per day.

Mrs. John G. Kelly Dies at Ilion, N. Y.

Word has been received here by James P. and Mary Kelly of the death of their mother, Mrs. John G. Kelly, at Ilion, N. Y., Sunday. Mrs. Kelly was born in Ireland in 1859 and came to this country in 1880. Besides her son and daughter, she is survived by her husband and three other children, John J. and Thomas G., of Ilion, and Mrs. Sarah McManus, of Utica.

Major Strikes Near, Textile Session Told

General Walkout Urged by Southern Delegates; Vote Slated.

New York, Aug. 13 (AP).—Called into session a month ahead of schedule to face "an emergency in the industry," delegates to the United Textile Workers' convention were told by their officers today that major walkouts are imminent in the textile trades.

Thomas F. McMahon, president, sounded the thirty-first annual meeting's keynote with the declaration that "strikes of large dimensions are on the way."

Southern delegates presented 50 separate resolutions calling for a general textile walkout. A vote on the question was scheduled before the week's meeting closes.

McMahon urged the immediate calling of a strike whenever "stretchout" — excessive machine load practice—is attempted by an employer, unless the union already has agreed to the procedure.

The 600 delegates heard the reading of a telegram charging police killed two textile strikers last Friday in a strike at the Eagle-Phenix mill, Columbus, Ga. Part of the telegram read:

"It is impossible to get justice from local attorneys. The city police are planning to pin the murders on one of our boys. We have 32 eye-witnesses to the murders."

The telegram was signed by E. G. Newberry, identified as an officer of the Columbus union.

Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the Governor of Pennsylvania, received a rousing cheer as she addressed the delegates.

"I believe in trade unions because I am an American," she said. "We can't have democracy unless we have it all along the line—in the workshop and factory, too. Unions are the only way to have democracy in industry, and if democracy is not there, industry must fail."

McMahon, in his opening address, recommended a 30-hour, 5-day work week in the textile industry and a return of machine load conditions of 1921. He said the 30-hour week would reemploy all the unemployed textile workers and produce sufficient goods for domestic demands and foreign export.

The union, which is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, has some 300,000 members throughout the country.

Annulment Won By Mother of Two Married 14 Years

A 14-year-old marriage, during which two children were born, was dissolved in the District Supreme Court yesterday when Justice James M. Proctor annulled the marriage of Mrs. Elsie Ward Rosenberry and Ollie Wesley Rosenberry.

Mrs. Rosenberry, who sought the annulment, said her husband married her less than 30 days after he had obtained a divorce from his first wife. The marriage was invalid, she said, because he should have waited six months under the laws of Virginia. Attorney Raymond Neudecker, representing the wife, also asked for a court decree to legitimize the children.

Surgeons to Operate On Ailing Park Trees

The elms, maples and other trees in Franklin and Lafayette Parks will bare themselves within a few weeks to the surgeon's insrtuments for rejuvenation treatments sponsored by the Public Works Administration.

As an outside contract project, the office of National Capital Parks yesterday advertised for bids. They will be opened August 22 and work will begin shortly after the award is announced. Funds have been made available by PWA.

Lafayette Park has 150 trees to undergo treatment and Franklin has 117.

Two Theories Probed in Key Bridge Death

Hit-Run Driver Blamed by Most Officers; Week-end Toll 3.

Detectives last night were striving to solve the mysterious death of Frederick W. Geare, 60, of Baltimore, who was found fatally injured, apparently the victim of a hit-and-run driver, on Key Bridge yesterday.

His head was gashed deeply in several places. Geare died in Georgetown University Hospital several hours after he was found by two youths.

Although they expressed the belief that Geare had been struck by a hit-and-run driver, police also worked on the theory that he might have been "taken for a ride."

Youths' Story.

The youths told officials that they saw a car leave the spot where they found the unconscious man. Another report received by police was that a supposedly intoxicated motorist had been seen speeding across the bridge shortly before Geare was found.

Geare was identified by his son, Clifford Geare, of Baltimore. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald performed an autopsy, but has not announced the result.

If Geare's death was the result of a traffic accident, it is the third in or near the District over the week-end.

An unidentified colored woman, about 24, was killed yesterday when a truck and a coupe collided. The smaller car overturned, pinning her to the sidewalk. She died at Freedmen's Hospital.

Police said the truck was driven by Charles E. Matthews, 31, colored, of the 1500 block of Eighth street northwest, and the coupe was driven by Gilmore C. Jungkurth, 44, of the 2700 block of Fourteenth street northwest.

The third traffic death was that of Mrs. Amelia McHale, wife of Policeman James H. McHale, of the Tenth Precinct, who was killed in a three-car crash on Rhode Island avenue, near Brentwood, Md., Sunday. Seven persons, including her husband, were injured.

The Secret committee of 100 Observers continued its campaign for traffic safety yesterday.

Thirty-two complaints were received in yesterday's mail.

Foes of Nazi Church Confer

Independent Clergy Meet to Discuss Hitler Oath of Allegiance.

Berlin, Aug. 13 (AP).—A council of war in the increasingly bitter controversy which is shaking the Evangelical Church in Germany was held today at Wuppertal by opponents by Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller.

The opposition is being expressed through a self-constituted free synod. Members of the organization were apprehensive of the possible outcome of measures taken last week by the "national" synod, which extended Bishop Mueller's control over the church. They were particularly concerned about clergymen taking oaths of allegiance to Hitler.

Meanwhile the minister of interior at Badan ordered the dissolution of a "pagan" sect, known as the "Society of German Heathens."

One of the grounds for the dissolution order was that the name of the sect was objectionable and politically undesirable.

U.S. Treasury Buying Halts Security Drop

Morgenthau Makes Fresh Effort to Clarify Silver Policy.

Order Issued June 14.

With Herman Oliphant, general counsel of the Treasury, standing at his elbow to explain the legal technical details of the situation, Mr. Morgenthau said that on June 14 he was directed by President Roosevelt to issue silver certificates, "against any and all silver bullion or standard silver dollars now in the Treasury not held for redemption of any outstanding silver certificates."

Mr. Morgenthau said this order, kept secret until the last week-end, applied to part of the silver acquired from foreign governments in payment of war debts a year ago, to newly mined silver acquired under the President's Executive order of last December and to other odds and ends of free silver held by the Treasury.

As previously explained, this silver altogether amounted to about 62,000,000 ounces, costing approximately $46,900,000. Since the monetary value of silver is $1.29 an ounce, the Treasury will issue about $80,000,000 in silver certificates against this white metal.

Letters Explain Policy.

So much for the Treasury's silver holdings as of June 14, which was several days prior to the effective day of the silver purchase act. The policy governing silver acquired since June 14 and to be acquired in the future was outlined in a letter from President Roosevelt to Mr. Morgenthau and in another letter from Mr. Morgenthau to Mr. Julian, both under yesterday's date.

Both letters were similar in substance. They provided for the issuance of silver certificates "in a face amount equal to the cost" of silver acquired since June 14 and that "such portion of the foregoing silver as is not held for the redemption of silver certificates shall be added to the monetary stocks of the United States and held as bullion in the general fund of the Treasury, but shall be carried on the books of the Treasury at cost," to quote from President Roosevelt's letter to Mr. Morgenthau.

How It Works Out.

These provisions apply to newly mined silver acquired since June 14, at a cost of 64½ cents an ounce, and to all silver purchased under something less than 50 cents an ounce, and to all silver acquired at 50.01 cents an ounce under the nationalization order.

Assuming that the average cost of this silver was 50 cents an ouce—Mr. Morgenthau said no computation of the average cost had been made—and assuming that the Treasury acquires 200,00,000 ounces of such silver, certificates for $100,000,000 will be issued in the next few months. Approximately 77,500,000 ounces of silver will be earmarked as the basis for this $100,000,000 currency issue. The remaining 122,500,000 ounces of silver acquired will be held as bullion in the general fund and carried on the books as worth $61,250,000.

At some subsequent time the Treasury might issue currency against the free silver bullion, and, if it does so to the full extent permitted, could use it as the backing for an additional $158,025,000 of silver certificates. Mr. Morgenthau, however, refused to discuss this possibility.

Orchardists Relying Upon Law of Nature

Medford, Oreg. (U.P.).—Oregon orchardists are hopeful that the law of nature, survival of the fittest, will rid pear and apple trees of moths.

Larvae parasites have been liberated in orchards in this district by entomologists.

The parasite, a black, four-winged, wasp-like insect, lays its eggs in codling moth eggs. The egg hatches quickly and the grub enters the body of the young codling moth worm before it leaves its own egg.

Codling moths lay their eggs on apple or pear blossoms. The eggs hatch, with the worms eating into the growing fruit.

way. Neumann denied driving while intoxicated, but admitted being on the wrong side of the road. The police questioned him closely.

Two Sisters at Bedside.

Alfonso and the youth's two sisters, Beatrice and Maria Cristina, were at the bedside. Alfonso telephoned Queen Victoria Eugenia, at their villa at Fontainebleu, outside Paris, telling her of their son's sudden death. She is expected tomorrow.

"I am broken hearted," the Infanta told the United Press. "Don Gonzalo's injuries were not severe, but because of his weak constitution the doctors were unable to operate. He did not have the strength to resist the loss of blood.

"He died in my arms. I can not forget I was driving the car, although the accident was not my fault. The death certificate declares my brother died of hemorrhage."

Funeral services probably will be Wednesday from Poertschach.

Eldest Son Also Suffers.

Hemophilia is a disease which causes excessive bleeding from the slightest injuries. It is inherited only by males and transmitted only by women. Prince Alfonso, the eldest son of the former monarch, has suffered from it all his life.

Although fourth son of Alfonso, Gonzalo was second in line to the Spanish throne, should there be a restoration of the monarchy. The Crown Prince married a Cuban commoner, and was thereby eliminated. Prince Jaime, second son, renounced his claims due to infirmities.

Thus, the third son, Prince Juan, 21, became Prince of the Asturias, and heir to the throne. He is a midshipman in the British navy. Gonzalo was a student at Louvain University, Belgium.

convicted by the tribunals set up to try ringleaders in the Nazi-led uprising, which resulted in the murder of Dollfuss. None of the nine was a Nazi.

No Shouts for Hitler.

When the sentences were pronounced, Maitzen paled and swayed as he was led to his seat, sobbing convulsively. The others were emotionless. None shouted "Heil Hitler!" as others have during these trials.

Court-martial of the policemen began August 8. Eight defendants pleaded not guilty, claiming the putsch was legal. The ninth admitted its "illegality," but said he participated for "national reasons."

The capital was uneasy, fearing rioting as a result of the death sentences.

Revolt Leader Fined $70,000.

Vienna, Aug. 13 (A.P.).—Because the Austrian government considers him largely responsible for the Nazi revolt in the province of Styria, Anton Apold, director of the Montan Steel Works, has been ordered to pay approximately $70,000 to the government. The Montan works are controlled by German interests, but numerous Americans hold stock.

An announcement stated that the money claimed of Apold will cover partially the cost of special security measures necessitated by the putsch in the province, and will compensate in a measure for damage caused by terrorists.

According to charges published here, employes of the steel company, one of the largest in Europe, comprised most of the force of Nazi Storm Troopers active in the vicinity of Leoben July 26.

'Boss' Pendergast Tightens Hold on Missouri's Politics

and his philosophy may be deduced from the following extracts:

"I've never bulldozed anybody and never let anybody bulldoze me."

"Newspapers, churches, reformers, narrow-minded fellows—they can't bulldoze me."

"I'm just an ordinary fellow that was able to keep his word."

"I've been slugged a great deal, but every time I've been slugged, I've slugged back."

"And my morals I claim to be as good as any bishop's, archbishop's, preacher's, reformer's—anybody's."

"If anybody's in distress we take care of them, especially in the poor wards. If they need coal, or clothes or their rent is overdue, we help them out—in and out of season. We never ask them about their politics. We know pretty well how they'll vote after we help them."

Same Old Formula.

And with a touch of pride, Boss Pendergast explains that he has "turned Kansas City from a hick town to a metropolitan city."

He has—in politics. His is the familiar formula—the usual philosophy. He and his brother Jim, now dead, got their start in the saloon business in the First Ward. Tom went into the wholesaling of liquor—was smart enough to get out before prohibition—and into mineral waters. But he is back in the liquor business again now.

However, the big money has been in contracting. Mornings Boss Pendergast customarily devotes to the Main street political office, afternoons to his Ready-Mixed Concrete Co., which is allied with paving and contracting firms. It goes nicely with ready-mixed politics. A few years ago a Kansas City mayor told a grand jury that coercion was used to compel the city and county to buy concrete from Boss Pendergast's company, but nothing ever came of that. As Boss Pendergast has often said, he sells good concrete, so why shouldn't they use it?

A Couple of Breaks.

By the familiar methods of machine building—and keeping his word—Boss Pendergast's power has expanded, but fate has played into his hand. For one thing, a State Supreme Court verdict, removing Kansas City police from State control, transferred this basket of plums into his lap. Then in 1932, when the Legislature failed to redistrict, the State's 13 Congressmen had to run at large. Boss Pendergast, controlling the biggest block of votes, had only to sit and wait for candidates to beat a path to his door.

Gradually, inevitably, with this voting power, his domain has widened far beyond the borders of Kansas City. Hence, the State Capitol is called Uncle Tom's Cabin. State and county officers give heed to his wishes. Judges sit on the bench or topple off, as he wills it. His concrete company and its affiliates are invariably bidders on all important work. Officials are free, of course, to defy him. He resents the meddlesome reformers, who are forever charging coercion and collusion. For Boss Pendergast, as indicated, considers his morals above reproach. He is a family man, goes home early, follows faithfully the early-to-bed-early-to-rise maxim. He drinks sparingly and attends mass on Sunday mornings.

Keeps Promises.

He was born in St. Joseph, went to St. Mary's College, was offered but refused a contract to play professional ball. His first political job was alderman from his First Ward. Then he became marshal of the county, later superintendent of streets when Jim Reed was mayor, just after the turn of the century. Always he kept his word. Slowly, steadily his influence grew. Today his machine would be the envy of far more famous city bosses.

Frequently the reformers, the churches, have gone on the warpath against him. In March of this year he faced one of the greatest threats to his power. The reformers, the "better element," of both Dmocratic and Republican parties, joined forces. They put into the field a fusionist ticket headed by Dr. A. Ross Hill, former president of the University of Missouri, for mayor. It was a bitter campaign, with much reformer oratory about millions in graft, about racketeering, about former convicts on the police force. The election was literally a battle. Four lay dead after it, many had been slugged. There was much violence at the polling booths. The Kansas City Star said editorially that the election was "a disgrace to Kansas City" and "a blot of Missouri."

But Boss Pendergast's candidate, Mayor Bryce B. Smith, won. He had 141,000 votes ot 81,00 for Dr. Hill.

The Pendergast machine also swept most of the rest of its ticket into council seats and judgeships. The vote piled up, thanks to the efficient Pendergast vote counters, even exceeded the totals of the 1932 landslide. And much of the credit for the Pendergast triumph over the fusionist reformers went to John Lazia, former convict and North Side factional leader in the Pendergast machine. Lazia's district rolled up a mighty majority to clinch the victory. Lazia was said to control 30,000 votes himself.

Yet Lazia did not live long to share in the glory. As he drove up to his hotel very late one night in July, with his wife, Marie, and a companion, Charles Carolla, who was driving the car, a machine gun rattled. "Get Marie out of here! Step on it, Charlie," cried Lazia as he crumpled up. He died in a hospital a few hours later. He did not know who shot him, he said, just before he died. One Joe Lusco, a rival North Side politician and 15 of his henchmen were arrested, but released. Nobody yet knows what the shooting was about—but there have been strong intimations of gangster rivalry, of attempts of outsiders to "muscle in." The killers were linked with Charles (Pretty Boy) Floyd, the Oklahoma outlaw.

Flowers for Lazia.

Anyway, his friends gave John Lazia a magnificient funeral—four truckloads of flowers, a $5,000 silver-lined copper casket. Boss Pendergast sent a profuse floral piece—an appropriate symbol—a wheel attached to an axle, the other wheel gone. Prominent officials attended. City Manager McElroy was there with his daughter, Mary, who had been kidnaped a year before and held until her father paid a $30,000 ransom.

There were others to carry on for John Lazia, and in the senatorial primary the other day, they rolled up a bigger vote than ever for the boss's candidate, Harry S. Truman, a county judge, hitherto obscure in politics. The St. Louis machine did its best for its candidate, Representative Jack Cochran, but Boss Pendergast's machine delivered enough votes to swamp all rivals. Truman was easily nominated. He will be the next senator from Missouri—unless Boss Pendergast changes his mind or unless there should be a real revolt. Senator Patterson, the Republican incumbent, has had the issue of "bossism" handed to him when he badly needed an issue.

And yet, how can the Mussolini of Missouri lose? Will New Deal reforms extesd to this extraordinary example of machine politics? There is no present sign of it. Boss Pendergast rules supreme on the Kaw. Missouri's Democratic votes, her delegates to Democratic conventions, are in his vest pocket. Moralists, reformers just can't bulldoze Boss Pendergast!

Wilson Won't Be Envoy to League

Hull Denies Rumor of Diplomatic Transfer

Secretary Hull flatly denied last night that there was a plan to designate Hugh Wilson, American Minister to Switzerland, as high commissioner to the League of Nations, the Associated Press reported.

Referring to printed statements, Mr. Hull said:

"I am wholly at a loss to account for the origin of the report to the effect that the State Department has decided on plans relating to additional or other functions for Minister Hugh R. Wilson or Consul Prentis B. Gilbert (also stationed at Geneva).

"There has been no change whatever in the status of these two gentlemen and none is under consideration."

Palmer Admits Identity; Feels Death Is Near

Texas to Return Outlaw for Execution; Trip, Escape Revealed.

Paducah, Ky., Aug 13 (A.P.).—Expressing the belief that he has only "30 days to live," a man whose identity had baffled authorities since his arrest last Saturday, today admitted to officers that he is Joe Palmer, notorious Southwest desperado, who escaped from the death house at the State Penitentiary at Huntsville, Tex., on July 22.

The prisoner was tentatively identified after his arrest as Alvin Karpis, St. Paul kidnap suspect. Confronted with prison classification records which, officers said, proved his identity, Palmer today talked freely, telling how he attended the funeral of Clyde Barrow, slain Southwest bandit, while officers searching for him stood by.

"I'm Palmer," the prisoner told officers. "I only got 30 days to live, so I might as well talk."

Activities Outlived.

With that he went into detail concerning his activities which ultimately led to his being sentenced to death for a killing during a break at Eastham State Prison farm in Texas on January 17, 1934.

Palmer said he did not know whether he killed a guard in the break, but admitted he was "shooting at him."

"They sentenced me to death," he said. "Railroaded me because they threatened witnesses that might have saved me."

While in Joplin, Mo., recovering from a head infection, Palmer said, he heard of the death of Barrow and Bonnie Parker, Barrow's accomplice in a series of crimes. He termed Barrow "the best friend I ever had."

"I wanted to go to his funeral and I did," he continued. "I got a pair of smoked glasses and went to Dallas. Out at the old French Cemetery, I stood in the mob while scores of police, all looking for me, roamed around. * * * Then I hit north, * * * was caught in St. Joseph, Mo., and sent back to Texas to be found guilty of murder and sent to the deathhouse."

Barrow, he said, helped him escape from prison in January.

"A guy had just gotten out," he said, "and Ray (Ray Hamilton, desperado) and I knew he was to plant some guns for us. Clyde and Bonnie knew it, too. * * * It was a dull, foggy morning when Ray and I edged to a ravine, got a gun apiece and went back toward two guards, Ollin Boseman and Major Crowson. We got to them, then covered them. Boseman * * * shot at me twice * * * but I escaped. Ray and I stepped back and then started shooting. Everybody was shooting, and we started to run. Two others with us. * * * As we got to the highway, Clyde stood up and opened fire with a machine gun. Pursuing guards fell back, we got into the car and got away."

Kidnaped Three Persons.

After his escape in January, Palmer said, he kidnaped three persons in Davenport, Iowa, before being captured.

In Davenport, Palmer told officers, an officer attempted to arrest him.

"I stuck a gun in him," the prisoner said, "took his gun, then said we were going for a ride. I walked the cop to a car in which sat another man. We all got in and I told the owner to drive west. Eight miles out of town we stopped a car driven by a doctor, took his machine and then headed for St. Joe. I kept the cop in the luggage compartment of the coupe until night, then let him sit on the other man's lap. I had tough luck; they nabbed me in St. Joe."

Pending arrival of Texas authorities, local officers placed a heavy guard over Palmer.

Palmer was arrested near a railroad yard here Saturday while sleeping. A pistol lay at his side. He said he had been without food or sleep for 92 hours when arrested.

At Huntsville today, a special grand jury convened to investigate the escape of Palmer, Hamilton and Irvin (Blackie) Thompson from the prison. As soon as Palmer is returned to Huntsville, he will be taken before a judge and resentenced to death. He may be electrocuted 30 days after he is resentenced.

Huntsville, Tex., Aug. 13 (A.P.).—Prison sentences totaling 15 years were imposed on James A. (Boss) Patterson, prison guard, by a jury which head him plead guilty today to charges of aiding three condemned desperadoes to escape from the State penitentiary here July 22.

The brief trial of Patterson, who admitted smuggling three pistols inside the prison walls, began immediately after the grand jury indicted him.

Austin, Tex., Aug. 13 (A.P.).—Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson granted a conditional pardon today to Henry Methvin, escaped Texas convict, because he furnished the information that led to the fatal ambush of Clyde Barrow and Bonnie Parker, Texas desperadoes, by Louisiana and Texas officers.

Methvin escaped from the Eastham Prison Farm January 16, 1934, with Raymond D. Hamilton, Joe Palmer and another convict under cover of a barrage of machine gun bullets laid down by Barrow. One guard, Major Crowson, was killed and another wounded.

Methvin's whereabouts could not be ascertained.

severely. Detective Sergt. Floyd Truscott and Sergt. Mansfield also were cut and bruised.

The injured were taken to the hospital, where only Mrs. Mansfield and DeWaard remained.

Notified of the accident, Inspector F. S. W. Burke, chief of detectives, went to Richmond and investigated the crash. He left shortly afterward with Mrs. Fontaine, Mansfield and Truscott, bound for Washington.

"It simply seems the accident was due to a slippery surface of the highway," Burke said.

Club Bombing.

Mrs. Fontaine will remain here until next Monday, when she again will be taken to Richmond to testify in Davis' trial. She was the alleged sweetheart of William B. Phillips, first of the Tri-State gang to fall before the law.

Club Forrest was bombed at about 2 a. m. Sunday. Situated about 10 miles from Richmond, it was closed for the season, and occupied only by two colored caretakers.

They said they were awakened by masked men, armed with guns, who gave them time to "head for the woods." A few minutes later there was a deafening roar and flames swept the structure.

Gang Aids Blamed.

Richmond police worked on the theory that underlings in the tri-state gang had blasted the place as a warning to those who might testify against Davis, and later against Robert Mais, 28, also held in the murder, and Arthur "Dutch" Misunas, indicted with Davis and Mais, who confessed having been present when the unsuccessful robbery resulted in Huband's death, and pleaded guilty to aiding and abetting the crime.

The club, Richmond officials asserted, had frequently been visited by the tri-state gang.

Davis' trial was postponed yesterday after Charles W. Moss, the gangster's attorney, said that the three missing defense witnesses would testify that his client was in New York at the time of the shooting last March. Judge John L. Ingram granted the postponement when Moss, a member of the Virginia House of Delegates, pleaded the witnesses were necessary to his case.

Surgeons to Put New Face on Maimed Youth

Beckley, W. Va. (U.P.).—Plastic surgeons have offered to give Garland Snuffer, 22, of Glenwhite, a new face without cost.

Snuffer was disfigured a month ago when a circular saw cut away his jaw, forehead, nose and teeth. Doctors saved his life and, within a few weeks, plastic surgeons will graft new skin and bones on his face.

Crash Victim.

MRS. HAZEL MANSFIELD, policewoman, injured yesterday in a traffic mishap while en route with detectives to the "tri-state" gang trial in Richmond. She was guarding Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Fontaine, a witness.

CCC Fire Fighter Killed.

Nevada City, Calif., Aug. 13 (A.P.).—William Mattison, 21, who came here a year ago from New York to join a CCC camp, was killed today while fighting a forest fire near the Delhi Mine, 20 miles from here. He was struck by a burning log.

Official Used Insull Stock

Executive Says He Pledged 4,000 Shares for Personal Loan.

Chicago, Aug. 13 (A.P.).—Marshall E. Sampsell, former Insull executive, today admitted in court that he used 4,000 shares of his company's stock to pledge as collateral for a personal loan.

At the same time he denied any intent to defraud and asserted that he took the stock only to protect Insull stockholders. He did not profit personally from the transaction, he maintained.

Half of the stock, shares of the Central Illinois Public Service Co., went to the Continental Illinois Bank, which was threatening to sell out stock in Middle West Utilities Co., which he had posted as collateral for a loan. The other 2,000 shares went to four Springfield banks, he testified.

From the Springfield banks he obtained funds to reduce the amount of a joint loan to him and Martin J. Insull by Chase National Bank, which was threatening to sell other Insull stock collateral, Sampsell related.

The transactions were at the request of Martin Insull, who feared that bank selling of Insull stock would undermine its market, he told the jury.

Fairfax Parley Called to Study Hog Feeding

Importing of Refuse Will Be Protested Before C. of C.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

Pigs and refuse will receive the attention of the Chamber of Commerce of Fairfax County tonight at a meeting in the Masonville Grange Hall.

County resident have no objection to the pigs, but when it comes to the refuse, opinions differ. Farmers want fat hogs for the market. To accomplish this they haul refuse from Washington for feed.

Citizens object to this practice, and claim efforts of the county board of supervisors to regulate the feeding on commercial hog farms so far has amounted to almost nothing.

Recently the county board of health reported to the supervisors that garbage feeding and its attendant conditions created a potential health menace. The supervisors proposed an ordinance prohibiting the feeding of refuse on commercial scale. A public hearing on the ordinance will be held at the supervisors' meeting on September 5.

The question to be debated tonight by the county trade body will be, shall garbage be imported into the county for the commercial feeding of hogs, and if so, under what circumstances?

State and county health officials are planning to hold an X-ray and tuberculosis clinic next week in the Fairfax County Courthouse, Dr. A. L. Carson, county health director, announces.

Dr. Charles Savage, of Richmond, State clinician, will have charge of the examinations. Mrs. Fannie Lou Seamons, county health nurse, will take registrations for the clinic. Children will be examined Monday and adults Tuesday, with the balance of the week devoted to re-examinations.

A joint meeting of the McLean Community Library Association and the Junior Library Association will be held at 2:30 p. m. today at the home of Mrs. Randolph Leigh on Chain Bridge road. Tomorow afternoon the weekly story-telling hour for children given by the association will be held in Dunham Hall at Lewinsville under direction of Miss Catherine Cunningham.

The 4-H Club Council of Fairfax County will meet tomorow at Fairfax to consider plans for the annual fall achievement day program and to choose a major project for the ensuing year. Reports of the State short course last month will be given by county delegates, Miss Margaret Bladen, Miss Alice Bready, Miss Louise Swartz, Miss Nancy Dove, Miss Helen Rector and Miss Katherine Edwards. The meeting will be under the direction of Miss Sarah E. Thomas, county home demonstration agent, and local club leaders.

Camp to Hold "Open House"

Entertainment Will Be Given at Good Will Thursday.

Community Chest contributors will have an opportunity to inspect one of the projects supported by the Chest when Camp Good Will in Rock Creek Park holds its "open house" next Thursday afternoon and evening.

Boys and girls of the camp are rehearsing for the entertainments, to be presented from 7 to 9 p. m. The boys will offer a playlet, "The Indian Village," while the girls have been practicing their skit in secret.

The camp accommodates about 160 children and 20 mothers from the poorer sections. One of its features is the baby shack and kindergarten, where mothers may leave their smaller children.

This is the second "open house" program which the Chest is sponsoring. The first was at St. Joseph's Home and School and attracted about 700 persons.

FERA Girls Sing Internationale; Deny Being Reds

Oberlin, Ohio, Aug. 13 (AP).—Oberlin citizens, some of whom are complaining because 50 girl students at a FERA school for unemployed office workers here have been singing "The Internationale," Communist anthem, probably were not around then the girls also sang "The Star-Spangled Banner."

That was the answer of one of the students, Miss Thelma Price, of Akron, Ohio, today, as reports that the girls are developing Communist leanings were subjected to an investigation by representatives of both the State and Federal Governments.

"Sure, we sang 'The Internationale,'" Miss Price asserted; "but we also sang 'The Star-Spangled Banner.'"

Asked directly if any of the girls are Communists, the girl retored, "I should say not!"

Both Miss Price and Dr. Orlie Pell, of New York, director of the FERA school, explained the girls happened to sing the Communist anthem because it was one of some 20 songs printed on a song sheet which was used by the Affiliated School for Office Workers, a privately supported institution which conducted classes here earlier this summer.

The official investigation of the reports of communistic leanings in the school's activities was ordered by FERA officials in Washington.

Vinson Reveals Air-Expansion Plan for Navy

New 5-Year Program Provides Big Increase in Planes, Pilots.

(Associated Press.)

A new five-year naval airs expansion program calling for a big increase in fighting aircraft and pilots is being drafted by Chairman Vinson of the House Naval Affairs Committee, in cooperation with the Navy Department for presentation to the next Congress.

The author of the Vinson "Treaty Navy" shipbuilding act yesterday told reporters the projected program would call for construction up to the 2,100 naval plans already authorized by Congress, but not appropriated for; development of the Philadelphia naval aircraft factory and an increase in the facilities of the Pensacola, Fla., Naval Aviation Training School.

"For National defense and reasons of economy we need a definite program for the increase of our naval air force," Mr. Vinson said. "We also need a large number of reserve planes for the aircraft carriers built and building."

Mr. Vinson said the original five-year naval expansion program, begun in 1927 and recently completed, had resulted in savings of $25,000,000 to the Government.

"Haphazard and sporadic purchasing of planes leads to waste and failure to keep abreast of rapid developments in fighting aircraft," he emphasized. "While the Navy now has around 1,000 planes, only about 400 are suitable for wartime combat service. We need more of the fighting types."

The development of the naval aircraft factory for the construction of airplane engines, he said, was made necessary "to keep the Government from being at the mercy of airplane engine manufacturers."

Questioned about the prospect for a successful outcome of the projected 1935 Naval Arms Conference, Mr. Vinson said:

"I hope it will be called and that it will be successful."

The Georgia Democrat said, however, he was not optimistic, and added:

"The world situation and economic conditions generally, in my opinion, do not justify Japanese claims that their ratio in capital ships should be increased. The 5-5-3 ratio at the Washington Arms Conference is just, and should be maintained."

France Fortifies Area Invaded by Germans

Paris, Aug. 13 (U.P.).—A government decree today ordered that the strongest fortification in Europe be erected between the Sambre and Oise Rivers—a natural passage through which the German army poured into France in 1914 before the first battle of the Marne.

The mining and railway center of Maubeuge, miles back of the frontier, will become a fortified center, planned to halt any German army that may break through the Belgian fortifications.

Troops Patrol Manchuria

United Press Official Tells of Widespread War Rumors on Return From Far East; Area Is Pictured as Armed Camp.

James H. Furay, United Press vice president in charge of foreign service, has just returned from a world tour, during which he crossed Manchukuo on the disputed Chinese Eastern Railway. He describes the military scene on the Siberian border in the following dispatch:

By James H. Furay.

New York, Aug. 13 (U.P.).—A traveler in the Far East and in Siberia hears many reports about the concentration of troops on both sides of the Manchurian-Soviet border but it is impossible in a hasty trip to verify any of these. For example, I was told in Mukden that the Soviets have 400,000 troops along the Soviet frontier from Manchuli east. On the other hand, I heard in Moscow that the Soviets have only about 240,000 men along that frontier.

I heard in Harbin that Japan has ten divisions of 14,000 men each in Manchuria and in Siberia I heard that Japan has more than 300,000 men in Siberia. Apparently what you hear depends on where you are when you hear it.

During the trip by rail through Manchuria and Siberia last month, soldiers were in evidence on both sides of the frontier in every station through which our train passed. In Manchuria, from Shanhaikuan, at the end of the Great Wall, northward, Japanese and Manchukuo soldiers in arms were in evidence at every station through which the train passed.

From Harbin to the Manuchurian border at Manchuli, at each station armed soldiers were on the platforms. Usually, in the middle of each platform was a squad of ten or more soldiers with rifles standing at attention and at intervals along the platform stood additional indicidual soldiers also at attention.

The troops in Manchuria, generally speaking, were in full field equipment and, in general, the whole railroad scene, particularly from Harbin toward the border, was military in aspect.

On the U. S. S. R. side of the border, in Siberia west from Manchuli, soldiers were also evident at the station platforms but many of these did not carry rifles and were not under arms. Most of the Soviet troops seen at the stations seemed to be merely curious spectators watching the Siberian express go by.

Evidently Japanese armored cars patrolled the line between Harbin and Manchuli. On the evening of July 8, the train on which I traveled from Harbin to Manchuli stopped for more than two hours at Nanshishan while the locomotive was sent ahead to bring in two armored cars filled with wet and shivering Japanese soldiers. The cars had borken down on the line and had to be towed back by our locomotive.

4 States Send Firemen for Valley Meeting

Waynesboro Convention Opens Today; Parade Awards Announced.

By W. H. Shryock.

Waynesboro, Pa., Aug. 13. — As delegates from four States gathered here tonight for the thirty-third annual convention of the Cumberland Valley Volunteers Firemen's Association, it was generally expected that W. H. Bush, of Winchester, Va., would be elected president for the ensuing year.

The convention opens tomorrow morning and ends Thursday night.

Nomination and election of officers will take place at the afternoon session tomorrow in the Strand Theater.

Bush at present is first vice president. He will succeed Elmer Gonso, of Greencastle, Pa., as president.

Other officers who are almost certain of reelection are W. H. Richter, Chambersburg, Pa., who has been treasurer of the valley association since it was organized in 1901, and Cletus L. Jacobs, of Waynesboro, Pa., who has been secretary since 1916.

Awards for the pajama parade to be held Wednesday evening will be: Most elaborate group, $50; largest group, $50; most comic group, $35; most elaborate band or drum corps, $35; most elaborate couple, $10; most elaborate individual, $5; most comic couple, $5; most comic individual, $3.

The prize list for the firemen and civic parade at 2:30 p. m. Thursday is as follows:

Best-appearing company in line of parade, $100; second, $50; company having largest number of uniformed men, including band or drum corps in line (not including darktown), $100; company coming greatest distance, having not less than 50 uniformed men, including band or drum corps, $150; best-equipped fire fighting apparatus in line, $50; best darktown fire company, not less than 25 men, $50; company having oldest fire-fighting apparatus in line, $25; best-appearing auxiliary in line, $75; second, $50; best-appearing band in line, $50; second, $25; best-appearing drum corps, $50; second, $25; hose race, $100; second, $50; hook and ladder race, $100; second, $50; drill contest, $100; second, $50; band contest, $100; second, $50; best-decorated auto in parade, $25; second, $15; third, $10; best float in parade, $50; second, $25; third, $25, and most-comic float, $20; second, $10.

Idaho Builds Airfields.

Boise, Idaho (U.P.).—With the completion of 32 fields now being constructed by CWA workers, Idaho will have 72 airport landing fields, A. C. Blomgren, director of aeronautics, reported. There are 42 landing fields in the State at present. Five years ago, in 1929, there were only six.

RFC Expects Chicago Bank To Repay Loan

Central Republic Is Now 61 Million in Arrears, Jones Reports.

(Associated Press.)

Chairman Jesse Jones expects the RFC to collect all of its $90,000,000 loan to the Central Republic Bank and Trust Co. if it takes 10 years.

Already, he said yesterday, $58,211,937 in principal and $3,000,000 in interest was in arrears on the loan made in June, 1932, and due six months later. But he added:

"We've collected more than $29,000,000, and that isn't so bad."

The Central Republic Bank has long been known as the "Dawes Bank" because it was once headed by former Vice President Charles G. Dawes. The loan to the institution, Jones asserted, was "well secured by good collateral."

"There remains," he explained, "either $14,000,000 or $28,000,000 in securities as well as other substantial property. We've got every bit of it in our hands. There's quite enough to secure the balance."

Jones said some of the substantial property consisted of notes by Chicago merchants and business men, adding that "we consider these good, too."

The liquidation process, the chairman asserted, would continue until it is completed.

"It may take five, it may take 10 years," he said. "We keep after those things until they're done."

He waved aside a suggestion that the $11,000,000 of Insull securities, put up by the bank, but since declared considerably depreciated, would endanger collection of the balance.

"That's only a part of the collateral," he said.

President Confers With Navy Chiefs

Reeves Pays Respects to Roosevelt.

Admiral Joseph M. Reeves, new commander in chief of the United States fleet, called on President Roosevelt yesterday to pay his respects, the Associated Press reported.

Intently interested in the Navy, the President talked at length with the admiral and his chief of staff, Rear Admiral Adolphus Andews.

Reeves said the President enjoyed thoroughly his recent trip to Honolulu and the West Coast aboard the cruiser Houston and mentioned the journey.

Bourbon-Parma Fortune Held Backing Return of Hapsburgs

Former Empress Fights Little Entente to Make Otto King.

London, Aug. 13 (AP).—The former Empress Zita, described by diplomats as a "fast worker," was said today by an authoritative source to be going ahead with her efforts to bring about restoration of the Hapsburg throne in Austria despite objections from the little entente nations.

Italian officials were said by the same source to have suggested that Zita go slowly in her negotiations on the continent looking toward making her son, the Archduke Otto, a king.

While British official quarters declined to discuss the monarchical plans, they ridiculed reports that Otto, now in Sweden, might try to marry a Swedish princess.

"An Italian princess still remains the probable consort if his plans for the throne ever get anywhere," one diplomat said.

Another high source described Otto's present journey in the Scandinavian countries as mere "dust in the eye to mask Zita's real negotiations in Italy, France and elsewhere."

In Brussels an authoritative source disclosed today that plans of Otto to attend a family meeting in Italy were changed after newspapers had revealed his destination when he started out from his Belgian castle last week.

High diplomatic sources here said that the Bourbon-Parma family fortune, estimated at $100,000,000, is being used to back Otto.

Zita's negotiations were reported to have been bitterly rejected by the little entente nations—Rumania, Yugoslavia and Czechoslovakia.

Representatives of those countries, London has heard, asserted that they feared an Austro-Hungarian monarchy meant danger to their independence.

Hoboes Demand A Cent a Mile Railroad Fare

Cincinnati, Aug. 13 (AP).—The hoboes are tired of riding the rods.

In annual convention assembled—the term is many degrees more formal than the convention—the "Hoboes of America" suggested today that railroad coach fares be cut to a cent a mile.

"Y'see," said Jeff Davis, "king of hoboes" and president of the organization, "that way we wouldn't have to hobo."

The action followed the glowing account of Henry Fambry, a hobo delegate to the back-street convention hall, of railroading in Europe, where some nations have first-class fares and coaches for those who are snooty about how they travel, second-class for those less particular, and third-class for those that can take their traveling without any frills.

But perhaps the hoboes saw the coming of universal stream-lining, too. Jess Davis read about, and saw pictures, of a stream-lined train some months ago.

"How," he moaned, "is anybody going to ride the rods on that thing?"

John E. Bayliss Services Today

Virginia Constable Burial in Lincolnia Cemetery.

Funeral services for Constable John E. Bayliss, 47, of Fairfax County, Va., who died at the Alexandria Hospital, Sunday, following a short illness, will be held at 2 p. m. today from the Lincolnia Southern Methodist Church, Fairfax County, and will be conducted by the Rev. W. H. Gray. Interment will be in the Lincolnia Cemetery.

Bayliss was a well-known resident of Fairfax County, and also had served as deputy forest warden for a number of years. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Bayliss; two daughters, Edith and Gladys Bayliss, and one son, Robert Bayliss.

Army Buys 61 Ambulances.

A contract for 61 light steel ambulances has been awarded by the War Department to the Chevrolet Motor Co., it was announced yesterday. Fifty-nine of the trucks, costing $975 each, are for the CCC and two for the Panama Canal.

Snapping Turtle Takes Sun Baths To Regain Health

The Bureau of Fisheries' 50-year-old boarder, Oscar, the snapping turtle, is taking sun bath rest cures these days.

Oscar was given the run of one of the Commerce Department Building courts yesterday after experts found his health was failing from lack of fresh air in the bureau aquarium located in the basement of the big building.

For the last two years Oscar has been cooped up in a tank with several of his brothers and a number of small alligators. Prior to this, he had certain fresh-air privileges when the bureau was located in the Mall, between Sixth and Seventh streets.

42 Per Cent Of R.F.C. Loans Now Repaid

Nearly $1,500,000,000 for Relief Will Not Be Returned.

(Associated Press.)

Asserting that it was indicative of general business conditions, Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the RFC, announced yesterday that 42 per cent of all loans made by the corporation had been repaid.

He said total repayments of $1,770,162,969 left outstanding $2,415,497,839 of repayable loans. Banks, he said, have paid back 64 per cent of all money borrowed. Almost all the remaining 36 per cent, he continued, represents loans to banks which closed after the loans were made or loans made to closed banks for liquidation purposes.

The corporation has actually authorized loans and other disbursements totaling $7,195,297,908, but of this sum $799,575,689 has been allotted to States for relief either through the old relief act or the emergency relief administration and $673,969,240 to other Government agencies. These last two expenditures are not expected by corporation officials ever to be returned.

In addition to disbursements for relief and to Government agencies, $1,030,114,561 remains available to borrowers and banks which have agreed to sell preferred stock and capital notes and $505,977,611 more of the authorizations have been canceled.

Since the new law permitting direct loans to industry went into effect Mr. Jones said 88 loans for a total of $7,003,600 had been authorized. Because of lack of security or apparent prospects of repayment, he asserted, the majority of the applications for direct industrial loans had been turned down. Prior to the new arrangement the corporation authorized 184 loans for a total of $19,226,500 under the mortgage loan company plan.

Up to yesterday, the corporation had approved 3,077 loans to 2,347 closed banks authorizations totalling $966,926,000 and actual disbursements $599,546,000. Of the undisbursed $367,380,000, approximately $91,000,000 will go to the First National Bank of Detroit, Mich., when final arrangements are made for liquidating that institution.

Retailers Meet August 21.

Culbertson on Bridge

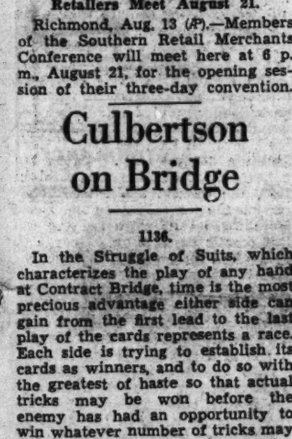
In the Struggle of Suits, which characterizes the play of any hand at Contract Bridge, time is the most precious advantage either side can gain from the first lead to the last play of the cards represents a race. Each side is trying to establish its cards as winners, and to do so with the greatest of haste so that actual tricks may be won before the enemy has had an opportunity to win whatever number of tricks may be the goal set for them by the inviolable limits of the final contract. The element of time is not so important when there is a trump suit as when there are no trumps, for every little trump card will finally prevent the loss of a trick even to an Ace, while at notrump only high honors can prevent the opponents from winning tricks in their best suit. The Opening lead is therefore of the greatest importance, since it is one additional time unit in the race to establish winning cards. That is the reason—and a very good reason it is—why it is usually important to lead the longest suit when the opponents are playing the hand at notrump. If there is sufficient time, the small cards of that suit, even though they be deuces and treys, will soon have outlasted the powerful Aces and Kings, and will win tricks unopposed.

In the interesting hand below, the right to lead first made a difference in the play of the hand of two tricks, and caused a game contract to be defeated instead of being made with an overtrick.

South, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
3NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

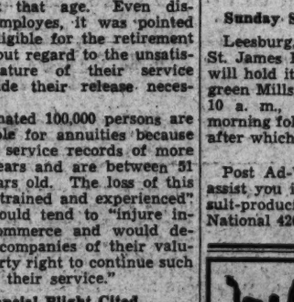
South's Opening three-no-trump bid was somewhat ill advised—a two-club bid would have been much sounder. But South felt that the hand would surely be played at three notrump in any case, unless North was strong enough to make a Slam try; and being a bold, overaggressive player, he boomed out the game bid immediately.

West opened the five of spades, and by this play settled South's fate, for the element of time was too great for even South's galaxy of honors to overcome. Three times South, in order to establish his winning tricks in hearts, diamonds and clubs, was forced to relinquish the lead to one of West's Aces. On the Opening lead South was reduced to a double spade stopper. He led the club King, and West, winning the Ace, played another spade, which left South with only one remaining stopper. South took his three club tricks and played a diamond, whereupon West won the Ace and drove out South's last spade stopper. Now South could win two tricks in diamonds, which made eight in all that he had won, but when he led the heart King and established two winning hearts for himself, he found that he was forced to discard them without gain on West's two remaining spades.

The Opening lead was the decisive tempo allowing the contract to be defeated one trick. Had South made the first lead, there would have been insufficient time for West to establish his fourth and fifth spades and South would have won ten tricks instead of eight.

Tomorrow's Hand.

South, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



This hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

150 Railroads Ask Court To Rule on Retirement Act

plies to certain persons not employes."

The "real ends and aims" of the act, it was charged, were to provide for "satisfactory retirement of aged employes," and to "make possible greater employment opportunity and more rapid advancement of employes," neither of which, the roads said, "is within any power delegated to Congress by the Constitution."

"Unlawful" Burdens Charged.

Many charges of "unlawful" burdens on the railroads by the terms of the act were cited. Among these were interference with management, discrimination against the plaintiffs, and deprivation of "their property and liberty of contract without due process of law and the taking of property without just compensation."

"The act discloses on its face that it is experimentation at the expense of plaintiffs, the petition recited. "Furthermore, it authorizes the board to require of plaintiffs contributions for administration and research, without limiting the amount—all in violation of the fifth amendment."

There are approximately 200,000 "white collar" workers who come under the provisions of the act, although they do not work in Interstate Commerce. Their salaries total about $300,000,000 annually.

In addition, there are 9,500 whose ages of 70 years, or more, would require their retirement now. They will contribute only $250,000 to the fund, but will draw, it was estimated, not less than $9,000,000 the first year, and not less than $74,000,000 to the "termination of annuities, two-thirds of which will be paid by the carriers.

Covers Former Employes.

Employes who have left the plaintiff's service within a year of approval of the act come within its protection. There are 50,000 such persons and the carriers are required to contribute to annuities for them, though when the act was passed none was employed.

One million men and women are employed now and the roads complained that the act requires them to contribute annuities to them. These will become eligible for retirement pay at 65, regardless of how long they have been out of the service at that age. Even discharged employes, it was pointed out, are eligible for the retirement pay "without regard to the unsatisfactory nature of their service which made their release necessary."

An estimated 100,000 persons are now eligible for annuities because they have service records of more than 30 years and are between 51 and 65 years old. The loss of this group of "trained and experienced" persons would tend to "injure interstate commerce and would deprive the companies of their valuable property right to continue such persons in their service."

Financial Plight Cited.

As indicative of the financial plight of many of the carriers, the petition recited there are 40,000 miles of railroad in the hands of receivers or trustees in bankruptcy. Fifty-five Class 1 companies (those having operating revenues of $1,000,000 or more annually) failed to earn operating expenses and taxes in 1932; 34 failed to earn operating expenses and taxes in 1933, and 33 failed to earn those items in the first half of this year.

Class 1 roads had an estimated worth of $22,074,000,000 as of 1932, and their average net operating income for that year was 1.48 per cent. In 1933 the figures on value were dropped $274,000,000, on which there was an average net operating earning of 2.18 per cent. "Even these low earnings were possible only through drastic retrenchment in expenditures and the exercise of the utmost economy consistent with safety," the petition said.

As an added item of expense, the petition showed, restoration of former pay scales will cost the roads $165,000,000 more for labor each year, while the heavy inroads made by buses hauling either freight or passengers has made it impossible to seek additional revenues through increased rates.

Injunction Asked.

The petition asked that the Railroad Retirement Board, and its members, Murray W. Latimer, John T. Williamson and Lee M. Eddy, be enjoined from "making any order and for instituting any action, or taking any steps toward the institution of any actions, proceedings or prosecutions designed to compel plaintiffs or their officers, or any of them, to make any advance payment or other payment required by the act."

It also suggested that the board members be enjoined from compelling the companies to "assemble, compile or furnish any of the information and records required, or which may be required to be furnished under the act. The present status of the carriers and their employes is to be maintained pending the hearing tomorrow, at which time the request for a temporary restraining order is scheduled to come up.

Attorneys representing the railroads were Sidney R. Prince, Robert V. Fletcher, Jacob Aronson, Edward S. Jouett, Dannie F. Lyons and Emmett E. McInnis.

Brewery Code Test in Court Won by U. S.

Control of Signs Cost Upheld in Schlitz Co., Case at Chicago.

The Federal Government was successful in its first court battle involving a violation of the code for the brewing industry, it was announced yesterday by Director Joseph H. Choate, jr., of the Federal Alcohol Control Administration.

Mr. Choate revealed that Federal Judge Walter Lindley, in Chicago, had signed a decree in favor of the Government and against the powerful Schlitz Brewing Co., of Milwaukee.

The decree compels the Schlitz Co. to dismantle 22 neon advertising signs which it had placed in retail establishments in Chicago and enjoins it against installing 100 additional signs which it had ordered.

A statement by the Federal Alcohol Control Administration, explaining the issues involved, said under the code no member of the brewing industry "shall furnish signs costing more than $100 in any one calendar year to any retail outlet, with the exception that signs costing $400 may be installed, provided the same were under uncancellable orders prior to the effective date of the code, December 5, 1933."

The administration charged the contract for the purchase of the signs (by the Schlitz Co.) provided that the purchase price would be $385, and the actual installed price was substantially in excess of $400.

Mr. Choate said the furnishing of expensive signs prior to prohibition had been one "pernicious form" of competition, and he added:

"A further evil, likewise attacked by the same provision of the codes, was the control and domination of retail outlets through such forms of unfair competition by the distributors of alcoholic beverages, particularly products of the brewing industry."

The decree entered against the Schlitz Co., the director said, serves notice that such "evils" can be prevented.

Reno, Nev., Aug 13 (AP).—Mrs. Marie Bungay Detmer today won a divorce from Julian F. Detmer, retired New York Woolen Company executive. Details of her charges of extreme cruelty were not made public. They married September 16, 1933 in New York City.

Truck War Peace Rests on Strikers

Revised Plan Approved by Employers.

Minneapolis, Aug. 13 (AP).—Mediators in the truck drivers' strike today pinned their hopes for an early settlement upon submission of a revised peace plan to strike leaders.

The Rev. Francis Haas and E. H. Dunnigan, Federal mediators, said they would give the latest settlement offer to strike leaders. It was approved by the employers' advisory committee this morning.

Provisions of the projected settlement were not disclosed, though spokesmen for the employers said it probably represented the last concessions the truck owners would make.

Strike leaders rejected an earlier peace plan today because, they claimed, it allowed employers to select employes from a "preferred" list.

Race Ban in Primary Upheld by Texas Judge

Sherman, Tex., Aug. 13 (AP). United States District Judge Randolph Bryant today held that the Texas State Democratic executive committee had the right to prescribe qualifications for its members, and that its action last year in passing a resolution confining voters in the Democratic primary to those of the white race was valid.

He ruled in the case of John Johnson, colored, of Denison, who sought an injunction against the county executive committee to restrain them from interfering with Negroes voting in the party primary.

Fire Causes $100,000 Loss in Mill Village

Sacramento, Calif., Aug 13 (AP).—Fire of undetermined origin today destroyed most of the business section of All River Mills, Shasta County, wiping out 24 buildings with an estimated loss in excess of $100,000. No casualties were reported. The town has a population of about 200.

Mrs. Dorothy Sands Divorced.

Reno, Nev., Aug. 13 (AP).—Mrs. Dorothy P. Sands obtained a divorce here today from Edward Van V. Sands, member of a socially prominent New York family. She charged extreme cruelty. They married August 26, 1932 in Yuma, Ariz.

FHA Ceremony To Open Drive

Program at Bank Today Will Be Staged by Officials.

The Federal Housing Administration today will formally open its National home modernization campaign which has for its objective a building revival of approximately $1,500,000,000 affecting 13,000,000 homes.

A three-minute ceremony at 4 p. m. in a local bank will symbolize the official opening. The program calls for a skit, in which a would-be borrower and a banker will take part, with the aim of showing how a property owner may obtain from $100 to $2,000 to repair or extend his home, farmhouse, or factory.

The program will be sponsored jointly by the American Bankers Association, the District chapter of the association, and the Housing Administration. In all probability the ceremony will be broadcast over the principal radio networks.

Participants will include Robert Fleming, executive vice president of the American Bankers Association; Frederick P. H. Siddons, secreary of the American Securities; James A. Moffett, housing administrator, and Albert L. Deane, deputy housing administrator.

The newly appointed regional and State directors were reported yesterday to have started setting up their respective headquarters under the joint direction of the National Emergency Council and the FHA.

The office of Administrator Moffett said it had received reports from many cities, including Washington, revealing that banks have already received applications for loans and numerous inquiries. The loans will be insured up to 20 per cent by the Federal Government.

Fredericksburg Fair Opens September 11

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—The Fredericksburg Fair will be held September 11 to 14, H. K. Sweetser, secretary of the fair association, announced.

It will be the first major fair here since 1930. None was held last year, and only small-scale exhibitions in 1931 and 1932. The fair will include horse racing and a carnival.

Wife of Movie Writer Sues for $1,500 Month

Los Angeles, Aug. 13 (AP).—Alimony of $1,500 monthly was asked by Louise G. Garrett, in a suit for divorce today, from Oliver H. P. Garrett, motion-picture writer. She charged cruelty.

Mrs. Garrett asked a share of community property she fixed at $138,000, including a $60,000 home in Santa Monica. Garrett formerly worked on the Boston Traveler, New York Evening Sun and the New York Evening Globe. He came to Hollywood three years ago. The Garretts have a son, Peter, 10. Mrs. Garrett asked custody of the child.

Coast Guards Search Lake for Missing Boat

Chicago, Aug. 13 (AP).—The United States Coast Guard today began a search for the sloop Anita at Frankfort, Mich., which left that port August 8 and has not been since reported.

The crew consisted of two boys, John Sesel and Bert Miller, of Milwaukee. They had intended to cross Lake Michigan to Milwaukee. Guardsmen expressed the fear the boat had been wrecked in recent storms.

Jackson Is Due To Leave Race In Md. Today

Expected to Withdraw as Candidate, and Back Gov. Ritchie.

Baltimore, Aug. 13 (Spl.).—The long anticipated withdrawal of Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore, as a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination is scheduled for tomorrow, it was reported in political circles here late today.

It has been no secret in recent weeks that the Mayor was planning to bow himself out of the campaign in deference to the fifth-term aspirations of Gov. Ritchie. The only question was when the withdrawal would be announced. The Mayor's political lieutenants were informed weeks ago Mr. Jackson was ready to drop out.

Tomorrow, Mr. Jackson is scheduled to break his silence and urge the voters of the State to back Gov. Ritchie's renomination.

Conley vs. Ritchie.

The Mayor was the second Democratic candidate to file for the gubernatorial race, Dr. Charles H. Conley, of Frederick, being first. Gov. Ritchie was next, and last was George L. Radcliffe, the Public Works Administrator for the Tenth Region. Mr. Radcliffe, the last to file, was the first to withdraw.

Mr. Jackson's withdrawal will leave Dr. Conley as the only candidate to oppose Ritchie. Dr. Conley is now on the Eastern Shore lining up votes in preparation for the primary election on September 12.

Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough, one of the Republican candidates for the gubernatorial nomination, also is planning a tour of the Eastern Shore. He will leave tomorrow for Elkton, where he will be met by State Senator Wallace Williams and other Cecil County leaders.

He will spend tomorrow and Wednesday in Kent, Cecil, Queen Annes and Caroline Counties, and Thursday he will go to Wicomico County.

Silent Campaign.

And he plans, it is said, to continue his "silent campaign"—that is, his policy of making no public speeches. Instead, he confers with as many county leaders as he can contact, and greets the rank and file of voters in hotel lobbies, on street corners and in offices.

An unexpected development in the Republican field today was the indorsement by Harry W. Nice, another gubernatorial candidate, of the candidacy of former Mayor George W. Henderson, of Cumberland, for the nomination for attorney general.

Mr. Henderson is lined up with the opposition ticket headed by H. Webster Smith, but the Nice forces were known to have been angling for him before Mr. Henderson cast his lot for the Smith group. After various attempts to select a candidate for attorney general, the Nice ticket permitted the dead line for the entry of candidates into the primary campaign to pass, and today the announcement was made that the Nice forces favor Mr. Henderson.

Powell a Candidate.

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—Harold A. Powell, of this city, has filed with the Alleghany County Board of Election Supervisors as a candidate for the Democratic State Central Committee.

Mr. Powell is president of the local Federation of Shop Crafts, American Federation of Labor. He is a boilmaker in the employ of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and has been an active Democratic worker for many years.

Crisfield, Md., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—With the filing of more candidates in the past six days for the various offices in Somerset County on the Democratic and Republican tickets, the total jumped from 24 to 38.

Those who filed recently are: For Legislature, Thomas Simpkins, Mount Vernon; Glenwood Evans, Smiths Island; Mayme Collins, Crisfield; all Democrats. For county treasurer, A. Roy Woodland, Marion Station, Democrat. Orphans' Court, W. Ray Gibbons, Princess Anne, Democrat. County commissioner, Charles H. Layfield, Westover, Democrat, and John R. Corbin, Crisfield, Republican. Associate judge, John B. Robins, Crisfield, Republican. State's attorney, Kirk V. Maddrix, Crisfield, Republican. State central committee, Charles F. Richardson, Wallace M. Quinn, Edward R. Dize, of Crisfield, and Ralph W. Powell, Princess Anne, all Democrats. Delegate to State convention, James E. Byrd, Princess Anne, Democrat.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—State Senator Ridgley P. Melvin (Democrat), Anne Arundel County, today filed certificate of his candidacy for renomination.

Indications are that he will not have opposition within his party. Thus far, Republicans have not put forth a candidate.

Man Drinks Case Of Beer in Hour, Fulfilling Boast

Clarksburg, W. Va., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—The beer output would be much larger if there were more people with the capacity of Russell Haymond, a glass worker here.

Haymond told George Taylor he could drink a case of 3.2 beer within an hour. George took him up.

Ten witnesses with watches gathered around and in exactly 58½ minutes Haymond had consumed the contents of 24 bottles.

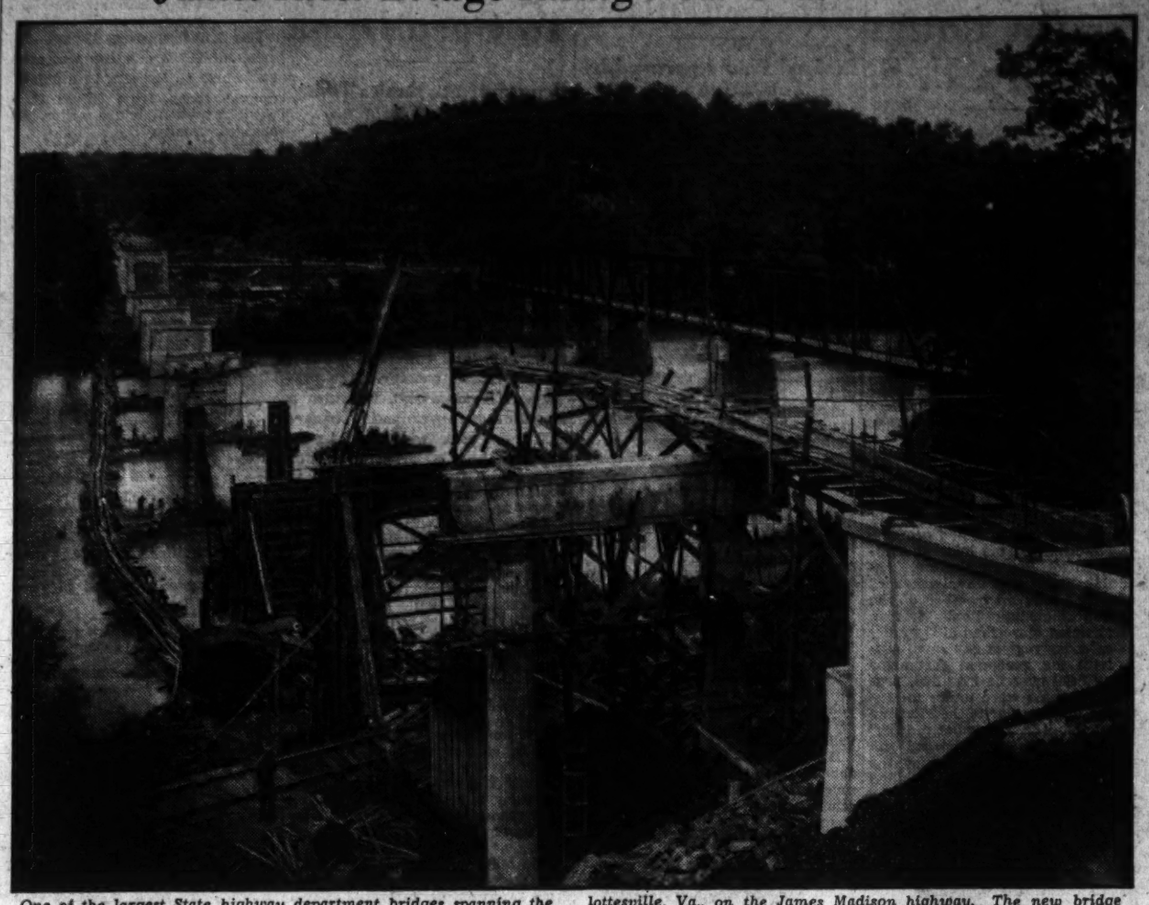
Prisoner Caught Near Hagerstown

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—Local authorities last night arrested Orville C. Everhart, who escaped from Constable C. Carbaugh, after allegedly hitting the officer over the head with a rock, and will return him to Pennsylvania police.

Everhart was caught near Cearfoss, across the Mason and Dixon Line in Washington County, Md.

Everhart was being returned from Welsh Run, Pa., where he was given a hearing, when he leaped from the officer's machine and headed across a field, the officer gave chase and was knocked unconscious by a stone said to have been thrown by Everhart. He is wanted in Pennsylvania on a larceny charge.

James River Bridge Rising Near Charlottesville



One of the largest State highway department bridges spanning the upper James River is under construction at Bremo Bluff, near Charlottesville, Va., on the James Madison highway. The new bridge will eliminate the difficult crossing on the old railroad bridge, right.

Tri-State Elks Open Meeting At Hagerstown

13 Lodges, in Maryland, D. C. and Delaware, Are Represented.

By J. E. Hager.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 13. — A thousand or more Elks, delegates to the fourteenth annual convention of the Tri-State Elks' Association, were welcomed to Hagerstown today by Mayor Irvin M. Wertz.

The Elks, members of 13 lodges in the district, came from Maryland, Delaware and the District of Columbia. Responses to the Mayor's welcome were made by J. Morris Guider, Hagerstown, president of the Tri-State Association, and P. Parke Geiger, jr., exalted ruler of the local lodge.

Preparations are being made by the general committee for a crowd of 40,000, of which 6,000 will be Elks, for the parade Wednesday evening. This parade and the purple bubble ball Wednesday night will close the convention.

Among the visiting Elks who arrived today were District Deputy Grand Exalted Ruler John Lynch, Washington, and past president of the association; James P. Swing, Cambridge; Alfred Gaver, Frederick, and John J. Powell, Wilmington, Del.

A visit to the Antietam Battlefield consumed most of this afternoon, while tonight an athletic carnival with a number of boxing and wrestling matches and vaudeville were held in the fair grounds auditorium. The Y. M. C. A. junior boys band gave a concert from a bandstand erected in the public square.

Officers for the next fiscal year will be elected tomorrow morning, following a club breakfast, while an ox roast will be held beginning at noon at the fair grounds. A style review and cabaret show will be staged tomorrow night.

Lodges in the district are Maryland — Baltimore, Annapolis, Frederick, Frostburg, Salisubry, Hagerstown, Cumberland, Havre de Grace, Towson, Crisfield and Cambridge; Washington and Wilmington, Del.

Guns Again Boom At Fort McHenry

Baltimore Celebrates 300th Anniversary of State.

Baltimore, Aug. 13 (AP).—Fort McHenry, during whose bombardment in 1812 Francis Scott Key received inspiration to compose "The Star-Spangled Banner," again was bombarded last night.

It came as a part of Baltimore's celebration of Maryland's 300th anniversary. Modern battleships of the United States Navy, theoretically ripped the ancient fort to pieces with fake shells. An estimated 100,000 persons jammed the city's waterfront to watch the celebration. Joining in were hundreds of boats which came for the series of boat races run during the last several days.

Ship's searchlights pierced low-hanging clouds and multicolored rockets were shot high into the air.

Virginia Wheat, Rye, Barley And Potato Forecast Higher

Yield of Oats, Tobacco, Cotton, Hay and Fruit, However, Is Expected to Be Smaller Than That Last Year.

Richmond, Aug. 13 (AP).—The official crop production forecast for Virginia today said the yield of wheat, rye, barley, white potatoes and sweet potatoes this year probably will be greater than that of 1933.

The same report forecast a reduction in the yield of oats, tobacco, cotton, hay and fruit, as compared with last year.

The report, compiled by Henry M. Taylor, Federal-State agricultural statistician, said crop conditions generally improved during July in all parts of the State except the Shenandoah Valley, and a few counties in the northern district.

The greatest change was reported in the southwest, where rains caused rapid improvement following the drought during May and June.

In the central part of the State dry weather caused a decline in crop conditions but since the heavy rains late in July there has been rapid improvement, Mr. Taylor said.

Some Yields Still in Doubt.

The production of many crops, such as corn, peanuts, cotton and some of the tobacco, still depends on weather conditions during the next six weeks.

The average yield of what was reported by Mr. Taylor to be 14 bushels per acre, compared with last year's yield of 13.5 bushels and the ten-year average of 14.9 bushels. Total production was estimated at 7,784,000 bushels, compared with 7,425,000 bushels harvested last year and the 5-year average of 9,582,000 bushels. The best yields are reported from the Shenandoah Valley. Yields were above 1933 in the northern, western, central and eastern districts, and less than last year in the southwestern, southern and southeastern districts.

The condition of corn improved considerably in the Southwestern district, Mr. Taylor said, but declined in the Shenandoah Valley and a few northern counties due to dry weather.

Corn Aided by Rains.

In the area around Lynchburg and Farmville corn was injured by dry weather, but heavy rains in the latter part of the month caused considerable improvement in this section, the report said.

The total corn production was estimated to be 34,680,000 bushels, or slightly less than last year's crop of 36,918,000 bushels, but is above the five-year average of 33,611,000 bushels. The corn crop for the United States forecast at 1,607,108,000 bushels is one of the smallest on record. Last year production was 2,343,000,000 bushels and the five-year average is 2,516,307,000 bushels.

The condition of late hay crops, especially cowpeas and soybeans, was reported as improved late in July and in most sections these crops were said to be promising excellent yields. Owing to the dry weather in May and June the yield of clover and timothy, which supply the greater part of the hay crop, was reduced. The total production of all hay is estimated to be 854,000 tons, compared with 992,000 tons last year and the five-year average of 921,000 tons.

Pastures Improving.

The condition of pastures was reported to have declined during July because of dry weather in many sections. The late July rains, however, were said to have caused great improvement, especially in the central part of the State. Pastures were reported poor in the Shenandoah Valley and a few northern counties, but in the eastern and southwestern districts pastures are in splendid condition.

Cotton plant growth was rapid in July and on August 1 the condition indicated a better than average yield, Mr. Taylor said. Total production was forecast at 35,000 bales, compared with 37,000 bales harvested last year. The total cotton crop for the United States was estimated at 9,195,000 bales, compared with 13,047,000 bales last year and 14,675,000 bales the five-year average. Unusually hot, dry weather in Oklahoma, Texas and western Arkansas curtailed production in those States, Mr. Taylor said.

The yield of early commercial potatoes was reported to have turned out unusually well and total shipments through August 4 amounted to 16,542 cars, compared with 9,819 cars shipped for the entire season last year. The total production of potatoes, including the early and late crops, is forecast at 13,803,000 bushels, compared with 8,649,000 bushels last year and 15,989,000 bushels the five-year average.

Apple Yield Smaller.

The Virginia commercial apple crop based on August 1 conditions was estimated to be 1,680,000 barrels, compared with the short crop of 1,750,000 barrels last year and the five-year average production of 2,680,000 barrels, Mr. Taylor reported.

The report said the number of apples on the trees this year is considerably less than last year, but owing to the poor quality of last year's crop, a much smaller percentage than usual was sold as fresh fruit.

The quality of this year's crop, he said, is unusually good, and there has been practically no injury from scab and aphis. In some sections, however, there has been some worm damage.

Weather conditions were reported to have been favorable except in the Shenandoah Valley, where dry weather during July retarded growth.

Good Rains Needed.

In the north Valley section growth of apples was retarded by the dry weather and good rains were said to be needed in August to secure average size. The quality of the crop is excellent, the report said, and a much higher percentage than usual of the crop will be packed. The commercial production, or that part of the crop sold as fresh fruit, was expected to equal or exceed that of last year.

With the exception of Loudoun County, where there was very little rain in July, the growing conditions in the north Piedmont section have been favorable and apples were reported to have made satisfactory progress. A few hailstones injured some crops, but generally the quality is reported as unusually good. The set of fruit in this district was said to be not as heavy as last year, but owing to the better quality the commercial crop might be larger than last year.

Piedmont apples made satisfactory progress in all counties in this district except Amherst and parts of Nelson, where there was not sufficient rain to promote proper growth. The size of the apples was generally above average and while there was some scab and worm injury, the quality was reported to be good. Hail injury, Mr. Taylor said, probably has been heavier than usual in this district.

Tobacco prospects on August 1 were very promising, and both the yield per acre and quality are expected to be above average, Mr. Taylor said.

The total production of all types was forecast at 78,745,000 pounds, compared with 97,046,000 pounds harvested last year, and 114,122,000 pounds the average production for the five years, 1927-31.

Mr. Taylor said that the crop is much earlier than usual and growers had commenced to harvest during the last week of July. With the exception of hail damage in a few sections, the quality of the tobacco this year will be unusually good, he said.

Fire-Cured Output.

Fire-cured production, based upon the August 1 condition, was forecast at 18,400,000 pounds, compared with the 1933 drop of 24,928,000 pounds and the five-year average of 24,587,000 pounds. In the western part of the fire-cured district growth was retarded by dry weather, but late July rains resulted in rapid improvement. A heavy yield of good quality tobacco is now expected, Mr. Taylor said, although final production and quality will largely depend upon weather conditions during August.

The statistician said the outlook for the burley crop is not as favorable as for the other types because of an unfavorable season. This type was reported to have improved during the latter part of July and with favorable weather in August the yield was expected to be up to the ten-year average.

Production based upon the August 1 condition was forecast at 8,288,000 pounds, compared with the large 1933 crop of 13,390,000 pounds and the five-year average of 6,692,000.

U. S. Revenues From Virginia Exceed Allotments During '34

Virginia is among the three South Atlantic States where more internal revenue collections per capita for 1934 were paid into the United States Treasury than was received in per capita emergency grants and allotments to June 30.

The State paid $50.63 per capita for the year so far as compared to the $45.37 per capita repaid in emergency grants and allotments.

Delaware and North Carolina are the other two South Atlantic States with a similar record. Delaware paid $75.57 as against the $31.74, and North Carolina led with $18.09.

Other South Atlantic States, with their collections per capita and their emergency grants and allotments, are:

Maryland	$24.07	$26.24
West Virginia	5.15	28.66
South Carolina	11.83	27.46
Georgia	9.90	24.54
Florida	7.91	38.01

The United States as a whole paid $21.64 per capita, and received $28.68 in grants and allotments.

8-Month School Term Provided By 83 Places

Long-Sought Minimum School Program in Virginia Launched.

Richmond, Aug. 13 (AP).—Eighty-three Virginia localities have provided for public school terms of not less than eight months for the coming school year, thus actually inaugurating the long-sought minimum education program in the State.

Until the remainder of the 111 localities do likewise they can not expect any of the $7,000,000 of State funds available for supplementing local instructional costs.

His grip on the State educational funds tightened by the Legislature, Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction, today emphasized that these funds are not available to the localities until they have met the rigid requirements of the new Cather-Layman act.

Dr. Hall said he expects all of the local governments to comply with its provisions before the first semi-annual allocation is made in October.

When localities comply with provisions of the act the State pays them an annual total amounting to $463.76 for every group of 25 to 40 pupils, according to the density of population. This money is to be used entirely for supplementing local appropriations for instructional costs, thus assuring teachers of salaries to this extent.

Steamer Pulled Safely Off Patapsco Mud Bank

Baltimore, Aug. 13 (Spl.).—Stranded for 15 hours on a mud bank at the entrance to the Patapsco River, the 9,000-ton steamer San Rafael, of the Quaker Line, was floated today after the Coast Guard cutter Apache had pulled her into deeper water.

The San Rafael ran aground Sunday near Seven Foot Knoll Lighthouse on her way to Norfolk, and sent a distance call by radio to Coast Guard headquarters here. The steamer proceeded to Norfolk, her officers reporting she was undamaged.

Elevator Weight Kills, Naval Academy Employe

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—George W. Harris, 50, colored, employe of the Naval Academy, was killed today when an elevator weight in Bancroft Hall, midshipmens' dormitory, struck him on the head, breaking his neck.

William Harris, brother of the dead man, was operating the elevator when the accident occurred.

FERA Leader Outlines Aid For Students

Dr. Allinson Speaks to Educational Chiefs at Charlottesville.

By Howard Turner.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 13.—Speaking before more than 30 representatives from Virginia colleges and civic organizations, in conference here today at the University of Virginia, Brent D. Allinson, National FERA educational representative, outlined the Federal program of part-time employment for needy students.

Dr. Allinson pointed out that while the aid given to men and women, who could not otherwise attend school, must be for useful and socially desirable work, the administration and disposition of the jobs would be left largely to the various institutions.

The training institute for emergency educational supervisors and relief workers in Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia and the District of Columbia also opened its eight-day session here today with a talk by Dr. Sidney B. Hall, Virginia superintendent of public instruction. Dr. Hall outlined the FERA adult educational program and explained the regional set-up.

Dr. Maphis Welcomer.

Dr. Charles G. Maphis, dean of the University of Virginia summer school, welcomed the several hundred educational officials, emergency teachers and civic relief workers.

Dr. Allinson stressed the desire of the relief administration to spread the student jobs throughout the community, and in this manner make the college more useful to the community, in addition to providing valuable business experience for the workers.

Discussions of the conference were largely devoted to rates of pay and types of work that students would be offered. Approximately 2,000 students in the various Virginia colleges will be offered relief work during the next school year.

Under provisions of the act, half of the jobs must be given to new students who were not in college last year. The maximum pay per month is $20.

Dr. Thomas D. Eason, of Richmond, supervisor of higher education for the Virginia Department of Education, was chairman of the meeting. Dr. Eason is in charge of the student employment program for the State.

C. F. Klinefelter, associate director of the educational division of the FERA, and Dr. Lewis A. Wilson, assistant commissioner of education for New York State, were the principal speakers at the opening session of the training institute.

Much Tragedy Included.

Mr. Klinefelter reviewed the program of adult education that was started last year, and outlined the objectives and organization for the coming year. The program, he said, calls for the employment of 40,000 teachers.

Dr. Wilson reviewed phases of the work being carried on in New York. He described the extreme cases in need of relief found there, and told his listeners the program would present "many tragic aspects."

Reports on the past year's emergency educational program in Maryland were presented by G. V. Van Dorp, State emergency supervisor; in West Virginia, by W. W. Trent, State superintendent of schools, and in the District of Columbia, by Maude E. Aiton, principal of the Webster Americanization School.

Among presidents and representatives of colleges taking part in discussions on student employment were Dr. John Lloyd Newcomb, University of Virginia; R. Lee Humbert, Virginia Polytechnic Institute; L. Wilson Jarman, Mary Baldwin College; R. N. Daniels, Furman University; J. T. T. Hundley, Lynchburg College; J. L. Jarman, Farmville; W. T. Hodges, Norfolk division, William and Mary College; Samuel P. Duke, Harrisonburg, and R. B. Montgomery, Lynchburg College.

Middie, Cadet Gun Test Held

Annapolis, West Point Youths Try Skill at Fleet Maneuvers.

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—Big guns on 12 warships boomed at sea today while 275 West Point cadets fired 3-inch antiaircraft and 155-millimeter guns at Fort Monroe.

On board the Wyoming and Arkansas, 900 midshipmen manned the guns, which fired at targets towed by three minesweepers. The middies will fire big and little guns all the week on the Southern drill grounds, 40 miles below Cape Henry, where ten other warships are gathered for the same purpose.

Besides the Arkansas and Wyoming, other ships that wended their way seaward from Hampton Roads today to engage in target practice were the battleships California, flagship of the battle force; West Virginia, Colorado, Mississippi and Tennessee; cruisers Memphis, Omaha and Milwaukee and the airplane carriers Saratoga and Lexington.

The battle force will return to Hampton Roads Saturday for the week-end, but will return to sea Monday to resume their gunnery practice.

The battleship New Mexico, with Admiral James M. Reeves, commander in chief of the United States fleet, on board, will arrive off the Virginia capes tomorow to join the battle force.

Estate of Jurist Is Left to Widow

Frederick, Md., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—The will of former Judge Glenn H. Worthington was filed for probate in the Orphans' Court today.

The estate is left to his widow, Julia A. Worthington, in trust, during her lifetime, and at her death is to be divided among the five children, Ruth W. Pfeil, Richard A. Worthington, Julia H. Martin, Dorothy W. Reed and John C. Worthington. The Frederick County National Bank and H. Kieffer Delauter are named trustees and the children are named executors.

The will, dated August 26, 1933, was witnessed by Grayson H. Mercer and H. Kieffer Delauter. No estimate of the worth of the estate was available.

Cresaptown to Hold Incorporation Meet

Cresaptown, Md., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—Citizens of Cresaptown are arranging a meeting to discuss incorporation.

Cresaptown, the seat of the Celanese Corporation of America, which employes 5,000 persons, is growing rapidly and is one of the most progressive unincorporated towns in Allegany County. A fire company was recently organized. Plans for the incorporation meeting are in the hands of the civic development committee of the fire company.

Church Conference Set.

Abingdon, Va., Aug. 13 (AP).—The forty-ninth annual session of the Lebanon Association of Baptist Churches will be held at Mountain View Baptist Church here Thursday and Friday.

Virginia 'Knights' Will Repeat Pageantry of Arthur's Court

Mount Solon, Va., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—The serenity of this village, lying in the foothills of the North Mountain in northern Augusta County, will be shattered Saturday when thousands of Shenandoah Valley residents trek through its streets to nearby Natural Chimneys for the 113th annual riding tournament.

Since the days of 1821, during the term of President Monroe, this secluded community has held a riding tournament annually, the only such event regularly held in Virginia, and yearly from 4,000 to 6,000 persons witness the thrilling charges of modern knights in combat with tiny ivory rings—all for the glory of winning honor for their ladies.

Participating in the tournament, for which they have been training for weeks, will be men with such names as Knight of Sleepy Hollow, Knight of the Golden Star, Happy Hollow, Golden Crown, Silver Hill, Golden Horseshoe and Parnassus.

As practiced in the days of King Arthur's court, these modern gallants, at the chief marshal's command of "Charge, Sir Knight," will gallop down the 65-yard stretch, unseating the tiny rings with their steel-tipped, 8-foot lances for the honor of crowning their fair ladies "Queen of Love and Beauty."

Some of the score or more riders in the contest, among them W. J. Moneymaker, winner of last year's tournament, A. C. Burtner, L. P. Wampler and N. H. Clinedinst, have participated for years, and the men and horses are especially adept in maneuvering for position to snare the tiny rings.

For 113 years Mount Solon residents have staged the tournaments on the same ground, in the shadow of Natural Chimneys, rising abruptly 100 feet like olden castles. Their bases are pierced with natural tunnels large enough to admit a modern motor car, and as the knights ride out to battle the ivory rings one looks for medieval pageantry and expects to hear the clanking of chains while waiting for the rising drawbridges to close the tunnel openings.

Judges probably will be C. C. Clinedinst, G. W. Kiracofe and Charles Hannah. Robert Simmons will serve as chief marshal and J. W. Taliferro will make the coronation address following the tournament.

Other features of the day's program, which will be staged as the 113th annual Mount Solon tournament and field day, will be a beauty contest, trap shooting, prize fight and greased-pig chases.

Farm Outlook In Petersburg Section Bright

Closing of Silk Plant in Hopewell Held Serious Blow.

By C. B. Carr.

Petersburg, Va., Aug. 13.—This city is the center of the Fourth Virginia Congressional District, which Democratic politicians of this section claim is the heart and soul of the party in Virginia. They base their claim on the fact that when the nine other districts of the Old Dominion were climbing on the Hoover band wagon in 1928, the fourth district alone remained in the Democratic fold.

The Fourth District has a peculiar economic composition which apparently fails to affect its political make-up. The district includes the cities of Petersburg and Hopewell and the counties of Amelia, Brunswick, Dinwiddie, Greensville, Lunenburg, Mecklenburg, Nottaway, Powhatan, Buckingham, Appomattox, Prince Edward, Prince George, Surry, Sussex and Cumberland. The counties are exceptionally rural in nature, while in Hopewell one finds a centralized industrial town.

Patrick H. Drewry, of Petersburg (Democrat), is standing for reelection to the House of Representatives. Drewry went to Congress in 1920, having previously been a member of the Virginia State Senate. According to his friends, Drewry is universally popular in his district and has had little opposition at the polls.

It appears that Drewry will have no formidable opposition in the November election, his political associates point out. The Socialists, of whom there are but a scattered handful in the district, are considering a candidate. There are some Republicans in the district who, in normal times, are said to compose about 20 per cent of the electorate. So far as the outstanding Republicans here know, the party leaders have not advanced probable candidates, nor have they spoken of calling a district convention to nominate a candidate. September 6 is the deadline for the filing of Congressional candidates.

Held Free From Bossism.

Several Democratic leaders expressed the opinion that Drewry would not be opposed by the Republicans. They declare that many Republicans believe Drewry is free from any bossism in Virginia politics.

The Fourth District is composed of independent Democratic voters, a party leader pointed out. When the remainder of Virginia districts voted for Hoover in 1928, the district gave Smith a 3-2 majority. When the gubernatorial election was held in 1933, the district again went contrary to the general State vote. There were three candidates seeking the Democratic nomination, George C. Peery had the support of the Democratic machine headed by Senator Byrd, while Joseph T. Deal and W. Worth Smith stood on their own merits. The Fourth failed to support the organization candidate, giving Deal a substantial majority.

New Dealism appears generally popular among the rank and file of the people, conversations with citizens in many walks of life indicate. They appear to feel Drewry did the right thing in supporting the measures of the Roosevelt Administration and many voters have criticized Senator Byrd for opposing certain Administration policies.

Drewry had no opposition in obtaining the Democratic nomination for reelection this fall. There was scattered support for Herbert F. Hutchinson, clerk of Mecklenburg County, and State Senator Samuel L. Ferguson, of Appomattox, who died after the deadline for filing. Their forces apparently decided the time was not ripe for them to run.

While politics is being discussed by politicians, the rank and file appear more concerned with economic matters. On both the agricultural and industrial horizon matters which will vitally affect the district to a large degree, are pending, it is pointed out.

Job Problem Acute.

The industrial situation has been clouded since June 29 by the strike of about 2,000 workers at the Tubize-Chattilon Corporation, manufacturers of artificial silk, at Hopewell. Hopewell's bread and butter is dependent on manufacture and with the shutting down of this plant the unemployment problem has become more acute than during any days of the depression, it is said.

The real problem confronting the 2,000 is that they are probably permanently out of a job, insofar as the Tubize-Chattilon Corporation is concerned. During the early days of the strike, corporation officials said the plant would be permanently closed. This statement was not seriously taken by the labor interests until late last week, when the Tubize organization paid off its clerical and executive forces in full and dismissed them.

Nearly all of the 2,000 were residents of Petersburg and Hopewell. The weekly pay roll ran around $40,000 and business men of the two cities are said to view with alarm the probable permanent closing of the plant. In general, observers declare, the Tubize strike has perhaps been the greatest blow that has been administered to economic recovery in the district.

The agricultural side appears more promising, both politicians and business men observe. The district is one of the large tobacco sections of Virginia. It had one of the best crops in years. Practically all tobacco farmers entered the AAA crop reduction program last year. The subsidization helped them to get out their crop in an efficient manner, the farmers state. If the price of tobacco reaches the 27-cent mark in this belt, which Danville interests report as probable, tobacco farmers declare that they will again be back on a solid footing.

Sabath Charges Effort to Kill Realty Probe

Pledges Thorough Inquiry Into Bondholders' Committees.

Efforts of "certain gentlemen" to "kill off" an inquiry of the House committee to investigate real estate bondholders' reorganizations will be repulsed, Chairman A. J. Sabath warned yesterday.

"The committee will press its work and activity and nothing will be left undone to bring to the attention of the proper governmental agencies those who may be guilty of fraud or collusion in the handling of the affairs of the unfortunate bondholders," the Illinois Democrat asserted.

Without identifying the group, Mr. Sabath charged they were attempting to set up obstacles by circulating false reports that the committee lacked sufficient time and money to make a thorough study.

Force to Be Increased.

"It is the aim of the committee, if humanly possible," he added, "to ferret out and bring to light all reprehensible activities and abuses and it will gradually increase its force to enable it to properly investigate and analyze every report, whereupon when sufficient information will have been obtained, the hearings will be held as the investigators will then be in position to submit their findings to the committee so that no unnecessary delay will ensue."

Mr. Sabath said "extreme efforts" would be made to conduct hearings shortly in Washington, Chicago, Detroit, New York and other large cities from which large numbers of complaints had been received. He explained if the full committee could not sit, sub-committees would.

"Thousands of unfortunate bondholders who have been defrauded of their life's savings naturally are demanding immediate hearings," the chairman pointed out.

The committee, the chairman said, has asked 1,500 bondholders' committees for detailed financial reports within 15 days.

Some Demand More Time.

"Some of the banks and bondholders' committees," he objected, "are demanding a longer period of time to answer the questionnaire.

"Some make the request under the pretense that it will be unduly expensive to rush a reply to the questionnaire and especially is this true of those who are under the impression they are immune because they have terminated their activities through reorganization or disposal of their properties.

"However, as there are so many complaints about such reorganizations of original bondholders' committees and fraud is being charged right here in Washington in connection with some of the largest properties, the committee feels the information called for should be forthcoming and is demanding it."

Mr. Sabath emphasized the committee was empowered by Congress to subpena witnesses and records.

Hitler Aids Ask Votes for Chief

Open Oratorical Barrage in Preparation for Next Sunday's Plebiscite.

Berlin, Aug. 13 (AP).—Chancellor Hitler's four leading lieutenants, all masters of the art of public speaking, today began a week of oratorical barrage with appeals for support of the chancellor in next Sunday's plebiscite.

Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels at Berlin, Hermann Wilhelm Goering at Munich, Wilhelm Frick at Cologne and Rudolph Hess at Breslau each declared before large crowds that Germany must approve by a bigger vote than ever Hitler's assumption of the functions of the presidency.

They declared that such a vote is needed to demonstrate German solidarity to the world and enable the administration to carry on its work.

Each address came at the climax of a carefully staged pageant in which flags, Storm Troopers and music abounded.

The speakers praised Hitler as the savior of Germany and declared that he was President von Hindenburg's friend and logical successor.

Before 80,000 persons who came out in a cold rain to sit in the open-air Neukoelln Stadium, Goebbels assailed Paris and London newspapers for predicting a Bolshevist crisis after Von Hindenburg's death.

Mrs. Angelina Thayer Buried at Rhoadsville

Orange, Va., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held yesterday for Mrs. Angelina Thayer, widow of John S. Thayer, for many years postmaster at Rhoadesville, and mother of Albert Thayer, at whose home in Auburn, N. Y., Mrs. Thayer died.

The burial took place at the Rhoadesville Baptist Cemetery. Services were conducted by the Rev. H. S. Southgate and the Rev. E. V. Peyton. Mrs. Thayer was a member of the Salem Baptist Church.

LEWIS G. REYNOLDS.

Reynolds Wins Dog Story Cash

Tale of Silver Lake Rescue Is Judged Best of 400 Articles.

A dramatic account of his rescue through the intelligence of his English setter won for Lewis G. Reynolds, 516 Tenth street northwest, the first of The Post's weekly $10 prizes for dog stories by readers.

Nearly 400 contributions were received during the first week, evidence of the affection canine pets have inspired. Mr. Reynolds, who is custodian of the famous collection of Lincoln relics at his Tenth street home, told of lying helpless on the crumbling ice of Silver Lake, while Bruce, his setter, raced for aid.

Bruce made possible the eventual rescue, Mr. Reynolds recounted, by bringing a rope to his master over ice which would not bear the weight of a human.

Another prize will be awarded this week for the best story received.

Suicide Ends Ride of Four

Girls Wait While Friend Shoots Himself in Head.

A certificate of suicide was issued yesterday in the death of Archie Jefferson Ward, 20, of the 1900 block of Seventeenth street northwest, who died in Casualty Hospital several hours after he shot himself through the head in a gasoline station at Ninth street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

Ward's suicide climaxed an automobile trip with his roommate, Gilmer Swain, and two women companions, Misses Doris and Naomi Crouch, of the 900 block of Fourteenth street northwest.

The party stopped at the filling station and Ward went into a basement room, police were told. Alarmed at his prolonged absence, Swain went to investigate. He found Ward fumbling with a revolver. As the pair walked from the station, Ward lifted the gun to his head and fired. His companions were unable to explain the act.

Investigators learned that Ward fired several shots from the revolver during an earlier ride through nearby Maryland and appeared in good spirits. The youth's father, Edward Ward, of Lexington, N. C., was notified.

Work Resumed at Mine Where Blast Killed 17

Norton, Va., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—Work was resumed today in the Stonega Coke & Coal Co. mine, at Derby, in which 17 men were killed in an explosion last Monday.

Dependents of the blast victims are being aided by the disaster division of the Red Cross. Mrs. Gwendolyn Gihon, of Philadelphia, has been assigned the task by the Red Cross headquarters at Washington.

Police Break Up FanTan Game for 16 Chinese

Baltimore, Aug. 13 (Spl.).—The Baltimore police evidently have no respect for the ancient and honorable Chinese game of fan tan. They raided a house in the city's miniature Chinatown last night and arrested 16 Chinese on gambling charges.

Today, before a police magistrate, all were released except George Lee, 45, who is held for a hearing tomorrow on charges of maintaining a gambling establishment.

Mrs. Elizabeth Finnegan Buried in Winchester

Winchester, Va., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—The funeral of Mrs. Elizabeth M. Finnegan, 85, who died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Laura Ballew, Terra Alta, W. Va., was held here today.

Besides the daughter, she is survived by two sons, James and Thomas, of Stephenson, Va., and two half-brothers, Robert Kenny, Washington, D. C., and Samuel Kenny, Vancluse, Va.

Carl Roach Fatally Crushed by Truck

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—Carl Roach, 20, was accidentally killed last night when crushed beneath the wheels of a truck driven by Lewis Barth at Longwood Church, near Earlysville. He died while being rushed to a hospital here.

Schall Predicts Roosevelt May "Fire" Johnson

Says Move Would Set Up White House Alibi in Newsprint Row.

(Associated Press.)

Senator Schall (Republican), Minnesota, predicted yesterday that President Roosevelt may "fire" Hugh S. Johnson "to set up a White House alibi" in the newsprint code dispute.

Schall, persistent critic of NRA, issued a statement attacking a proposal for a special board with authority over newsprint prices—a plan which publishers have opposed as monopolistic.

Declaring the proposal a "menace to American publishers," Schall said:

"It is a foregone conclusion that, now that the Johnson NRA administration has been caught red-handed by the American publishers, Roosevelt will use the incident for a dramatic grandstand play. He may even fire Johnson outright to set up a White House alibi. He will doubtless use the opportunity to win the applause of the daily press by a theatrical gesture of discarding the newsprint code or, at least, the proposed enlargements."

The Senator quoted from testimony he said was presented at a recent hearing on proposed amendments to the effect that "the newsprint trust, under the protective arm of the NRA and by suspension of the antitrust laws, threatens American newspapers with a charge of $50 per ton for newsprint, which the protected combine sells to Europe at $30 and to South American publishers at $20."

4 Die, 11 Hurt In W. Virginia

Falls, Auto Accident and Drowning Take Lives; Trains Crash.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—Four accidental deaths and 11 persons injured were reported in West Virginia over the week-end.

Miss Nellie Susan Goldsmith, 17, of Northview, died in a hospital today of injuries received when a car in which she was riding collided at Janelew with one driven by E. W. Lyon, of Fairmont, representative of the State health department. Jimmy Goldsmith, 4, also was seriously injured.

Thomas Robinette, 23, son of the janitor, was fatally hurt in a 60-foot fall from a ladder in the Methodist Protestant Church here, where he was replacing ceiling lights.

The drowning of Carl Metzgar, 9, son of B. J. Metzgar, while swimming in the Gauley River at Camden-on-Gauley, was reported today.

James Graham, 45, an oil company employe of Blue Creek, was killed yesterday in a fall from a railroad bridge.

Ten persons were injured in a collision of a passenger and a freight train on the Virginian Railway. Physicians say none was probably hurt fatally. The trains crashed last night near the Big Mossy Tunnel, 3 miles west of here.

Democrats to Convene In Huntington Friday

Huntington, W. Va., Aug. 13 (Spl.). Young Democratic Clubs throughout West Virginia are appointing groups of delegates and alternates for a State convention to be held here Friday and Saturday.

The convention will draw a number of distinguished leaders of the party from the national organization, including James A. Farley, National chairman, according to the committee on arrangements.

MY DOG STORY

The Post invites its readers to send in their favorite dog stories, accompanied, if possible, by a photograph. The stories should be true ones, and not more than 250 words in length. A weekly prize of $10 will be paid for the best contribution.

By Mrs. Grace Kane,
Laurel, Md.

Our police dog, Queenie, thinks it's a dog's life in the Army. Ever since her puppy days for some unexplained reason she has been gun shy.

The constant firing of reveille and retreat guns on the post upset her very much. We finally discovered that the moment the bugler blows the calls that are preliminary to the firing of the sunrise and sunset guns, our Queenie, whether upstairs or down, even though she be on her own bed, will immediately leave the particular spot she's in and seek the darkest and most secluded corner of the house until the shot is fired.

All through the day the bugles blow their various calls, but Queenie knows just the ones that mean the cannon's firing. If caught outside, she will give a terrified look towards the guard around the flagpole, then will rush to open the screen door of the house with her teeth. If we make her stay out, she will insist upon our holding her paw until the gun has been fired.

She is also very keen to recognize the uniform. Once when we were miles from any army post and had been for several days, we passed a soldier standing on a street corner. Queenie pricked up her ears, leaned out of the car window, barked and watched his uniformed figure until he was out of sight.

By Grace Nelson,
1473 Irving street northwest.

One day my Daddy brought me a little doggie from the woodyard and I named him Bosco. He was sure cute. He sure did like to take out all the soft padding in our house slippers. One day while I was at school he helped himself to a big hambone and got right in the middle of mother's clean bed. Mother did not like it. But I thought it was cute what ever he done.

One day mother put him out doors but I went out and got him. Then I put him under my coat when I came in mother said what have you under your coat. Just then Boso stuck his head out and looked right at me.

Another time early in the morning he was scratching and barking by the door. So mother went down and discovered there was fire. All the kinling wood caught a fire and my smart doggie was trying to wake us up.

I had to give my doggie up. People did not like him, where we lived. Farmer boy took him out in the country. One day the Farmer Boy told us my little doggie caught a fox, he bit into the neck and shook the fox a couple of times and he got his game. I was so happy to know that my Boso was no Coward. I miss him very much he was part police his mother is at the woodyard gee is she smart can play ball like a child. The mother has nine baby girls and one boy they are just big enough to see whats going on. I just live to go and pat them. I bet the little boy will be a regular Sisey.

Curfew Law in Stuart Will Be Continued

Stuart, Va., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—The town council has decided to maintain the local curfew law. Each evening the courthouse bell is tolled warning children under 15 years of age they must get off the streets.

The experiment is being continued because public school teachers found an improvement in scholastic accomplishment reflected by greater attention to home studies during the recent school session.

Virginia Banks Get Housing Aid Plea

Richmond, Aug. 13 (AP).—D. Robert Hunt, State director for the better housing division, National Emergency Council, appealed to Virginia banks today to carry their share of the program, lest other State banking groups consume the major share of the available Federal appropriation.

"It is up to Southern banks to do their part in this modernization movement," Hunt said.

He said he was told in Washington that New York banks are preparing to handle all loans sought from them. The housing act sets aside $200,000,000 as guarantee funds to cover up to 20 per cent of loans made by banks for the modernization of homes, apartments, office buildings, factories, farm buildings and other types of structure.

Jesuit Serves Fiftieth Year

Rev. P. F. O'Gorman Marks Golden Anniversary Tomorrow.

The golden anniversary of his joining the Society of Jesus will be celebrated by the Rev. P. F. O'Gorman, S. J., dean of studies at Georgetown Preparatory School, Garrett Park, Md., tomorrow.

Former rector of the Church of the Gesu, Philadelphia, former provincial of the New England Province of the Society of Jesus and former rector of St. Ignatius Loyola Church, New York City, Father O'Gorman has spent much of his career in educational work.

Born in New York in 1867, Father O'Gorman joined the Society of Jesus, with which he has had a distinguished record, in 1884. His career took him to many centers of Catholic devotional and educational endeavor.

Father O'Gorman will spend his anniversary quietly.

He has served on the faculty of Georgetown University. At Georgetown Preparatory School his efforts were largely instrumental in building the new boys' chapel, which cost over $350,000, and completed within the last year.

Virginia Praised For Park Program

Nurserymen Hear Talk by State Supervisor.

Luray, Va., Aug. 13 (AP).—Virginia nurserymen heard R. E. Burson, supervisor of State parks, describe the Virginia park program at their convention here today.

Parks, Mr. Burson said, are now available within 50 miles of all except six Virginia counties. He quoted a statement made at a National Park Service meeting to the effect that Virginia has made more progress than any other State in providing for recreation of its people.

Chapin Jones, head of the education and research bureau of the State Division of Forestry, addressed the delegates on reforestation as a means of education. Fred Shoosmith, of Richmond, offered the growth of a better product as his suggestion for a practical means of meeting competition.

Representative John Flannagan, of the Ninth District, was chief speaker at a banquet tonight.

Sunday School Group Renames Rev. Fidler

Philippi, W. Va., Aug. 13 (Spl.). The Rev. J. E. Fidler will continue for another year as president of the West Virginia Baptist Sunday School convention. He was chosen along with other officers for the term at its twenty-fifth annual convention held in connection with the annual West Virginia Baptist Assembly at Alderson-Broaddus College here.

Arrest by NRA Puzzles Official

Va. Commissioner Queries Cause of Delay.

Richmond, Aug. 13 (Spl.).—Commenting today on the arrest by Federal authorities of S. Gregory Thomas, head of the Motor-Service Oils, Inc., of Appalachia, on a charge of violating the NRA petroleum code by agreeing to furnish the State highway department with gasoline at a stated price for six months, Henry G. Shirley, State highway commissioner, said that the Appalachia company had about completed the contract on which it submitted bids in March. If there was to be a prosecution in the matter, he wondered why there had been so much delay.

Four of the counts in the warrant sworn to by Joseph H. Chitwood, Federal district attorney for the Western District of Virginia, cited specific deliveries of gasoline to the highway department on April 17 and 18 at Hayst and Gate City. Thomas is bonded for a hearing at Wise on August 24.

Dr. Rufener Dead; Economics Expert

Morgantown, W. Va., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—Word was received here today of the death of Dr. Louis August Rufener, 49, professor of economics in West Virginia University, last night at Boulder, Colo., from a heart attack. Dr. Rufener was the author of several books, on one of which, "Money and Banking," he had just read final proofs before leaving ten days ago with his wife on a motor trip to her former home at Boulder.

A native of Clarence, Mo., he was educated at the University of Kansas and Harvard. He served as an economist on commissions in Washington during the World War.

Col. Daniel H. Gienty Is Buried in Arlington

Col. Daniel Henry Gienty, U. S. A., retired, war-time commanding officer of Camp Meigs, D. C., was buried in Arlington National Cemetery yesterday.

Chaplain Benjamin Tarskey conducted the services which were held with full military honors. Col. Gienty died in San Francisco, Calif., December 19, 1933. Pall bearers at yesterday's services included Maj. Gen. Ewing Booth, Col. Archibald Commiskey, Col. John Herr, Col. Joseph Taulbee, Col. H. H. Sheen and Lieut. Col. Harvey Higley.

Orange School Annex Is Under Construction

Orange, Va., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—An addition to the Orange High School, costing approximately $2,300 and financed partly through PWA funds, is being built.

The work, contracted to the Charlottesville Lumber Co., is expected to be finished by October 15. A new auditorium is being constructed at the Barbourville High School.

Probe of Fatal Crash Resumed

Frederick, Md., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—Justice Alton Y. Bennett, acting coroner in the case involving the deaths of Mrs. Bertha M. Marker and her son, William C. Marker, announced today that investigation into the accident will be resumed tomorrow.

Mr. Marker and his mother, residents of Locust Valley, were instantly killed the night of July 12 when a heavily laden beer truck driven by Samuel Vincent, of Winchester, Va., crashed into their automobile near Knoxville. Mr. Marker's young son and Vincent were badly hurt and the automobile was wrecked.

The first investigation, started July 30, was postponed until young Marker and Vincent were able to be present. It was stated that the truck belonged to Mrs. O. M. Swimley, of Winchester, and carried no liability insurance, required under the Maryland law.

"I wonder if most people realize what Automatic Hot Water means"

"Hot water is, of course, hot water, no matter how you look at it. But there are different ways of getting it.

"I have noticed, for instance, that some people walk from here to New York and back in the course of a short time just going up and down stairs to the basement to light an old heater every time a little hot water is needed. And how many times during the day hot water is needed.

"Surely husbands should know about automatic water heaters, that their efficiency is greater, making the cost less per gallon of hot water used. Maybe the majority of wives don't know about it. If they did, you'd see a lot more people with Automatic Gas Water Heaters since they sell them on such easy terms. And you would see more vivacious wives because of the burden it takes off their housework."

Municipal Progress.

Balanced budgets, declines in net indebtedness, higher taxes, and reduced expenses all testify to the vigor with which numerous municipalities are now meeting financial difficulties which a short time ago seemed insuperable. The recuperative power shown by some cities only recently bankrupt and despairing is amazing. The improvement seems especially remarkable since it has been achieved without the aid of any pronounced business expansion and in face of continued unemployment and widespread distress among property owners.

The moral is clear; it is evident that the cities have been the victims of gross political mismanagement, slipshod administration, wasteful outlays and short-sighted borrowing policies. When they reached a point at which funds could no longer be obtained to tide them over, when unpaid bills mounted, and public employes began to rebel, the citizens discovered that they could find a way out of their difficulties by eliminating the graft and corruption too easily tolerated in prosperous years.

Now that the cities have demonstrated their ability to find new sources of revenue, and eliminate unnecessary outlays, their next step should be assumption of a greater proportion of the relief burdens that the Federal Government has been called upon to carry. The municipalities can not be said to have really returned to financial solvency until they have proved their ability to meet a large proportion of the local obligations now wastefully shouldered upon Federal relief agencies.

Augustus Thomas.

A significant indication of the change that has come over the American drama of late years is that when the late Augustus Thomas produced "The Witching Hour," in 1907, William Winter accepted it as an outstanding contribution to the stage. Neither "The Witching Hour" nor William Winter's discursive discussion of it would find much of an audience today.

Augustus Thomas was not exactly an American Pinero. But like that English playwright he had a pat formula from which he seldom successfully varied. It was simple, and it was acceptable to simple times. This does not mean that it lacked value. In dramatic history of the stage such plays as the romantic and sentimental "Alabama," "Colonel Carter of Cartersville," "The Hoosier Doctor," and even "The Education of Mr. Pipp" are worth more than footnote mention. They are a vital commentary upon the cultural taste of their times.

Our own taste may not be much better, and certainly we are today every bit as haywire about the "old South" as were the audiences of "Alabama." But a "Men In White," to choose arbitrarily one title, does seem superior in craftsmanship and as an inducement to acting, to an "Earl of Pawtucket." This does not detract from the historical importance of the author of the latter. For Mr. Thomas was a good, if not inspired, workman whose plays, in contrast with what had preceded them in America, perhaps deserved the words of William Winter.

The characters were "individual, veritable," the critic said; the situations "essentially dramatic;" their exposition, "skillful and imaginative." And that, if true, is much. We must remember Augustus Thomas was writing long before the discovery of Provincetown and producing long before the Theatre Guild. And if he was inspired by the Gibson Girl, so was the America that nurtured the romantic railroad clerk and newspaperman who was the dean of American playwrights when he died.

No Right To Complain.

We risk a choleric reaction by flatly asserting that Washingtonians have cause to be thankful for the comparatively cool weather of this summer.

On several occasions the mercury may have flirted with the 100 degree mark and admittedly the humidity has been more excessive than normal. But showers and thunderstorms have checkerboarded the hot spells with sufficient regularity to insure frequent low temperatures at night, when invigorating sleep builds resistance against the enervating heat of another day.

Not so in what has come to be known during this memorable summer as the "gridiron belt," an area larger than that of all the Atlantic States, where the drought is without precedent and a steady current from Nature's fiery furnace has been unmitigated since late spring.

Topographically, St. Louis is similar to Washington. Each city is at the bottom of a bowl. Both experience excessive humidity. Add to that humidity temperature readings of over 100 day in and day out and Washingtonians will understand the feelings of residents of the Mound City. Last Friday, after months of torridity, they were compelled to continue life's duties while the thermometer registered 106. On the same day in Kansas City, at the western edge of the State, the official reading was 110. Here are hills, usually swept by air currents, and sought as refuge spots. But this summer the stagnant air is like the doldrums of the tropics.

A letter from Tulsa, Okla., says: "Unable to sleep, I am writing you at 4 a. m., the cool of the morning. A glance at the thermometer in the hall shows the mercury at 93. It will probably go to 115 again today."

One reads of chunks of ice being placed in washtubs and of cool currents of air created by electric fans, blowing over them. But thought should travel to the many thousands who have no electric fans, and can not spare the money for ice.

Political Realignments.

Raymond Clapper, writing after an extensive tour of the country, expresses the growing belief that the United States is entering a period when traditional party loyalties will be discarded in favor of an alignment based on the attitude of the citizen toward the New Deal. At least the beginnings of such an evolution are evidenced, he thinks, by President Roosevelt's disposition to make support of his policies the test of his favor.

Certainly the friends and foes of the New Deal can no longer be known by their party labels. Some of its most ardent supporters are found among the Republican "left wing" elements. Some of its bitterest opponents are old-line Democrats. Unquestionably the policies of the Roosevelt Administration have cut squarely athwart our unrealistic partisan alignments and brought to the fore certain fundamental questions of party organization that have long called for thoughtful consideration. The issue nearly arose when Theodore Roosevelt was President. It would probably have come to a head under President Wilson but for the intervention of the war. The combination of the depression and Franklin D. Roosevelt's experimental attitude seem now to have posed the question of party realignment beyond evasion.

The issue is between political reality on the one hand and political efficiency on the other. Two-party organization—"Ins" vs. "Outs"—is undoubtedly the most mechanically desirable form of democratic government. It is even questionable that it yields to dictatorships in efficiency, while much more preferable than the latter to any liberty-loving people. But if the dual party system fails to correspond to psychological reactions it ceases to have reality. People simply do not consider the issues of the day as Democrats and Republicans. They react as conservatives, liberals, or radicals. These words represent really significant intellectual and emotional responses.

The danger lies in breaking down the efficiency of two-party government by creating a multiplicity of political groups aiming to express all the shadings of the electorate's opinion on current problems. It was the development of such "bloc" systems, rather than any shortcomings in the theory of representative government, which led to the rise of dictatorships in Europe. For no administration can be expected to function properly if it represents a minority group, always subject to parliamentary overthrow, if it has responsibility without power.

So the trend to align supporters of the New Dealers against its critics should be carefully watched. It goes much deeper than the personalities at the moment involved. It is obviously an instinctive groping toward a Conservative vs. Radical alignment, using both titles in the strict and completely unabusive sense of the words. But would such an alignment endure? Would not reactionaries split from conservatives and revolutionaries from radicals? Would not liberals soon cry a plague on both your houses and form their own party?

Very likely; yet the current trend is undeniably refreshing. We can for the moment be pleased by its political realism without worrying about the future problems which it implies.

Forsyte In Boston.

Calumet and Hecla, the Union Club, King's Chapel and Trinity Church, Commonwealth avenue and the water side of Beacon street, Frank Locke's bar on Winter place, old Young's Hotel, State street, the Cabots, the Higginsons, the Peabodys, perhaps a little bit of God, and the financial pages of the Evening Transcript—that is the Boston that was.

Nothing perhaps so poignantly brings realization of the necessity for the past tense as news of the death of George S. Mandell. He was so adequately representative of the old, the gracious, the well-poised, the safe Boston. And the newspaper which, in more than 100 years had never been owned by any other family than his, was less a newspaper than the ultimate expression of a caste that was also old, and gracious, well-poised and, above all, safe.

Mandell and his paper were of the gentility, and the gentility may still ride its polo ponies at Myopia, but they cut less and less ice on State street. Mandell was a gentleman—a large stone house on Commonwealth avenue, a country place at Hamilton on the North shore. He was the negation of vulgarity and the consummation, not of the Boston of Emerson's day, but of that commercial class which was shrewd but leisurely, powerful but kind, wealthy, paternal, and so very Boston.

Cold roast Boston was the phrase that best described it. Mrs. Jack Gardiner, Lee-Higginson, Roxbury Latin, Harvard, Union Boat Club, the Junior League, Hasty Pudding—but why go on? The old Boston, never shabby but always genteel, so cultured but never prim, and independent as hell if independence paid.

And now that tall, thin, tragic man, who dominated a declining newspaper from a cubby hole office overlooking the Old South Meeting House and Milk street, whose eyes brightened so at the mention of a polo pony, whose eyes clouded at mention of the war that had cost him a son, whose eyes fired at the name of Mencken or Stalin, who hated the Watch & Ward and everything else a gentleman should hate, is gone.

Most of the important Boston passed with the death of H. T. Parker, the American Hazlitt of the Transcript, who died this winter. As much more has gone with George S. Mandell. With Parker went the city's culture, with Mandell the spirit of paternalism and the sacredness of 4 per cent.

The Railroads Seek Relief.

The social merits of the pension plan are not a subject of controversy in the suit filed by the carriers in the District Supreme Court. Indeed, a contributory retirement system like that contemplated by the law is in many respects admirable. It is an aid to railroad efficiency and in the interests of public safety to withdraw superannuated railway labor from active employment and make humane provision for those forced to retire. However, these are general arguments in favor of old age pensions that are applicable to many classes of workers. They have no bearing upon the constitutional and practical questions involved in the present plan to impose a very costly compulsory pension system upon the railroads.

In the first place, the roads challenge the constitutionality of an act that singles out one group of employers for assessment, compelling them to contribute large sums of money toward a retirement system for their employes. They assert that such action interferes with liberty of contract, constitutes deprivation of property without just compensation, and thus violates the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution. It is also pointed out that the law covers many employes who are not engaged in interstate commerce. The roads further maintain that the scope and character of the legislation go far beyond its alleged purpose to promote safety and efficiency in interstate transportation.

Apart from the constitutional objections to the law, which should call forth interesting arguments from both sides, it is increasingly apparent that Congress chose an inopportune time to place these heavy additional liabilities upon the railroads. The effects of such action in weakening the financial position of the carriers are set forth at length in the brief in an effort to strengthen the contention that the pension act is confiscatory, not only in law but in fact. The contribution of the roads to the pension fund is estimated at not less than $60,000,000 for the first year. These charges are added to those involved in restoration of pay cuts and in greatly increased operating costs, resulting from higher prices for materials and supplies.

A pension plan that adds to the difficulties in the way of restoration of financial stability in the railroad field, and reduces earnings that are already negligible, is not necessarily in the interests of labor. A financially strong railroad system supplies more regular employment and furnishes better service than one which is forced to resort to drastic economies in order to cover its operating expenses and fixed charges. A pension system imposed under prevailing conditions might, in fact, prove to be a law which would increase rather than diminish unemployment. The improper haste with which the legislation was pushed through Congress, just before adjournment, is reflected in the case now pending before the courts.

"Gladly Wolde He Teche."

Entrance of Harry Morgan Ayres into the contest for Connecticut's Democratic senatorial nomination is said by local politicos to have "complicated the situation." We should think it might! Dr. Ayres is professor of Old English at Columbia University.

Of course, some question exists as to the precise scope of Old English. Certain scholars merge it with Anglo-Saxon and end it with the Norman conquest. Others blend it into what used to be called "Middle English" and carry on through Chaucer. But in either case, his erudition will probably give Prof. Ayres a mean advantage over his two rivals, the one a Congressman and the other State Labor Commissioner.

And what will happen if the Professor, having "in their own grese made" his opponents "frie," wins both nomination and election? Will he illuminate Capitol debates with quotations from Bede and Beowulf? It might not be a bad thing to inject some Old English into the New Deal. Dr. Ayres, for instance, could remind his colleagues that quite a long time ago undue centralization of power brought forth a spirited protest entitled Magna Carta.

Mile Posts

A Parade of the Past From the Files of The Post.

THE WAR—20 YEARS AGO.

THE ITALIAN foreign office ordered its ambassadors at Paris, St. Petersburg, London and Berlin to return home for conferences on the progress of the war. Meanwhile reports of expected "decisive" battles poured in from a number of fronts.

AS THE AMBASSADORS prepared to return, some 250,000 Italian troops were reported gathering along the Austrian and Swiss frontiers. The British Mediterranean fleet was ordered to attack the Austrian fleet.

A LATE DISPATCH from Brussels declared the German army was in retreat, "harassed by Belgian outposts."

PRESIDENT WILSON issued a strong order to Attorney General McReynolds to protect the American Nation from the greed of food profiteers who already had begun to drive up the price of foodstuffs under the pretext of conditions abroad. He spoke sharply against such men as were taking advantage of the war for private profit.

THE FRENCH and German troops were reported engaged in a terrific battle at Mulhausen, in the lower Alsace.

THE WASHINGTON POST made cognizance editorially of the beginning of the propaganda machines that ground so relentlessly throughout the war. Already reports of atrocities were coming in from both sides of the conflict and The Post urged that they be not taken too seriously, as the effect of one report was offset by another. Inhuman and barbaric actions were widely charged.

"I, Too, Have Faith."

Feet in the Trough.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I believe it is a fact that both Democratic and Republican parties owe their existence to the fact that there is a United States of America. Hence, those of us who are not dyed-in-the-wool members of either party, but whose votes bear considerable weight, feel that we should make it apparent to the existing parties that—under the present deplorable conditions—both these parties had better get together and unite in putting Uncle Sam back on his feet.

For, to the politicians of both parties, Uncle Samuel surely represents the golden-egg-laying goose, and one dead goose won't feed many people, be they Democrats or Republicans. Unless there is unselfish unity between Democrats and Republicans, unless they put these United States of America first and their political parties second, there "ain't goin' to be no core to this apple."

No matter how large the trough, it will feed just so many hogs. For every hog who insists in getting both front feet in the trough as well, still fewer will find room to feed. And when a comparatively few hogs insist on standing lengthwise in the trough, with both feet and snout inside, they most assuredly occupy 75 per cent of the space. GRANT SHEPHERD.

"Our Own Business."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am one of your confirmed readers and appreciate the timely editorials as well as the Bargeron column, which I read daily. I agree with one of your letter-writers of August 9 regarding Hitler. It occurs to me that we had better watch and mind our own business instead of thinking so much about Germany and Hitler. It is clear proof that Hitler is the man of the hour in Germany or the people would have arisen against him. The fact that he has thus risen with no newspapers to back him speaks for itself.

Dictatorship?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Hitlerism has one redeeming feature that may be useful if we will consider it and act promptly. It is the living example that after a nation has permitted a dictatorship, it can not become again free without war of some kind, most likely the bloody kind. Germany sacrificed freedom and now it is too late to peacefully regain that God-given privilege. We are fast approaching the same condition. Already business men are threatened and coerced; jail is "just around the corner" for many honest men who want only to mind their own business. Before it is too late let every liberty-loving voter rebel against this velvet-gloved Hitlerism in America.

There is no "emergency" to fear so much as loss of liberty. Even a depression and starvation are mild in comparison. Let everyone strive to love God and his neighbor and "keep his powder dry." If the vast amount of public funds now being squandered as "recovery" funds, could be used personally in each community to help the unfortunate, we would have no poverty or parasitical bureaucracy.

"Worthy of Quotation."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a newcomer to the Nation's Capital, may I be allowed to say a few words in praise of your newspaper?

Having been a reader of the New York Times for many years, I am accustomed to high standards in the presentation of the news, a sound editorial policy and informative letters from correspondents. I find all of these reflected in The Post.

The editorial appearing today entitled "Those Who Will Pay" and Dr. Doyle's letter on superficiality should not only be read, but are worthy of quotation by other papers throughout the country.

Inspirational.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to thank you for your publication of "Too Many Graduates" from the Omaha World Herald. More publicity of sentiments of that kind would do much good. Material wealth and conveniences and passing amusements are widely and profusely publicized and kept constantly before the minds of the present generation, while little to stimulate the finer sentiments and noble aims is presented in an attractive manner. Won't you publish more inspirational contributions? L. C.

Costly Commas.

Time was when teachers gave considerable attention in class to punctuation of sentences. But nowadays they refuse slavishly to follow formulas regarding it. As a result punctuation has become a highly individualized process; which is as it should be. However, one can not be too careful about it upon occasion; for obscurity or ambiguity of thought caused by a misplaced comma may jeopardize a fortune.

"A comma in the will of William H. Nelson, wealthy Westchester milk dealer, who died at the age of 88 last year," says an Associated Press news item from White Plains, "won the bulk of his $600,000 fortune for his 52-year-old wife."

The comma has figured many times in legal actions involving large sums of money. The vagaries of the little mark of punctuation upon one occasion cost Uncle Sam a pretty penny. In a tariff act of some years ago Congress provided for the free entry of "all foreign fruit plants;" and an engrossing clerk made the provision read "all foreign fruit, plants," &c. As a result of the mistake, all foreign fruits were admited free of duty for a whole year, or until Congress could remedy the blunder. That comma cost Uncle Sam about $2,000,000.

Yes, punctuation has some importance in revealing precise relationship of thoughts. There is the classic story of the wayfarer, who, having enjoyed to his heart's content the hospitality of an inn, was about to depart with never a word about paying the host. Confronted at the door, he pointed to a sign which swung above the entrance. This sign read:

What do you think
Here for no gold you'll find
Victuals and drink
The guest had read it—
What do you think!
Here for no gold you'll find
Victuals and drink.

But the host insisted that the sign was to be read thus:

What! Do you think
Here for no gold you'll find
Victuals and drink?

Here is more of this matter of punctuation: The man says my informant lies. Or it might be: The man, says my informant, lies.

The comma is a refractory little knave. One does well to study how to keep it in its place.

"No Place For Radicalism?"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to congratulate you on your editorial of August 10 with respect to Commander Hayes' speech to the American Legion District Convention.

When I read extracts of his remarks as published, I thought he must have been misquoted. I am fast losing what respect I had left for the Legion, which, as I only learned recently, and many no doubt do not know, represents only a minority of the veterans of the World War. It appears that this rather arrogant minority, however, is attempting not only to speak for all the veterans, but to censor the views of the public as well.
O. E. BARRETT.
Washington, Aug. 11.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me to congratulate you on two recent editorials, "No Place For Radicalism?" and "Undiscriminating Criticism." In my opinion The Washington Post has become during the last year a vastly improved newspaper. The editorial page especially shows this improvement. Intelligence and fairness are what we have too little of. Keep it up.
OLD-FASHIONED LIBERAL.
Washington, Aug. 11.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Allow me to thank you for the editorial, "No Place for Radicalism?" in The Post of August 10. I wonder if Commander Hayes has ever read the following section of the Declaration of Independence?

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed.

"Tht whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness."

And I wonder if the commander is familiar with the statement of Abraham Lincoln that:

"This country, with its institutions, belongs to the people who inhabit it. Whenever they shall grow weary of the existing Government, they can exercise their Constitutional right of ameding it, or, their revolutionary right to dismember or overthrow it. . . ."

Commander Hayes wants to abolish these rights. Why?

Red Nails, Red Wrath.

Postoffice, Tuesday.

YOU must remember that latest complaint of the Major's: the one against carmine fingernails. We wondered why it didn't immediately draw the (red) fire of his dearest foe. But we needn't have wondered. Apparently, Mrs. Kestler was just bringing up her ammunition. The last of it has now arrived, and she sends it over in a not uncertain salvo.

"The Major," says her ironic typewriter, "has a sharp eye for danger-signals. The onrushing midnight express should hold no terror for him. He's so hipped on the red-flannel era, one doubts if he could be made over into a 1934 streamline model. Imagine any woman of this year being happily encased in a hobble-skirt, steel stays, bustle, or wearing a 'rat' in her hair! Yet this was the bait used in the Gay Nineties to attract the male of the species. Well, painted lips and nails seem a mild form of mutilation after that. And, though men may not tint their nails, I believe they spend a good deal of time and money being manicured. . . .

"And as for painted toenails," says Mrs. Kestler, "why, if it takes them to get the much-abused feet of women out of the high-heeled shoes that misshape the feet and throw the spine out of plumb, then it is a certain fact that the Major's own family doctor would approve.

"If, as the Major says, women copy fashions from 'women that most women wouldn't speak to,' there must be a good reason. It is not always easy to speak to angels, you know."

Whereupon Mrs. Kestler fires this Big Bertha:

"I've been wondering: Suppose a woman wanted to angle for the Major—what would be the most efficacious means, harpoon or a fine-meshed net? . . . If the right means were used, he might admit error in other of his pet theories pertaining to that bane of his existence, the eternal feminine."

We certainly hope that the Major will furnish the required information!

Meantime, Mrs. Kestler becomes as deadly serious as she was before deadly ironic:

"We live in a man-made civilization," she declares. "Laws, institutions and opportunities for development are still made predominantly by men and for men. We call ourselves emancipated, but we . . . almost universally allot the worst drudgeries to women's hands. . . .

"Too many people think that on their pompous shoulders rests the titanic onus of helping God run the universe. This country has just recovered from the dreadful orgy of Prohibition, yet already the same persons who started that debauch of 'reform' are busy again."

(On red fingernails?) . . .

In short, Mrs. Kester wants to know when there will be reformers to reform the reformers.

She is particularly sensitive—or so it seems to us—over the question of what she describes as "scientific mental hygiene," or, rather, an alleged lack of it in modern civilization. If there were proper "scientific mental hygiene," it seems, either red fingernails would not affect the Major, or else there wouldn't be any red fingernails.

"Sometime," says she, "the beginning of a scientific mental hygiene must be made. Why not now, before the country runs amuck with hocuspocus pathologic puritanic racketeers?"

We really think Mrs. Kestler's letter must have been written before that Federal appelate court handed down its decision regarding "Ulysses!"

* * *

She fears that art may again be ready to deny legs to women. "It took us women a heck of a long time," she writes, "to prove that we did have them. And," she frankly admits, "we did strut our stuff. I blush for some of them—the ugly ones." But, in the next paragraph, she approvingly quotes Theodore Schroeder about "emotionally intense judgments" against certain subjects being "really a confession of extravagant interest" therein.

"We are going," she predicts, "to have to decide eventually who shall be punished" for this lack of "scientific mental hygiene." She believes that "to produce healthy-minded parents for the future requires healthy-minded educators." The schools and motion-pictures could, she thinks, "assert the superiority of healthy-mindedness, if they would." But she hints at a grave doubt whether they sincerely want to.

* * *

"Now," she concludes—after another quotation, this time from Dr. W. Beran Wolfe's "Nervous Breakdown, Its Cause and Cure"—"I have about vented my spleen on this latest outburst of the Major. And, if you haven't thrown me out, I want to apologize for my recitation and promise not to do it again."

Well, we don' know that we quite agree with all of Mrs. Kestler's assertions. But we beg to assure her that we have not thrown her out—not by any means. She hasn't much use for the old school man, but we—ever since we began reading Emily Post—have always belonged just enough to that school "never to lift a hand against a woman," not even as a throwing-out argument to convince her of our superior mentality.

* * *

No, sir! We have other ideas upon that subject.

If there is any throwing-out to be done, we shall summon the Major.

And then stand by and watch him do it.

Barging Through Europe

With

Carlisle Bargeron

The Rhapsody of the Beret.

AT SEA—Dear Aleck: I feel so good today because I was finally exonerated of the charge that has stood against me for three days. Never was a man so mortified in the eyes of his fellow citizens, or fellow steamer-men than I, Aleck. It happened this way:

BARGERON.

I was sitting out in a deck chair conversing gayly with my fellow passengers the other afternoon when up comes Miss Strowbar, the blonde beauty, her eyes afire and anger in her every vein.

"Is this your beret?" she demanded, holding the little thing up to full view.

"Why, yes," I replied and reached out my hands to take it in tender hold.

"Well, do you know where I found it?"

"Why, no, I don't."

"In my stateroom," she fairly shouted.

* * * *

Aleck, the little thing looked at me so shame-facedly because of the embarrassment it knew it was causing me. I was hurt terribly that a beret of mine would do such a thing.

"Beret," I asked in a voice scarcely audible, a voice charged with emotion. "What on earth were you doing in Miss Strowbar's stateroom." It, of course, had nothing to say.

I didn't want to bring it along, Aleck. I knew it would cause me embarrassment, but it pleaded so hard I couldn't resist. I thought I had definitely put it away, but just as I started out of the house there it was on the floor right beside the front door, looking so pitiful that I just impulsively picked it up and shoved it in my hip pocket. The thought occurred to me that it was sort of Frenchy, at that, and might make the girls aboard think I was a Latin lover or at least a latent one.

* * * *

Well, Aleck, the little escapade ruined me. Everywhere I went about the boat the better element shunned me. I could hear whispers behind my back.

"There goes the man," I would hear, "whose beret got into Miss Strowbar's stateroom."

Berets have no idea, I am sure, the pain they cause their parents. Here is a beret that I thought I had trained properly. I had tried so hard to impress it with the importance of staying in its beret's place. And then to think it had to go, at the first opportunity, and get into Miss Strowbar's stateroom.

I'll have to admit, Aleck, that if it had to get in somebody's stateroom Miss Strowbar's was a pretty good one to get in; but, Aleck, why did it have to get in anybody's stateroom? That's the question.

* * * *

You can't imagine what I went through. It was only this morning that I asked the hatchet-faced woman who acts as the censor aboard if I could have a few words in private with her.

"I want to tell you from the bottom of my heart," I said, "that I don't know how my beret got into Miss Strowbar's room."

She turned up her nose at me, Aleck, and walked away, muttering something about fathers being just like their berets. Aleck, this was terrible. What she plainly intimated was that it was a wonder I was not the one in Miss Strowbar's stateroom instead of the beret.

Oh, people can be so unfair.

* * * *

Well, sir, this afternoon I was alone in my stateroom, an outcast, just puttering away. Lo and behold I suddenly beheld my beret behind my trunk. It was not my beret at all that Miss Strowbar had found in her stateroom. I was so overjoyed I fairly raced out to the deck holding out to Miss Strowbar the beret which I had thought to be mine, I demanded indignantly:

"Miss Strowbar, is this the beret you found in your stateroom?"

"You know very well it is," she said.

"Well, hah, hah, hah, it's not mine. Here is my beret." And I withdrew my own little beret from my hip pocket and brought it proudly into view.

"Oh, my goodness!" everybody gasped.

Then somebody had a frightened thought and jumped up and raced to his stateroom with everybody following. It developed, Aleck, that in nearly every stateroom there was a beret; that the ship was literally infested with them. They must breed like mice, Aleck. Anyway, when the boat gets to Havre the captain intends to get some powder and give the boat a thorough scouring.

Philippines Fear Ruin From Tax on Exports

Analysts Predict Increasing Levy After 5-Year Independence Transition Period Will Close Industries.

By Vincente Albano Pacis.

MANILA, P. I., Aug. 13.—As the various American import limitations begin to be applied on Philippine products, and as the vanguard of the Congressional delegation to the Philippines to study necessary amendments to the independence law, in the person of Senator Hayden of Arizona, reaches the Islands, the Philippines' idea of such amendments is fast taking shape.

This is evident in a recent press statement made by Vincent Singson Encarnacion, acting secretary of finance and secretary of agriculture and commerce. His idea of the necessary amendments consists of three points, a combination of all of which sums up the total Philippine demand, but each of which is an alternative in the event of a bargain or compromise.

The points are:

1. Extension of the free trade between America and the Philippines, albeit with justifiable limitations.
2. Tariff and trade autonomy.
3. Shortening of the ten-year period of transition in the independence law to five years.

Continuation of the present limited free trade arrangement is, of course, the line of least resistance for the Philippines. The independence law provides for reasonable limitations on the principal Philippine exports to America—sugar, cocoanut oil and cordage—during the ten years of transition, and the application of a gradually increasing export tax in Manila on the duty-free portion of Philippine exports to America during the last five years of the ten-year period.

Gradually Increasing Export Tax Feared.

ALTHOUGH the Filipinos, together with Americans in business in the islands, seem to be quite reconciled to reasonable American import limitations, such as those provided in the Jones-Costigan law and the independence law, they abhor the imposition of export tax on shipments within the limitation quotas, such as specified in the latter legislation. Even the most brutally frank analysts of the situation, including Horace B. Pond, president of the most potent American corporation in the islands, admit that under the independence law, the first five years of the ten-year transition period will be quite bearable and that Philippine prosperity will be quite safe under the conditions imposed. But even the most optimistic fears the result of the imposition of the gradually increasing export tax.

The opinion is prevalent that the export tax will force the closure of local industries so that independence which is to come after the ten-year period will find a country economically wrecked. And, used to the great conveniences of the free trade, Americans and Filipinos in the Philippines naturally look upon its continuation as the sine qua non of the economic life of the Philippines.

The criticism of this demand is that the philosophy behind the period of transition is precisely to wean away the Philippines from the highly protected American market, and that the imposition of limitation quotas and export tax is intended to force the essential readjustment to take place. The advocates of the demand have a ready reply: that the Philippine industries now dependent on the American market and which can not survive the loss of this market will certainly liquidate of their own accord during the 10-year period. This, of course, sounds well in theory but the temptation to "make a killing" within the ten years and to let the country and independence be damned thereafter is ever present.

It is also advanced that if readjustment is the purpose of the transition period, the law is defective in that it does not give the Philippines the necessary elbow-room to accomplish it. From this belief arises the demand for tariff and trade autonomy. It is contended that the independence law limits Philippine exportation to the United States, but extends no authority to the islands to regulate American exportation to the Philippines. Furthermore, while the Philippines are forced gradually to renounce the American market, it is given no opportunity to win other markets abroad. It is just and equitable, it is therefore pointed out, that such an opportunity be given the islands so that by the time the American market is closed to Philippine products, the islands will have opened new outlets for its goods that are unwanted in the United States.

Convinced They Must Seek Other Markets.

THE proposal to shorten the transition period of five years is a scheme to evade the export tax which the independence law imposes beginning on the sixth year of the ten-year period. Advocates of this scheme believe that even abrupt independence after the fifth year would be preferable to the export tax because an independent Philippines would have the necessary power and authority to negotiate trade treaties with other countries.

All of these proposals are based on the conviction that Philippine products can not hurdle the full American tariff and that they must seek other markets abroad, the sooner the better.

As a consolation looming up to dissipate this feeling of pessimism is China, a next-door neighbor. China, it is believed, is on the eve of perpetuating a great historical justice. It was the vast Chinese market that primarily attracted American arms Orientward to colonize the Philippines; now it is the Chinese market that may help the Philippines extricate itself from the economic grip of America.

Only last week, the First Good Will Trip to Amoy of Filipino and Chinese business men, made avowedly with the purpose of fostering Sino-Philippine trade relations, was completed. To a man, these business men returned preaching the belief that China, whose urban sections are on the initial stages of a manufacturing epoch, is the future Philippine market. China, they say, so vast and so near, can buy raw materials and the Philippines, which, thanks to the American stimulation, is well-developed for the purpose, can absorb its manufactures.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Bill Simpkins, U. S. A., (A Study in Paternalism.)

Bill Simpkins led a happy life,
He never knew a care—
The Government looked after him
And kept him from despair;
When Bill was born the U. S. A.
Directed, in the main,
And bureaus down in Washington
Kept mother free from pain.

II.

The sicknesses of infancy
Bill Simpkins never knew;
A Federal agent cut his teeth
For him without ado;
Bill never had the colic, for
The B. R. A. S. B.
(The Babes' Relief and Soothing Board)
Prevented it, you see.

III.

He never had to learn to walk
Because from Washington
The AAA and NRA
First taught him how to run;
The struggle to express himself
Bill Simpkins never had—
The Government just taught the kid
Instead of ma and dad.

IV.

Through boyhood Bill went happily,
His manner ever gay;
His swimming holes were chosen by
The good old U. S. A.
He fished in ponds just packed with fish
Below a roaring dam
Constructed in paternal mood
By good old Uncle Sam.

V.

When Bill grew up to man's estate
And thought he'd like to wed
He asked for aid from Washington
And this is what it said
"Please state your color, sex and age,
Your height, address and weight;
Some bureau here will do the rest
And choose the proper mate."

VI.

A bureau picked him out a girl
And showed him how to woo;
It sent him daily bulletins
That told him what to do;
A code prescribed the length of time
For him to hold her hand
And specified sweet little words
That she would understand

VII.

He had no money for a ring,
But hurried to the phone;
Some NRA man answered it
And then arranged a loan.
Bill didn't have a place to live
But still he had no fears;
He got one on another loan
Due in two hundred years!

VIII.

It dawned on Bill when he got back
From quite a honeymoon
That he had never had a job
And ought to get one soon;
He wired Washington at once
And, oh this carefree life!
He soon worked for the U. S. A.—
And likewise did his wife!

IX.

"I'd love a little baby," said
Bill's wife to him one day;
"I'll write to Washington," said Bill,
"And see if it's okay!"
The answer broke Bill Simpkins' heart
And killed his trusting maid—
It read "In re this subject we Deny you Fed'ral aid!"

* * * *

L'Envoi.

The Simpkins now rest in a plot
Deaf to the chirping birds;
An easy-payment monument
Bears on it these few words
"Here lieth two Americans
Who couldn't stand the blow
Of asking governmental aid
And hearing it say "No!"

Never Mind; Return My Coin, Please.

The Government has taken over the Cuban telephone. So never mind trying to get that Havana girl on the wire.

If You Want the Wagon Painted You Pay More

By Robert Quillen.

A certain mechanic who felt sorry for himself visited the town philosopher and complained of his hard life.

"I am a wage slave," said he. "The birds and animals live without work, while I must toil seven hours a day to get a living."

"Rats!" said the philosopher politely. "Do you enter a store with one dollar in your pocket and expect it to buy an armload of groceries, a suit of clothes and a car?"

"Of course not," said the mechanic. "I expect only a dollar's worth for a dollar."

"In that case," said the philosopher, "you have no reason to complain. You can live without working any more than the birds and animals do if you are content to live as they do.

"An American thinker once demonstrated that a man can live all year on the proceeds of a few weeks' toil. And in the South Seas, people live happily without doing any work at all, except a little fishing, and that is play.

"It isn't a mere living that requires so much toil. It is the frills. How many pair of pants have you?"

"Three," confessed the mechanic.

"Just so," said the philosopher. "You aren't content with what you need. You must adorn yourself and eat fancy rations and have entertainment. So it isn't a living you sweat for, but show-off money, luxury money and pleasure money."

"Just the same," grumbled the mechanic, "I slave for a boss."

"No, you don't," said the philosopher. "He has little to do with it. Shrewd men tease you by displaying gaudy play-pretties to make you covetous; so you slave to get money to buy the things.

"You might be working for yourself, spading your garden or chopping your winter wood, but you prefer working for the men who offer the play-pretties. And you could go to bed at dark, but no; you must sit up and burn expensive electricity."

"But such things make life easier and better," said the mechanic.

"So they do," agreed the philosopher. "But they are the icing on the cake. And if you desire icing, pay for it and quit grouching."

Anecdotes.

Mr. Robinson Smith, the American scholar who lives in Nice, France, from whose collection of proverbs I quoted yesterday, gives his mind a vacation now and then, by collecting anecdotes, which he prints in small private editions for his friends. I have just received from him a thin paper pamphlet with the title, "150 Anecdotes, Collected by R. S."

Here are some of them: The district visitor asked, "How many are seven times six?" "Forty-two," said a small boy. "Pretty good," replied the district visitor. "Pretty good to hell: it's perfect," said the boy.

On the eighth green a Scotchman said to his daughter: "Mary, isn't this your birthday?" "It is, father." "Well, I'll give you this hole."

Few men can make a joke and drive it home—Henry Ford did it.

Byron wrote of Southey's poem: "This poem will be read long after Homer and Virgil are forgotten—but not before."

A provincial judge in India sent the following telegram to Calcutta: "A new saint has arisen in this province. The police are watching him."

In translating to Prof. Kittredge I mispronounced the word exquisite. He corrected me, and when I said I did not know it was pronounced that way, he remarked, "That is why I told you."

I asked the Englishman how he liked California. He replied, "Much: only I miss talk about the weather."

Said the fond mother to the young man at the dance: "My daughter speaks all languages." "Esperanto?" "Yes, like a native."

At Winchester in 1905 in the croquet finals, one woman, suspecting the other of cheating, said: "I have been accustomed to play with ladies." To this the other retorted: "I have not been so fortunate."

Said the Emperor Francis Joseph, when he was informed that an old countess wished to kiss him: "I have been spared nothing."

Notice in a Scotch church: "Those who prefer to put buttons rather than money in the offertory, are asked to put in their own buttons, and not those taken from the cushions."

There was a young lady of Whitby,
Who was very much bothered and bit by Diminutive things
Without any wings
That made her unpleasant to sit by.

Charles Lamb said, "My theory is to enjoy life, but my practice is against it."

Mark Twain said, "Don't, like the cat, try to get more out of an experience than there is in it. The cat, having sat upon a hot stove lid, will not sit upon a hot stove lid again. Nor upon a cold stove lid."

Fruit Growers Protest Ouster

Reason for Goldsborough Dismissal From Loan Group Demanded.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—Protest of the dismissal of E. Lee Goldsborough, Shepherdstown, W. Va., fruit grower, as president of the East Central Fruit Growers Production Credit Association, Federal loan "local" for orchardists of this belt, was ordered made to proper officials and forwarded to the White House at a week-end meeting of the executive and marketing committees of the West Virginia Horticulture Society.

The meeting protested the dismissal and refused to name a successor. Mr. Goldsborough was notified of his removal, it was stated, just before the corporation moved its headquarters to Hagerstown, Md., from Baltimore. The notification came from President George H. Stevenson, of the Production Credit Corporation of Baltimore, parent of the local. Goldsborough immediately resigned as a member of the board of directors.

The resolution requests a statement of reasons from Stevenson or other proper officials.

The protest was ordered sent to President Stevenson, President H. S. Mackey, Federal Intermediate Credit Bank, Baltimore; Gov. William I. Myers, Farm Credit Administration, Washington; Commissioners M. Garwood of FCA, to the West Virginia Representatives in Congress and to President Roosevelt.

Rebecca Beverage Gets Beauty Crown

Staunton, Va., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—Miss Rebecca Beverage has been chosen "Miss Highland County" and will represent that county's American Legion post at the State convention in Lynchburg, September 2 to 5.

She was picked from a field of 30, and the recipient of a loving cup presented by E. B. Jones. At the Lynchburg convention a State-wide beauty contest will be held.

In connection with the selection of "Miss Highland County," the drum and bugle corps of Clemmer-McGuffin Post, Staunton, gave a concert. Judges were Mrs. George Hayes, Franklin, Va.; F. A. Smith and Dr. S. S. Cook, of Washington. Miss Frances Aumbiff, Alta Vista, directed the contest.

Teacher Resigns In West Virginia After 56 Terms

Clarksburg, W. Va., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—Completing a record said to be without parallel in West Virginia, Miss Mildred Anna F. Dunn, veteran Clarksburg school teacher, has resigned from the faculty of Washington Irving High School here.

Miss Dunn taught in the local schools for 56 consecutive years, never was tardy and never missed a single day of school work except when there was a death in her family.

Quintuplets' New Home to Be Named In Doctor's Honor

Callander, Ontario, Aug. 13 (AP).—The new home of the Dionne quintuplets, it was announced today, is to be "the Defoe Hospital," named in honor of Dr. A. R. Defoe, who attended at the birth of the five little girls 11 weeks ago today and has seen them every day since.

The building, now under construction, is expected to be ready September 1, when it will be opened ceremoniously.

Even the parents of the children will not be allowed to visit the building, and the babies will be kept isolated there as long as they need constant medical attention.

Dr. Dafoe reported the babies had made an aggregate gain of 9¾ ounces in weight during the last 24 hours, each of the children having shared in the increase.

Public contributions and donations from Ontario manufacturers made possible construction of the new home, said W. H. Alderson, executive of the Red Cross Society.

Bridge Across Rapidan Is Opened to Traffic

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—Traffic on the Germanna Ford Bridge, crossing the Rapidan River on the Culpeper-Fredericksburg highway, began yesterday when the bridge was opened. The bridge is 454 feet long and has a 24-foot roadway.

Seaboard Orders 300 Cars.

Richmond, Aug. 13 (AP).—The Richmond Car Corporation will begin work on 300 freight cars ordered by the Seaboard Air Line by September 15, company officials announced today. One hundred and fifty former employes of the company will start work then.

Buffalo Herd Saved From Montana Fire

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 13 (AP).—One of the few remaining herds of buffalo in the United States was safe today after a threat by fire that burned over 6,000 acres on the National bison range at Moiese, Mont.

Grass on about a third of the area went up in smoke, the forestry office at Missoula, Mont., said. The foresters had their troubles with three fires in the Selway forest of central Idaho.

Typhoid Hits Talbot County.

St. Michaels, Md., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—Baffled by an outbreak of typhoid, Talbot County health authorities are trying to ferret out the source of ten cases throughout the county. Five of them developed here, three in Oxford and two in Easton.

Work on Airport Will Be Resumed

New Market, Va., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—Work on New Market's airport, begun with CWA funds last March and discontinued April 1, will be resumed not later than Wednesday, A. W. Card, assistant State airport adviser, announced.

Local labor, however, will not be used in the construction work, which is expected to last three weeks. A crew of 13 men of the Department of Commerce will be moved here from Warrenton.

The project is being resumed by the department in cooperation with the aeronautics branch of the State Highway Department.

Study of Maryland Seafood Trade Due At Wisconsin U.

Crisfield, Md., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—Crisfield's seafood industry will become a part of the studies in one of the Midwestern Universities if plans now under way by the Crisfield Rotary Club materialize.

G. Raymond Matthews, president of the club, has received a letter from the University of Wisconsin requesting information on the industry.

Photographs and information on the planting and picking of strawberries around Marion, strawberry center, also were requested by the university.

It is understood that these reports are to be used for educational purposes.

A committee has been appointed by the club to act on the request. It includes Fred B. Gerald, C. Allen Carlson, Clinton Corbin and J. Millard Tawes.

Bar Session to Hear Hunter and Goolrick

Richmond, Va., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—Thomas Lomax Hunter, Richmond lawyer and newspaper columnist, and C. O'Connor Goolrick, of Fredericksburg, former State Senator, have accepted invitations to address the Virginia State Bar Association in its annual meeting August 21 on the New York-Bermuda liner Britannic.

Mr. Hunter will speak on "Statutory Taboos." Mr. Goolrick will discuss "Liquor Control in Virginia."

Arson Suspects Held.

Snow Hill, Md., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—Arthur Emmons and Harry Webb, of Newark, Md., were arrested last night by Deputy Sheriff C. E. West, in connection with burning a barn Saturday owned by Preston Jones, also of Newark.

Direct Loans to Industry

About as much progress as could be expected is being made in direct loans to industry under an amendment made to the Federal Reserve Act by the last Congress. And obviously it is going to take a long time for such advances to have any appreciable effect upon the business structure.

So observes Ralph West Robey in his regular financial review in The Post today. Read it . . . and make a point of reading Robey every day.

Artists at Fox "Tell All" With Escape Cut Off

Bunchuk Returns to Radio; Trahan for Grand Opera; About the Showshops.

(Reprinted from yesterday's last edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

To reassure myself that the current week's stage show at Loew's Fox Theater was as good as I thought it was at the first performance on Friday, I went around and viewed it again from back stage Saturday night. I find I was mistaken in my first appraisal. It isn't as good a bill as I thought it was on Friday. It is better.

As a matter of fact, I did more than merely view the stage bill over again. With the connivance of Lou Brown, of the Loew publicity department, I went back an hour or so before the last stage performance was due to go on and spent that time prowling about the dressing rooms that line both sides of the labyrinthine corridors forming the bewildering maze that is the backstage Fox.

Intruding upon all and sundry during their last rest period of the four-show day, Lou and I were probably as welcome as poison ivy or that civet cat at the garden party, but, pestilence or not, the imposition paid for itself in interesting and valuable information.

A Broadway Record.

For instance, we were reminded by that eminent solo cellist and conductor, Yascha Bunchuk, that for 14 of the 15 years he has been in America he has been at the Capitol Theater in New York. Thus he found himself under the stage direction of an old friend when Division Manager Carter Barron turned the routining of this week's stage bill over to Gene Ford, down from the Capitol to stage the All-Washington revue, "Going Native," opening at the Fox next Friday.

Asked how much of his time he devoted to original composition, Bunchuk replied that he sets himself no fixed schedule of production, but composes only as inspiration prompts him to set down on paper something that has sprung suddenly into his consciousness from nobody knows where.

Yascha Bunchuk was born in Petrograd, Russia, and is no stranger to our own National Capital. He was here first during his first year in America, as a member of the New York Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Walter Damrosch. He returned later with Roxy and His Gang, when they appeared at Wardman Park and still later when they were feted by the National Press Club and put on their performance in the Washington Auditorium, with the late President Coolidge and Mrs. Coolidge in the audience.

This fall, Bunchuk is to rejoin Roxy—whom we knew in the tropics years ago as Sam Rothapfel, an association, by the way, with which Bunchuk, surprisingly, seemed entirely familiar—on the Castoria hour, a sponsored commercial broadcast, that will take the air every Saturday night from 8 to 8:45. Roxy, of course, will preside, but Bunchuk will do a little important violoncelloing and will conduct an orchestra of 50 pieces. That will be worth listening to.

We Spoil a Party.

We crashed the Al Trahan-Lady Yukona Cameron dressing room just in time to break up a crackers, cheese and beer festival, which we were urged to join. But we had only that minute come from the dinner table. So what? So if I was a member of a band serenading some genial bonifface who offered to fill our instruments with beer, I probably would be playing either the cymbals or a piccolo!

AL TRAHAN

Corroborating what I have insistently harped away on for a good many seasons now, Saturday night's visit elicited proof of the superlative musicianship of both of these delightful artists. It has always been my contention that both Al Trahan and Lady Yukona Cameron have exceptional voices and that Al is a virtuoso at the pianoforte. About Lady Cameron's piano playing I did not know until Saturday night. And that necessitates going back a bit.

Born in the Yukon.

Lady Cameron—she is, of course Mrs. Trahan in private life—was given the name Yukona because she was the first white child born in Dawson City, in the Yukon, during one of the gold rushes in which her father, a noted mining engineer, engaged. He perished in the North and Yukona was taken back to Chicago, where at the age of 18 she made her professional debut as concert pianiste with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. To her was accorded the first scholarship bestowed by Franz Prochowski, president of the Music Teachers' League.

And now a similar honor is coming to Al Trahan. Some one told Franz Prochowski that Al had a voice. Meeting him on the street one day when the act was playing Jersey City, Al told him they were playing vaudeville and Prochowski was so outraged that he almost didn't hear Al sing. However, he did make the trek and after the performance hailed Trahan as "one of the finest barytones in America—the equal of Tibbett or John Charles Thomas."

Al's Turn Now.

As a result of this appraisal by the voice expert who has coached such eminent artists as Tito Schipa, Lily Pons, Galli-Curci and many other stars of the opera, Al Trahan has been awarded a scholarship that entitles him to six months' study under the foremost voice teachers in Europe and the personal coaching of Prochowski.

Preliminary to all this, Prochowski is to present Trahan in a recital in Carnegie Hall, New York, in October. The piano in the Trahan-Cameron dressing room is piled high with standard and classical ballads, operatic arias and all manner of difficult things for voice, which this man, who has been a slapstick comedian all of his professional career, is perfecting against the coming of October—with his wife as accompanist and, this week, Yascha Bunchuk providing cello obligatos and one thing and another to complete a distinguished trio that may be heard only in the dressing room between shows, but would be worth plenty at the box office.

Tonight John Charles Thomas is coming down from New York for a visit with Al and Lady Yukona, out at Wardman Park, over the piano and a buffet supper—probably with more cheese and beer. A lifelong friendship is back of their stopping at Wardman Park. George V. Riley, managing director of Wardman and the Capital's perfect host, was a schoolmate of Al's back in New Bedford, Mass., the home town of them both.

Lady Cameron Dangerous!

But you have to look out for this Lady Yukona Cameron. Saturday night when she came off, after the rough-house finish of the act, in which she does a Jim Londos to Al's Don George, she walked directly and ominously up to your reporter and hurled the challenge, "Do you wanna rassle?" right in his teeth.

Some one should have told her that I only fight with ladies I am sure I can whip!

It is a strenuous act that these two put on—27 minutes of unceasing effort that leaves them limp at the end. It is so severe a strain on their voices and their nerves, indeed, that they will not accept more than four weeks of consecutive bookings. Next week they lay off and will spend the time as guests at a yachting party given in their honor by friends off the Eastern Shore of Maryland.

Two genuine artists and two grand persons, these. As Al expresses it, tapping his heart gently with his fist, "We feel something here, but the clowning is a living!"

Al's first job, incidentally, was as a newspaper stereotyper in his native New Bedford. He could jump in now and replate a front page without turning a hair.

It would be easier than his act, at that!

That Platinum Blonde.

This little Ina Ray Hutton, who leads the feminine ensemble of instrumentalists known as the Melodears — this, in passing, is the old Alex Hyde band and he is still with it in the capacity of manager, with his wife presiding at one of the pianos and playing the orchestra bells — is a demure youngster of 18 whose home is in Chicago. She is a graduate of Hyde Park High School, which is not far from the source of our own early education, if any.

INA RAY HUTTON

Ina Ray broke into "show business" only four years ago with a Gus Edwards act, graduating to Lew Leslie's "Clowns in Clover" and George White's "Melody." Later she was a "Follies" decoration, which is all any handsome platinum with a long bob needs to go far. She has only been swishing the stick in front of the Melodears since late June of this year, but has a considerable route ahead of her.

Just because I said in Saturday's review that she employed no baton in conducting the orchestra, she used one Saturday night in the first number. That's the way these blondes are!

A "Golden" Torch Singer.

Up one flight we found Joan Abbott, the "torch" singer, and her mother. Miss Abbott, who has scored individual triumphs in George White's "Scandals" and as Ethel Merman's successor in "Take a Chance," is a golden blonde, described by a New York admirer in a recent letter to this desk as "Just a load of dynamite and a bunch of loveliness." That about says it, although I should say that my correspondent leaned a little toward the conservative.

Miss Abbott, as you know if you have heard her sing, is a sort of composite of Clarice Vance, the original "coon shouter," Nora Bayes and Sophie Tucker. She has presence, personality and a voice, plus what it takes to "put it over."

She is a native of Brooklyn and comes by her stage career naturally, since she attended Erasmus Hall High School, a sort of cradle of Thespis. Among other alumnae of Erasmus Hall may be mentioned Clara Bow, Lilian Gish, the Talmadges, Alice Lake, Gertrude Niesen, Eleanor Holm, a classmate of Miss Abbott's, and a long list of others who have made their marks either in pictures or on the stage.

Although Joan Abbott is only 19, she has scored on Broadway, in films and over the airwaves. After her local engagement she goes into rehearsal for a new revue that George White will put on in October.

A Great Little Dancer.

Across the hall from Miss Abbott, we interrupted a nap Lucille Page was enjoying, long enough to tell her how sorry we were to have missed her call the last time she was here about ten months ago when Maxine Doyle brought her around to say "hello."

LUCILLE PAGE

That, of course, recalled that Lucille did her first trouping in the same chorus with Maxine and the Gale Quadruplets. Jane, Jean, Joan and June—a team which seems to be pretty thoroughly scattered to the four winds (one for each quadruplet) at the moment.

It also recalled Lucille's "Dinosaur Dance" in Earl Carroll's "Vanities" and the fact that it was while appearing at the Fox here in a single act that Earl Carroll spotted her and signed her for the "Vanities."

Lucille Limbers Up.

Lucille Page, to my notion, is the greatest of all contemporary acrobatic dancers.

A little later on when we were down on the stage, she came bouncing in and proceeded to limber up to the tunes of the Melodears. Limbering up for Lucille is equivalent to tying oneself into such inextricable physical tangles as to make that Gordian knot look like a simple slip-noose.

There was one time there when I was pretty sure we would have to cut her apart, but she managed to get back on her feet again in time to bound out on that stage and score the same kind of hit her dancing always scores.

That means stopping the show.

Dots and Dashes.

Albert Sardo, chairman of the committee on arrangements for the convention of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, to be held at the Mayflower September 24 to 27, inclusive, announces that by arrangement with the Earle Theater, where they are appearing this week, the Pickens Sisters and "The Voice of Popeye, the Sailor," will take part in the benefit performance to be given Wednesday midnight at the Howard Theater . . . Bill Robinson, the world's greatest tap dancer, also has promised to be here . . . "Welcome to His Excellency" will be continued throughout this week at the Roadside Theater, the first week having played to S. R. O. business every night . . . Paul Walter will play Prince Paul, vice Marvin Beers, victim of an emergency appendectomy, with Harold Weinberger, director, returning to his original part of the military aid . . . There will be no dark week intervening between this and "The Drunkard," which will open on Tuesday night, August 21 . . . Rebecca Tarwater, the "Tennessee warbler," will headline the "olio" entr-actes of "The Drunkard," on the Roof of the Willard on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday nights of this week . . . Miss Tarwater it was who appeared in the title role of the Community Players' production of "Alice in Wonderland" in the National Sylvan Theater recently . . . This week's Summer Festival program in the National Sylvan Theater will be provided by Marian Chace and Her Dancers, Wednesday night at 8 . . . Nothing but rehearsals for cast and chorus of the "Going Native" revue to be presented at Loew's Fox next Friday . . . This morning at 9, rehearsal will be held at the Fox . . . Tonight at 7:30 the entire company will rehearse on the stage of the National . . . That will go on for days . . . "One More River," at RKO-Keith's, is doing the biggest business the house has scored in the past six months . . . Receipts for the first five days of the engagement, Wednesday through yesterday, exceed any average eight days on the books . . . It is a cinch to hold over beyond the single week ending tomorrow night . . . Well, why not? It's that kind of a picture.

Drought Note.

There was "one more river" down the alley yesterday afternoon that detoured through the back yard and washed the zinnia bed 4 yards down the block before it could be roped and towed back.

And the weather report was "Fair, not much change in temperature." So it poured torrentially and got cooler. Fie!

Platinum Sub-Deb in Cellophane

The taffy-haired Toby Wing, reputedly Jackie Coogan's increased heart-beat, has achieved an unusual effect in personal adornment by fashioning a flimsy sort of cape out of shredded cellophane, of all things! Miss Wing, one of the more pulchritudinous of the screen's soubrettes, makes up in decorative quality whatever she may lack in profundity as an actress—and she's not a bad little actress, at that.

Dry Attorney Fights to Save Liquor License

Battles Opened on Client's Property, Claim of Officials.

The District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday took under advisement revocation of the Class A liquor license of Arthur Seagren at 1336 Connecticut avenue northwest.

Under Class A licenses beverage may be sold in sealed containers for consumption off the premises. It was charged that taxicab drivers opened bottles and drank from them as they left the store.

George E. Sullivan, ardent dry and one of the leaders in the fight to bar licenses from Takoma Park, Mr. Seagren's attorney, protested that the licensee had told the drivers not to drink in front of his store.

He still is dry and against licensing of private persons to sell liquor, Mr. Sullivan said in a statement he issued "to avoid possible misunderstanding." He was giving his services to Mr. Seagren for nothing, he said.

"I want to say that I have at no time, and shall at no time, take remuneration from any source for my services in connection with any liquor matter. My services are not for sale to anyone in respect of this subject," Mr. Sullivan said.

"So long as the law licenses private individuals to conduct a liquor business in any part of the District, it is decidedly in the public interest that the most trustworthy and respectable licensees should be protected against cancellation of their licenses upon unfounded charges.

"I still believe the sale of intoxicating liquor should not be given over to private business, with its direct tendency to increase the demand and appetite. Supplying of any demand should be by the public authorities. I have faith that the law will be changed before long. But until it is the law should be respected, including the wholesome provision for exempting community sections which desire to be dry from any sale of liquor therein."

Revocation of the license of Abraham Lipschutz to sell 3.2 beer at 203 Fourth street also was taken under advisement. Lipschutz was charged with selling beer after 2 a. m., the closing hour fixed in District regulations.

Escort Arranged For May's Body

Will Leave Arlington for Annapolis Thursday.

The body of the late Ambassador Paul May of Belgium will be taken from the main vault at Arlington National Cemetery Thursday morning and escorted to Annapolis, where the body will be placed on board the Navy cruiser Pensacola for transportation to Antwerp, it was announced yesterday at the War Department.

The Marine Band, a battalion of Marines and Bluejackets, the Third Cavalry Band, mounted, and a squadron of Cavalry will take part in the ceremonies.

The procession will start at the Fort Myer gate at Arlington at 10:30 a. m. District of Columbia and Maryland State police will join the procession and will make up the escort to Annapolis.

Army Motorization Bids to Be Opened

6,020 Trucks, Trailers and Cars to Be Bought.

Bids for 6,020 trucks, cars and trailers soon will be opened at the War Department, it was stated yesterday.

Tomorrow the contractors' proposals on the first of the lot of contracts will be opened in the office of Maj. Gen. Louis Bash, quartermaster general. The last of the bids will be opened September 11.

The cars to be acquired will be used in the Army motorization program. Funds have been allotted by the Public Works Administration. Awards are expected to be made shortly after the bids are opened.

Minimum Wage Scales Sought In Relief Jobs

Street Will Submit Plan to Committee Seeking Work for Idle.

Minimum wage scales for various classes of work not now prescribed for in NRA codes or other Government labor regulations probably will be established by the committee in charge of preparing a broad job-finding campaign for District unemployed.

Elwood Street, director of public welfare, will submit such a recommendation to a meeting of the committee at 11 a. m. Thursday in his office in the District Building.

Many persons have offered to give employment to persons on relief rolls at wages too low to be acceptable to the relief and employment officials, Mr. Street said. This was particularly true in the case of domestics, he said. Several have proposed to give "a good home" to a needy person in return for their work.

"I believe that wages paid should at least be living wages," Mr. Street said. "Less than that simply will not achieve the purpose of making needy persons self-sustaining."

Details of the campaign have not been worked out. Various members of the executive committee have been at work drafting their own ideas of how the job should be gone about. These are to be submitted at the meeting Thursday when it is hoped that various good features of each can be incorporated in a general plan which will be submitted to Commissioner George E. Allen when he returns from a vacation.

One of the features will be a closer registration of those on the job-seeking lists of the employment service.

Various organizations and groups will be enlisted in the drive to find, as Commissioner Allen put it, 15,000 persons who would undertake to give a person a job for a year. The Citizens Associations, business and civic organizations and clubs, women's clubs, church groups, and others will be enlisted in the work.

Rites to Be Held For C. E. Tiffany

Warrenton, Va., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Currell Elgin Tiffany, 58, who died suddenly Sunday, will be conducted at the Warrenton Baptist Church by the Rev. James T. Herndon at 3 p. m. tomorrow, with interment in the Warrenton Cemetery.

Mr. Tiffany was president of the Fauquier National Bank. He had been well until the day before his death.

Honorary pallbearers will be the directors of the Fauquier National Bank, J. H. C. Beverley, E. L. Childs, Aldrich Dudley, T. U. Dudley, A. G. Green, H. I. Hutton, J. W. McIntosh, Amos F. Payne, John Barton Payne, J. T. Pilcher, John C. Rawlings, J. Donald Richards, J. W. Slaughter, W. S. Strother and Joseph A. Ullman, and T. Turney Day, of the Peoples National Bank in Warrenton.

Girl, 19, Dies as Fire Sweeps Texas Town

Henderson, Tex., Aug 13 (AP).—Miss Sarah Pearl Phillips, 19, was burned to death and eight business houses were destroyed in a fire which virtually wiped out the town of Wright City today.

The charred body of Miss Phillips, a beauty shop operator, was found in the ruins of the building where she lived. Origin of the fire which swept through the oil town had not been determined.

In Again

Lucy Young, colored, went to jail for 30 days on intoxication charges yesterday.

To the courtroom spectator, she was just another prisoner. But to Judge Isaac R. Hitt she was an "old acquaintance."

"Back again?" the judge inquired.

"Yes, sir; but I'm not guilty this time."

"Well, Lucy, you've been in jail 62 times. You must like it. We'll make this the sixty-third time."

Private Weather Man Blames Drought on Superheated Sky

1,000-Foot Ceiling Holds Back 20-Foot Deluge, H. J. Brown Says.

By Robert T. Whitney.

Although the air above the great Midwestern drought area contains enough water for a deluge that would make the Biblical flood seem like a spring shower, little rain falls on the parched fields below because it is too hot to rain.

That, according to Herbert Janvrin Brown, is the outstanding reason for the drought. Over the dry area, he says, hovers water in tremendous quantities, but it is at a very high temperature. Nature has been unable to cool it sufficiently to cause precipitation.

Above the drought area, says Mr. Brown, who conducts a weather forecasting service in competition with the Weather Bureau, is a column of hot air, 4 to 5 miles high, which contains 2 per cent of water. In 1,000 feet of this air there is 20 feet of water.

Effects to Last for Years.

This water is not changed to rain, the forecaster declared, because of the extremely high temperatures which have prevailed in the Middle West this summer—because even at high altitudes it has not been sufficiently cool to condense the water in any large quantities.

Although now, Mr. Brown believes, the back of the drought is broken and next year will see more abundant rainfall in the section, it will be three or four years before its bad effect is gone. One reason for this, he says, is that the ground water table is lower than ever before.

The ground water table is the level of the water below the ground which feeds springs and wells—it is the rain water which does not run off on the surface but sinks into the ground. It will take three or four years of normal rains to restore this table to its normal height, he says.

There are some benefits even from such a dry spell, Mr. Brown pointed out. While the lack of rain has killed crops it has also killed enemies of crops, weeds and insects. These pests, he believes will be less abundant in the near future because of this.

Belt of Trees to Fail.

Like the Government experts, Mr. Brown sees a real threat that part of the Midwest will be an actual desert. He assigns the same reasons as they do, overgrazing and plowing-up of sod for wheat in submarginal areas, but does not believe in one cure they have placed faith in. That is the shelter belt of trees to be planted across the middle of the great plains from north to south. This project, which has already been started, will not work because the Government experts will not be able to make the trees grow, Brown says.

He pointed out that excepting cottonwoods and willows in river bottoms, there has never been anything approaching a forest on the great plains. The region is too dry, he says, to support forest vegetation, and there will be no shelter belt because the trees will die.

Desert Possible Destiny.

If the trees could be artificially supplied with water, it would be possible to make them grow, Mr. Brown said, adding that on the scale contemplated there would not be enough water available.

To fight the desert, this private weather man advocates getting the plains, or as much of the plains area as possible, back to sod, to the original grass which was there in the days of the buffalo. Unless this is done, he says, the central United States will have the same history as all deserts.

There isn't a desert in the world, Brown said, that was not made by man, that was not a once fertile area. The great deserts of central Asia were made by overgrazing. In the days of ancient Rome the northern Sahara was fertile wheat land, but too intense cultivation has resulted in making it a sea of sand.

Hospital Site Ruling Awaited

Commissioners Expect Speedy Decision by Secretary Ickes.

A speedy decision is expected of Public Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes in the District Tuberculosis Hospital site controversy, although the District Commissioners were unable to make an engagement yesterday to present their case.

The PWA board of review, it was learned, will meet probably tomorrow to recommend allocation of the remaining $29,000,000 in the PWA treasury for non-Federal projects.

As the $1,500,000 which the District has requested for the hospital site may come out of this fund, the Secretary is expected to make an early decision on whether he will allocate funds for construction of a hospital at Glenn Dale instead of at a higher elevation.

Following considerable investigation the Commissioners have decided to stand by their former finding that the Glenn Dale site, where the Children's Tuberculosis Hospital is located, is suitable for an adult hospital.

Previously, Secretary Ickes disapproved the Glenn Dale site in a conference with Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, but told newspapermen that he still has "an open mind."

Elbert Cox Heads U. S. Park in New Jersey

Appointment of Elbert Cox as superintendent of the Morristown National Historic Park, New Jersey, has been announced by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes.

For the past year he has been detailed to headquarters here of the National Park Service, prior to which he was assistant park historian at Colonial National Monument, Virginia. Before entering Government service he taught history at Tazewell (Va.) high school.

Homecoming Observed By Waynesboro Church

Waynesboro, Va., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—The fifth annual homecoming observance of the Lyndhurst Methodist Church attracted several hundred former members and friends of the church yesterday.

J. H. Furr was program chairman and introduced the two principal speakers, the Rev. I. C. Flory, Stuarts Draft, and the Rev. M. L. Fearnow, Staunton. Music was furnished by the combined Waynesboro Baraca Class orchestras.

West Virginia Creates Public Roads Fund

Charleston, W. Va., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—The West Virginia State government now has a "public works State highway fund," R. E. Talbott, State treasurer, has announced.

The treasury has just received $1,000,000 from a recent sale of State road bonds and Mr. Talbott says a new fund has been created under the title given into which the money has been placed. The fund will be used with a PWA grant, Mr. Talbott states, for State highway construction, improvement and maintenance.

Payments Due In Bank Stock Assessments

Receivers for 5 Closed D. C. Institutions Report "Gratifying" Reply.

Stockholders of five local banks in receivership were called on yesterday to pay all, or a first 25 per cent installment of a 100 per cent assessment on their stock levied by the Treasury Department July 7, 1934. Receivers Cary A. Hardee and Norman R. Hamilton, for these banks, described the response as gratifying.

As checks in mail postmarked up to last midnight will be accepted as paid on time, it will be a day or two before the receivers can estimate the percentage of the assessment that has been paid. Numerous stockholders paid in advance of the first installment date, some their full assessment.

Interest on Late Payments.

Stockholders will be allowed to pay in three more installments of 25 per cent each on September 13, October 13 and November 13. These payments, however, will include interest at the legal rate for the District from the maturity of the assessment, which was yesterday. The five banks were declared insolvent when the receivers were appointed, November 1, 1933.

Receiver Hardee, for the closed Federal-American National Bank & Trust Co., is charged with collection of $2,000,000 from its stockholders and Receiver Hamilton, for the four other banks, of $1,340,000, apportioned as follows: District National Bank, $1,000,000; Potomac Savings Bank, $140,000; Northeast Savings Bank, $100,000, and Seventh Street Savings Bank, $100,000.

Many Stockholders Involved.

The assessment must be met by 642 stockholders of Federal-American National Bank & Trust Co., 325 stockholders of District National Bank, 68 stockholders of Potomac Savings Bank, 185 stockhodlers of Northeast Savings Bank, and 123 stockholders of Seventh Street Savings Bank. Sixty-seven stockholders of District National Bank have appealed to the District Supreme Court to set aside the assessment on their holdings.

These banks, with two others, turned their prime assets over in a plan creating Hamilton National Bank last year. No assessment has been levied on stockholders of the other two, Washington Savings and Woodridge-Langdon Savings & Commercial Banks. All seven banks failed to reopen after the National banking holiday of March, 1933.

Assessments have now been levied against 12 of the 19 closed banks of the city. Stockholders of two of the remaining seven can not be assessed under terms of their organization.

Fighter Dies of Anger.

St. Clairsville, Ohio (U.P.).—Clement H. Andrews, 34, and Claude Thompson, 39, fought at a Fourth of July dance. Thompson died, Andrews was held. Afterward, an autopsy revealed that Thompson died from acute dilation of the heart, brought on by anger, rather than from a fist blow, as first thought.

Miss Barkley To Be Bride This Month

Parents Announce Her Engagement to Mr. MacArthur.

Young Couple to Make Home Here After Wedding Trip.

It would seem that August is running June a close race for the title of Month of Brides. Each day brings forth some new engagement announcement or selection of bridal date. The most recent announcement is of much interest to Senatorial as well as Army, Navy and residential circles in Washington.

Yesterday Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky and Mrs. Barkley announced the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Miss Laura Barkley, to Mr. Douglas MacArthur 2d, son of Mrs. Arthur MacArthur, of Washington and of the late Capt. MacArthur, U. S. N.

During the past year the young couple have been seen together at many, many gay affairs and in the warmer weather they have been constant swimming companions at the Chevy Chase Country Club.

Bride-Elect Studied Law.

The bride-elect is a granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Barkley, of Paducah, Ky., and of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brower, also of Kentucky. She is a sister of Mrs. Max O. Truitt, who before her wedding several years ago was Miss Marian Barkley. Miss Barkley was graduated from Holton Arms School and later attended the Sophie Newcomb School in New Orleans. She attended George Washington University, after which she studied law at the National University. She is a member of the Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority and for over a year has been secretary for her father "up on the Hill."

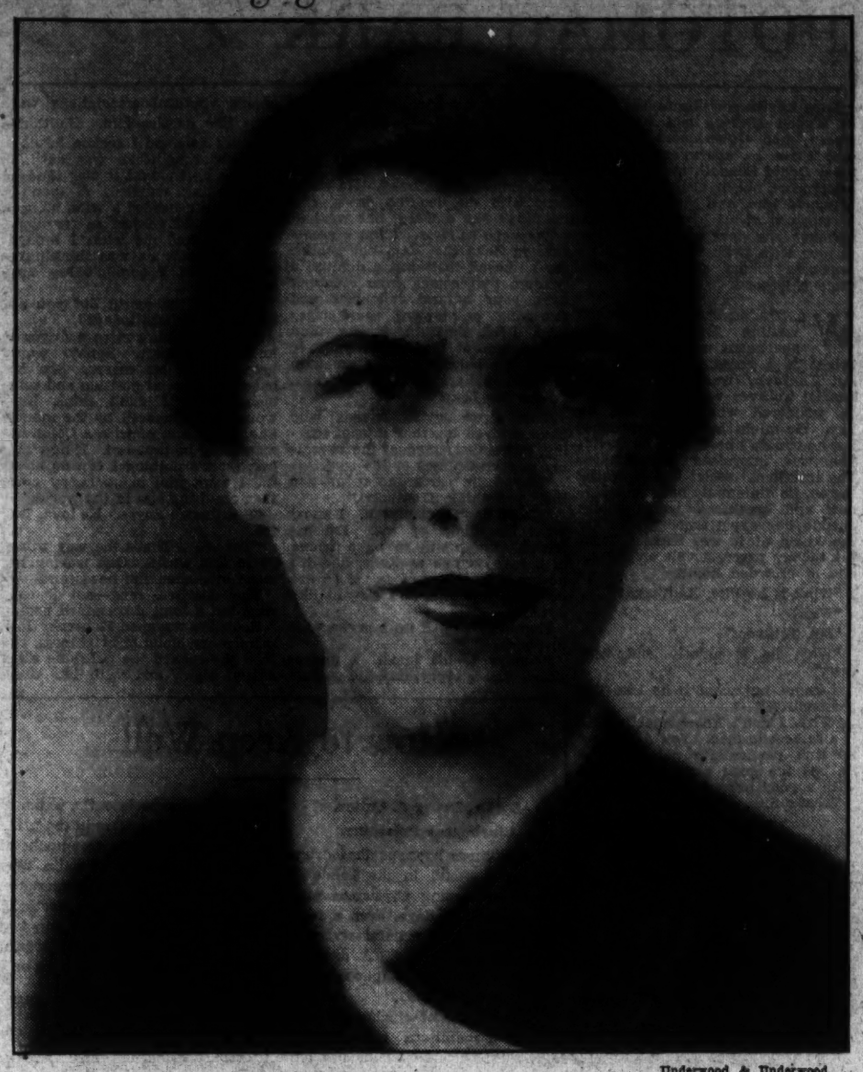
Mr. MacArthur was graduated from Milton Academy in 1928 and received his Bachelor's degreee from Yale University in 1932. After that he attended the Foreign Service School, finishing with high honors, and now, while awaiting an appointment, Mr. MacArthur, who is a lieutenant in the 306th Cavalry Reserves, is on duty with the War Department as adjutant of the subdivision for the Civilian Conservation Corps.

Nephew of Gen. MacArthur.

He is a member of the Wolf's Head and Psi Upsilon Fraternity of Yale. The bridegroom-elect is a nephew of Gen. Douglass MacArthur, Chief of Staff of the United States Army, and grandson of Mrs. Arthur MacArthur, sr., who makes her home with her son at Fort Myer, Va., and of the late Lieut. Gen. MacArthur, for whom the Coast Artillery post in southern California was named.

The wedding, which will be an informal one in the Barkley home on Cleveland avenue, will take place at 5 o'clock on Tuesday, August 21. Miss Barkley will be unattended. Mr. MacArthur will have his brother, Mr. Bowman MacArthur, as best man. Following their wedding trip, the young couple will make their home in Washington.

Latest Engagement in Senatorial Circles



Underwood & Underwood.

MISS LAURA BARKLEY,

whose parents, Senator and Mrs. Alben Barkley, have announced her engagement to Mr. Douglas MacArthur 2d, son of Mrs. Arthur MacArthur. The wedding will take place Tuesday, August 21, in the home of the bride-elect's parents on Cleveland avenue.

Miss Platt to Make Debut on Dec. 24

Is Graduate From Holton Arms School.

Now that summer is on the wane, society is looking forward and making plans for the coming seasons. One of the first debutantes to select and announce the date for her coming out party is Miss Jane Esther Platt, attractive daughter of Mr. Landra B. Platt, whose debut, which promises to be one of the most brilliant affairs of the winter, will take place Christmast Eve at the Chevy Chase Country Club.

Miss Platt was graduated from Holton Arms School in Washington, in June, 1933. Later she left on a six months' cruise around the world, returning to Washington in time for the midwinter parties last year.

Commander Frank Slingluff, U. S. N., and Mrs. Slingluff, are guests at the Shoreham, where they expect to pass a week. Mrs. Slingluff will return to Jamestown, R. I., at the end of the week, and expects to come back to Washington the first of October. Commander Slingluff is stationed here.

Mrs. Helen Moran is at Saratoga, where she has been the guest for several days of Mr. and Mrs. A. Hallow, of New York.

Secretary of War Dern Returns to Washington

The Secretary of War, Mr. George H. Dern, returned to Washington yesterday morning after an absence of several weeks, during which time he visited Panama, the West Coast and Chicago.

Mrs. Dern, with Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, and Miss Betsy Dern, returned to Washington August 6. They accompanied the Secretary on his trip through the canal and to the West Coast, where he went ashore to continue overland, and they returned by way of the canal on the same ship.

Mrs. Dunn Entertains Bacons at Newport

Representative and Mrs. Robert Low Bacon and their daughters, Miss Alexandra Bacon, Miss Virginia Bacon and Miss Martha Bacon, are the guests of Mrs. James Clement Dunn, wife of the chief of the protocol, in their summer home at Newport.

Mr. Dunn is in New York for a brief stay and today will meet the Prince and Princess Kaya, of Japan, when they land.

Selects Date for Debut

Hessler-Henderson, Inc.

MISS JANE ESTHER PLATT,

attractive daughter of Mr. Landra B. Platt, who will be among the debutantes of the coming season, has chosen December 24 as the date for her debut party, which will be given at the Chevy Chase Country Club.

Clare E. McGinley To Wed Mr. Doyle

Ceremony Will Take Place on September 1.

Mr. and Mrs. John B. McGinley have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Clare E. McGinley, to Mr. Kenneth W. Doyle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Doyle.

The bride-elect was graduated from Mount St. Joseph's College for Women at Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia. She has selected for the date of the wedding September 1. The ceremony will take place at 9 o'clock in St. Peter's Church. Her sister, Miss Marian McGinley, will be the maid of honor, and the bridesmaids will be Miss Irene O'Toole and Miss Genevieve O'Brien.

Mr. Doyle has chosen Mr. Roy Hoyle to serve as best man, and the ushers will be Mr. Leo McGinley, brother of the bride, and Mr. John Quinn.

Duke of Leeds Leaving Today

Accompanied by Duchess, Is Returning to New York.

The Duke and Duchess of Leeds, who were in Washington at the Mayflower for a brief stay are returning today to New York. They are accompanied by Mlle. Helene de Malklazouny, of Paris, sister of the Duchess, and by Count Robert de Buisseret, brother of the late Count Francois de Buisseret, who died soon after leaving his station at the Belgian Embassy in Washington.

The former Miss Caroline Story, of Washington, was the mother of the De Buisserets.

This is the first visit to this country of the Duke and Duchess of Leeds and while here they will make a trip to California, stopping en route at the Century of Progress, the Grand Canyon and other points of interest. They will return to New York about the middle of September and then sail for England. They were week-end guests of Mrs. W. H. Labrot, of New Orleans, at her home on Chesapeake Bay.

At the time Count Francois de Buisseret and his sister, Countess Beatrice de Buisseret, were in Washington, Count Robert de Buisseret was in Des Moines, Iowa, associated with the publishing company owned by Mrs. E. T. Meredith, widow of the former Secretary of Agriculture. It was at the time Count Robert de Buisseret was in the United States that he accompanied Prince Charles of Belgium, the Count of Flanders, on his American visit.

Miss M. M. Copple Weds Mr. Murrell

Motor Trip to West Is Planned by Couple.

Miss Muriel M. Copple and Mr. George D. Murrell were married at the National City Christian Church last Saturday evening by the Rev. J. R. Mills.

The bride, who was attended by her sister, Menifee Copple, wore an ensemble of brown lace. Her flowers were a shoulder corsage of tea roses.

Kenneth Murrell, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Immediately following the ceremony, which was attended by many friends of the couple, a reception was held at the home of the bride.

Mr. and Mrs Murrell will leave shortly on an extended motor trip to Kansas and the Middle West, and upon their return will be at home in the Cathedral Mansions.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl K. Campbell have come from their home in St. Louis, and expect to pass a week at the Shoreham. They made the trip by automobile.

A Dark Future For Stockings, Fall Prediction

Suntanned Legs Will Be Encased in Browns and Near-Black.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THERE is a dark future for hose, predict stylists who are already busy scanning the fall fashion horizon. Soft shades of tan and gray are being supplanted by definitely black and brown tones and silvery evening colors are giving way to a pure flesh shade.

Those who say the style pendulum swings for no known reason err in this instance. Definite colors are forcing the indefinite out of the style picture for a good reason. During this summer more women than ever before went stockingless, more legs were browned by the sun. During September and October this brown will hardly have faded out, and showing through light hose it might mar the pure shade of the hose. So, manufacturers are promoting browns and blacks through which a suntan can make little color change.

One downtown store has just put out its fall hosiery color chart, and is already displaying the hosiery. The chief colors are "trotteur," "cedar," "cloister brown," "fawn taupe," "solera," "smoke mist" and "marrona."

"Cloister brown" is such a deep brown it may also be worn with black. "Smoke mist" is just this side of a gray. Hose in this color goes with anything, and is exceptionally pretty with green and dark blue.

So far the dead blacks are not as numerous as rumor says they will be.

This hosiery is the result of a new manufacturing process which weaves several strands of silk at one time, thereby making the finished product ringless. Hitherto, most dark hose has been marred by the rings resulting from heavy threads being woven in one place. Here is a delightful opportunity to pick up new fall hose, sheer, ringless chiffon, for 85 cents or $1.000.

Individual Cocktail Trays.

Hostesses who have used them will vouch for it, the individual chromium cocktail and hors d'oevre trays are the nth degree in convenience! They're only four or five inches long, and about half as wide, just the size for a cocktail and one or two dainty sandwiches.

After they're used, they may be washed and dried without being polished, for the chrome will continue to look shiny and new even under stress of alcohol.

These come in very reasonable prices.

Dice in Disguise.

Will wonders never cease—to say nothing of surprises! On the counter of a Connecticut avenue shop was an oblong leather case looking like nothing in particular. An idle guess might have put it down as a pocket knife case. It felt unusually light and yet there was obviously something in it, something that rattled suspiciously. When it was opened the contents spread themselves over the glass showcase—five bone dice.

Here is a suggestion for an unusual bon voyage gift to a man who already has everything.

China Reamers.

Some china has been interestingly molded and artistically colored to make its mark in a local gift shop in the shape of reamers.

The top portion is much like any other orange or lemon reamer as far as shape goes. But this fits over an odd, little low pitcher. As one turns the half of lemon or orange over the reamer, the juice drips through into the pitcher below—and there you are!

The china is white, almost obscured by the colorful flower pattern. Reamers, 50 cents.

Black and White Dahlias.

No matter what colors soar into sudden popularity at the beginning of a season, black and white (which aren't colors!) always hold their own.

Women who are shopping with an eye toward cooler days are finding the fabric flowers in an F street store general favorites.

There are sprays in solid white, or black and white, made from a coarse fabric with a velvet finish. They look like dahlias might look if dahlias were fabric and black or white.

Pastel Orange Sticks.

There are others at 50 cents a spray, made from fine velvet strips giving the appearance of tasseling. In the centers are firm little white buds. Mere words can hardly do them justice.

Later on such flowers will be more expensive. As they don't wither, buy them now and keep them for cooler days and darker frocks.

Bargain in Razors.

There was a time when these razors sold for much more—that was only a short time ago. Now they are only 25 cents—equipped with a blade.

They're not cheap, worthless razors. The company that manufactures them has been in the razor business for a long time and has built up an enviable reputation on that score.

These are chromium plated to insure them against rust.

Women Found Adaptable To Monotonous Work

Man's favorite contention that women are "good for detail" seems to be borne out in the findings of Dr. Sybil Horner, home office medical inspector of factories in London.

Dr. Horner, in her annual report, says she has found that women can adapt themselves to monotonous work with far greater ease than men. She said she had found that women alone of the industrial groups could perform monotonous work without losing their interest in it.

Fall Footwear Cut Very High; Just in Front

Oxfords Go Up and Up—to the Point Where Eight Eyelets Needed.

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—When you say "new shoes" this fall there's more to the word "new" than just the usual meaning of unworn, fresh and shining shoes. Because there are new and different things about shoes—new cuts, new materials, new colors.

The new cut is the high cut and both oxfords and pumps have it.

The high-cut oxford is made high in front, but cut down on the sides so it does not scrape the ankle bones.

It may be so high that it requires seven or eight pairs of eyelets to lace it up. (We've had a seven-eyelet oxford sketched.)

For early fall wear these higher oxfords often have cut-outs so they are not so warm.

The high-cut pump looks almost as high as an oxford, and this you can see in the second sketch. It has goring put in in the front to make it easy to get into and sometimes, like the oxford, it has cut-outs.

Perhaps you prefer your newness in material. Then look at the new shoes made of fabric with leather only on the tip and back where the wear comes.

Wool gabardine and ribbed wools are used, but they do not have napped surfaces so that they do not make the foot look bulky.

One of these combination fabric-and-leather shoes is shown in the third sketch.

The very low heels which arrived with summer are still appearing on some fall shoes.

And there's news about color, too.

Black is still the most-in-fashion color. But you'll see many more brown shoes worn this fall than were worn last fall, both for dressy daytime and sports wear.

You'll see a few green shoes, because green costumes are more fashionable than they have been. And bronze, which women liked so well a few years ago, is showing up in afternoon shoes to wear with brown, green and wine costumes.

Shoes of the types described are available in Washington in all the better shoe shops and department stores.

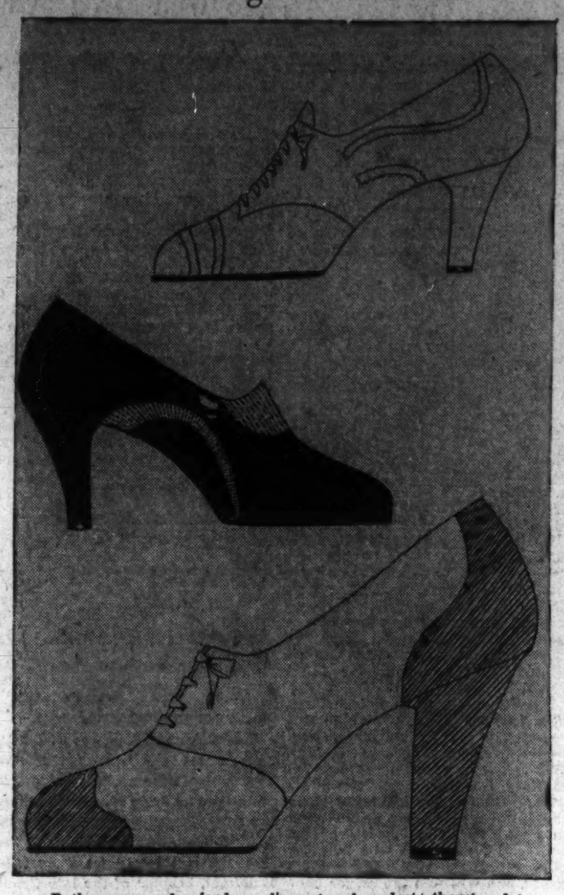
Something New in Shoes



Both pumps and oxfords go discreet and modest—there's a lot more shoe in the new fashions bringing in the higher sides.

Household Hints About Salt Contributed by Local Woman

By Susan Mills.

FROM Miss Kay Smith, 1223 Vermont avenue, we receive today's household hints. Because they are related, they are used to make up the entire column.

Housewives who have found ways to make their daily work easier can help each other out through this column. It will run every Tuesday and Sunday on the Household Page.

Varied Uses of Salt.

A handful of salt added to the water in which lacy material or lace curtains are soaked will loosen the dirt.

When making peanut brittle, add a pinch of salt. It will aid digestion as well as add flavor.

Sprinkle salt in the coffee pot or percolator and rub well all around the inside with a damp cloth. Rinse with boiling water. It will keep the coffee pot or percolator sweet.

To remove stains from a vase or bottle, put in it 2 tablespoons salt and 4 tablespoons vinegar and shake well. Let stand for several hours, empty and rinse out in hot soap suds.

A handful of salt in the water when washing spinach will cause any sand or grit to sink to the bottom.

When fruit juices run out in an oven or on top of the stove, if salt is thrown on it at once, there will be no odor. It is easily cleaned when burned to a crisp.

To prevent starch sticking to an iron, put a small lump of butter and a large shake of salt into the starch after it is cooked.

Salt sprinkled over carpets before sweeping preserves the colors and keeps away moths.

Peaches and Plums Improve Cornstarch Pudding No End

By Ann Barrett.

FRUITS of the season, especially peaches and plums, have a never-failing way of bringing common desserts right up into the spotlight. Take cornstarch pudding, for example.

Make this just right (meaning with enough egg and enough cooking so the texture is light, and the pudding doesn't taste starchy). Then chill it in individual molds. Surround it with stewed, fresh fruit. And there you'll have a dessert elegant enough for the finest table of the land.

Such a dessert should not be made very large. The recipe I'm going to give you will make eight puddings in medium-sized (about 6-ounce) custard cups or small teacups. In case you'd like to knock off two days' desserts in one quick swoop, you can halve the pudding mixture before turning it into molds and beat 1½ squares (ounces) unsweetened chocolate (first melted over hot water) into one-half the pudding. Then add another tablespoon or so of sugar, as chocolate takes away sweetness.

If you want only four smallish puddings, or three large ones, just halve this recipe.

Basic Recipe.

First heat 3 cups milk in top of double boiler. Next, stir into this 6 tablespoons cornstarch (first mixed smooth in 1 cup cold milk.) Then remove the spoon, cover the mixture and let it cook at least 15 minutes. Cooking it longer will do no harm, the idea being that the starch will not taste starchy if cooked long enough.

Next, beat up one-third cup sugar, 2 egg-yolks and one-fourth teaspoon salt. Stir this into the cornstarch mixture, and cook about 2 minutes more. Then remove from fire, and fold in 2 egg-whites (beaten stiff) with 1 teaspoon vanilla. Now is the time to halve the pudding and beat in the melted chocolate, if you wish. Turn the pudding into individual molds, first rinsed out of cold water. Chill thoroughly.

Stewed Peach Sauce.

Cook one-half cup sugar and one-half cup water in a small sauce pan about 3 minutes, to make a light sirup. Then add the pits of 3 peaches. Add the peaches themselves (about 3 of them, peeled and sliced) a few at a time, and cook just till tender, then drain them out of the sirup. When all peaches are cooked, let the sirup cook a little longer with the pits. Then throw away the pits, add a drop of bitter almond extract to the sirup, and pour this over the peaches. Chill very cold.

Stewed Plums.

If you use large red or purple plums, which are the most elegant, cook these in syrup the same way except do not peel them. Just halve or quarter them, and do not use the pits. If the plums are large, 2 or 3 pieces will be enough for each serving. If the plums are not large and fine, just cook them up with sugar and water the usual way, and put them through a coarse sieve to make a puree.

Fruit Lends Distinction

These luscious looking affairs show what fruit can do to what is usually thought of as a commonplace dessert, cornstarch pudding.

Child Chats

By Alice Fox Pitts.

"WHEN we go on our vacation," writes a mother who reads this column, we like to eat in hotel dining rooms, but meals for five are expensive. And, besides, the children do not feel at home in such formal surroundings.

"We have solved the problem, however. My husband and I go to the dining room and send the children to the coffee shop, or leave then at a clean but inexpensive lunch room nearby. This is much less expensive, and the youngsters like it better, too. We have a more peaceful meal, and they get a lot of fun out of their independence. Besides, I feel that they are gaining something when they learn to order their meals and count their change without adult assistance."

Artists Make Us Happy, Says Dean

Modern society needs artists to "make it happy," believes Dean E. Raymond Bossange of the New York University College of Fine Arts. In his annual report to Chancellor Harry Woodburn Chase, Dean Bossange maintains the artist has been neglected while the practical man has been made too important.

Admitting the practical man has added to the comfort, health and leisure of the community, Dean Bossange insists "he has not made us happy."

"We need the artist," says the dean, "to combat monotony of mass production. We need the architect to combat the unnecessary and unwise concentration that has occurred in our cities. Human beings turn to the arts for inspiration, solace and pleasure. Hence we need colleges of fine arts to produce men and women of creative imagination, for the fine arts will survive no matter what happens to our economic or political structure."

Cream Rum Sauce.

Rum and rum flavoring, which have long been traditional first-aids to many kinds of pudding, give a nice zest to sauce for cornstarch puddings. First beat up 1 egg-white. Then beat in 2 tablespoons confectioner's sugar. Next fold in ½ cup cream, first whipped, and add rum to taste, maybe about 2 tablespoons. Serve cold.

Chocolate and Macaroons.

Chocolate cornstarch pudding and almond macaroons make a famous combination. Mold the pudding in a flat shape about the size of a large almond macaroon. When ready to serve, turn it out on the macaroon and top with sweetened whipped cream. Or, top the pudding generously with whipped cream—sweetened and flavored—and then sprinkle lavishly with finely crumbled almond macaroons.

POTOMAC PARK

By CAROLYN COX

Love affairs complicate the lives of Wanda Mallory and Kentucky Queen, two Government workers who share an apartment. Wanda loves David Randall, who seems to reciprocate, but he does not ask her to marry him, and there is an air of mystery about him. Kentucky, although she does not admit it, is in love with Zeke Tolliver, a Congressman whom she has known since childhood.

WANDA stood by the window waiting for David. The apartment was as clean and bright as a general's dress sword, but Kentucky was still polishing. Ezekiel Tolliver was coming. Wanda wondered what he would be like. He might be a Congressman, but he couldn't be as nice as David. She was impressed nevertheless. The traditional social life of Washington, its diplomatic balls and dinners and breakfasts were wholly outside her experience. The little she knew of it was learned from the society pages, novels and memoirs of crowded hours.

"What is he like, Kentucky?"

"Who?"

"Mr. Tolliver."

"Why, he is elderly and very nice."

'I know, but what is he like—his personality?"

"Why, I don't know exactly. He is a self-made man. You might say he isn't particularly polished, but he has the good manners that go with a good heart."

"That's nice. Brilliant?"

Her One Love.

"His mind is not as keen as Royce's. Not especially subtle or original, but he is intelligent and has lots of common sense."

"You like him a lot?" Wanda asked softly.

Color swept over Kentucky's face. "I reckon I do. There's never been anybody but Zeke to me, but he never guessed it. Never even—kissed me in his life."

"Where did you meet him?"

"At school."

"Oh! Classmates at college?" She had forgotten that Kentucky claimed to have grown up with him. Chronologically speaking, that was an exaggeration.

"No. He is five years older than I. He was working his way through law college, and he taught the district school. Little white schoolhouse in Kentucky. It's always a little red schoolhouse in novels, but I never ran across but one or two red ones in my life. I was bookish, and that pleases a teacher. He was proud of me as a pupil, and has taken lots of interest in my development ever since—my success, he calls it, but I haven't much to show for my hard work. Just a CAF-5 in the Government service, that's all."

His Best Friend.

Kentucky polished a red jug. Wanda breathed carefully, afraid to jar the mood of confidence.

"Zeke deserves a lot of credit for what he has made of himself. He skimped and worked and studied and got where he is today."

"You encouraged him, of course."

"We encouraged one another. I suppose I'm his best friend—he says so anyhow, but that's all—just a friend. I understand him—knowing his background. It was rather drab back where we lived. We both wanted pretty things in our homes—this apartment isn't furnished the way I'd have it for Zeke if I had the money to spend for the things I want—thick rugs and old mahogany and a grand piano and brocaded satin draperies—but it is pretty, and full of color. Zeke likes color—and my view."

She came to stand by Wanda while they looked at the view which a millionaire might envy.

Thrilling Moment.

"I'll never forget the first time Zeke came to the apatment and we stood here looking down at the memorial," Kentucky said dreamily. "Lincoln is his hero, and the accident of his being born in Kentucky is Zeke's idea of fate which links greatness to the common man. Illinois doesn't count. Zeke holds that he belongs to Kentucky. He stood here with me, looking down, and he didn't say a word, but we had never been so close. I felt a greatness in Zeke that day—not genius, for he hasn't that—but a dignity, a wisdom that comes from climbing over your natural indolence and marching on toward some clear goal. I felt something in him. You may laugh at that when you see him. He belongs to the common men and always will, but he's fine. I'd die for Zeke."

They drew apart, friends who have enjoyed together a brief soaring, but embarrassed at the revealing of secret places of the soul.

"Maybe he cares more for you than you think, Kentucky."

"No. I don't fool myself. I know what he thinks of me. I'm his friend. I'm proud to be a friend of a man as fine as Zeke, and it's no use to hope for more. If I were beautiful and slim and elegant like Zephyr——"

Kentucky picked up a green vase to polish.

"Zephyr is his ideal. I understand. She is everything the woman of his youthful associations were not. She dazzles him. He thinks he loves her, and I reckon he does. The last time Zeke was here he told me he thought it was time he was getting married. A man in political life needed a wife, he said. A man could go just so far alone. And he asked me what I thought of it. I knew he was thinking of Zephyr, and I couldn't say anything."

"Why in the world did you ask her to come here today?"

"Oh, I wouldn't raise a finger to keep them apart. Zephyr would help him in his career. She has charm and social position and some money, but I don't think Zeke would be influenced by the money. She is the sort of wife a Congressman could be proud of. If he wants her, there's nothing I can do about it. I want him to be happy more than anything else in the world."

"But there's Royce. He loves her, too."

"Yes . . . That's the way things go in this world. One woman has more love than she needs and——"

The doorbell rang—not a code ring, but a long, determined peal.

Radiance wrapped Kentucky in a momentary cloud of brightness, and then she tucked the polishing cloth out of sight, and with her usual serene composure, opened the door to Ezekiel Tolliver.

Kentucky's description of him had been understated. She had forgotten to mention his winning smile.

"Kentucky told me all about you," he said, taking Wanda's hand, and she liked him instantly.

He saw the picture at once, and reached it in three great strides.

"Kentucky! Where did you get this?"

"Wanda made it. Do you like it?"

He looked at Wanda with new interest and increased friendliness.

"Why, it's swell! As natural as life. And the memorial, too. Well, well, well! Gosh, Kaintucky! I didn't realize you were as handsome as all that."

Alone With Zeke.

She blushed. "I'm not. That's the art of it."

"It looks exactly like you. Lord, it's pretty."

Kentucky was covered with confusion. "She said I might give it to you if you liked it, Zeke."

"Me? Give it to me? Oh, I wouldn't think of taking it away from you."

But he held it covetously.

"We thought it might be acceptable as a New Year's gift," Wanda said, slyly, afraid that his magnanimity might lead him to refuse it.

"Well, dog bite my cat! I hate to rob you, but I sure would appreciate it."

"Wanda thought it an appropriate moment to slip out.

"If you'll excuse me now—I have to meet a friend downstairs."

She felt the righteous zeal of a missionary as she left Kentucky for a precious hour alone with Zeke.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Cinchophen Poisoning.

It sometimes happens that drugs which are useful in the hands of careful, discerning physicians may cause serious damage, even a fatal issue, when indiscriminately employed by the public. A drug of this sort is cinchophen (phenylquinoline carboxylic acid).

The wide use of cinchophen and similar preparations by sufferers from arthritis and neuritis has led to a number of cases of poisoning, accompanied by liver degeneration. A number of deaths have been reported. Many widely heralded remedies for rheumatism now on the market contain cinchophen or allied substances.

Manfred W. Comfort, in a recent article, reviews a study of 117 cases of cinchophen poisoning. In this series there were 61 deaths. He points out that, unfortunately, physicians are not always able to distinguish patients who may use cinchophen safely and with good effect from those in whom toxic symptoms will appear. It is, however, true that only a small per cent of patients who use cinchophen are poisoned. It has been noted that patients who have already suffered some liver damage as a result of alcoholism, gall bladder disease, inflammation or cirrhosis of the liver, or individuals who are markedly undernourished, are paticularly susceptible. Certain other persons may have a peculiar idiosyncrasy to the drug.

When cinchophen is used, early symptoms of poisoning may include weakness, gastrointestinal irritation, nausea, vomiting and diarrhea. Sometimes stomach disturbances in which the patient will complain of heartburn and belching are early symptoms. Itching of the skin and the appearance of a rash attended by itching are danger signals.

Definite liver damage may occur without accompanying jaundice. In severe poisoning, jaundice, nausea and stupor are positive signs. If the changes in the liver are severe, cirrhosis or hardening of the liver ensues.

Promptly upon the appearance of any sign of cinchophen poisoning the drug should be stopped and large quantities of sugars, glucose, &c., should be given. Sometimes in very severe cases it is necessary to introduce glucose into the patient's veins. If sugar appears in the urine because of the excessive amount of glucose administered, insulin may be used to increase sugar tolerance. If the case progresses satisfactorily the jaundice disappears within two or three weeks and recovery is fairly complete within two months or a little longer.

The author of the article in question points out the danger of using cinchophen or any allied drug except under the watchful eye of a careful physician. Although valuable, the drug is potentially dangerous. Many careful clinicians will resort to the use of cinchophen only when other remedies have failed and when a careful examination of the patient reveals no sign of previous liver damage.

Vaccination.

A. B. C. writes: I applied for a job and the firm insists that its employes be vaccinated. What should I do?

Reply.

The firm evidently desires that all its employes be immune to smallpox. This can be secured by smallpox vaccine or by having an attack of the disease. Smallpox would be practically eliminated from the world if everyone were vaccinated. The disease is spread by individuals who are not immune. As a good citizen you ought not to object to a practical health measure. If you are immune to smallpox you will not have the disease; hence you can not spread it to others.

New Prayer Book Radical Departure

Deals With Slums, Lynch and Unemployed.

A radical departure from orthodox prayer books is offered in the new book of social prayers published by the general board of the Young Men's Christian Association.

The new prayer book contains petitions dealing with present-day social and economic problems. Some of its prayer titles are: "For Slum Clearance," "A Litany for the Unemployed," "Penitential Prayer for the Sin of Lynching," "For a Christian Social Order."

The book is called "Prayers for Self and Society." Its author is the Rev. James Myers, industrial secretary of the Federal Council of Churches in America.

One petition reads, "From spending billions for battleships, while the unemployed live upon a crust, good Lord deliver us." Another is, "Help the workers of all lands to stand shoulder to shoulder for justice and peace among the nations." Still another: "Grant us the blessing of orderly processes in social change."

"Showing Off" at Urging of Mothers Injurious to Children, Says Specialist

Achievements of Bright Youngsters Shouldn't Be Eulogized.

By Elizabeth Perrow.

MOST parents would be both horrified and resentful if informed that they had wrecked the lives of their children.

Yet that is just what many fathers and mothers do when they boast of their children's accomplishments and force them to "show off" for their friends, says Dr. Elise Martens, specialist in the education of exceptional children, United States Office of Education.

Dr. Martens has had wide experience dealing with exceptional children as she specialized in that field during her undergraduate days at the University of California, and later at Leland Stanford University, where she received her Ph. D. degree. She first became interested in this phase of education because she felt "it offered problems that should be solved."

Soft-Pedal Accomplishments.

"The less said about the accomplishments of the brilliant child the better," says Dr. Martens. "Parents should take into consideration that often the child who seems a genius at the age of 3, is merely precocious. Only time can tell whether he is really a genius or not. But the wise mother never boasts of her child's achievements in his presence or forces him to "show off" for her friends.

"She provides a wholesome environment for her child, fills his leisure time with constructive outlets for self-expression. She sees to it that he develops socially, mentally and physically."

The parents of the gifted child should consult with his teachers, and a course of study should be made out that will keep the child busy and happy, and that will be broadening, Dr. Martens says, and adds:

"Above all, the brilliant child should be impressed with his opportunities for service."

Farmers Also Serve.

Dr. Martens also has some age counsel for the mother whose child "just can't learn out of books," but who has a distinct talent for all kinds of mechanical work and loves working with his hands.

"It is a great mistake for parents to try to force these children to be scholars," she said. "The child's life should be planned so he can use the abilities he has. Parents must face the fact that individual differences are as great mentally as they are physically. The child who is a talented farmer or mechanic has just as important work to do as the artist or professional man. The world needs good farmers and carpenters; people who work with hands are essential to progress."

Parents often make the mistake of becoming resentful when informed that their child is different mentally from the average child, according to Dr. Martens.

Should Be No Competition.

"That is a great mistake," she says. "The world would be a much happier place if parents would not insist on their child's competing with other children. There should be no competition in childhood. Each child should do what he can the best he can."

Schools, Dr. Martens says, should be adjusted to suit the individual needs of the child both mentally and physically. And parents and teachers should work together to make every child realize the best that is in him.

There is a creed every father and mother would do well to adopt, she says. It is this:

"My child should do as well as he can do. He should have a happy, rich experience doing what interests him most, developing his individual talents, growing into the best kind of citizen."

Underwood & Underwood.

Parents should discourage competition between children, but they should encourage them to develop their individual talents, says Dr. Elsie Martens, specialist in the education of exceptional children.

What Today Means

"Leo."

If August 14 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:15 a. m. until noon, from 1:15 to 3:15 p. m. and from 6:15 to 8:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:15 to 9:15 a. m., from 4:15 to 6:15 p. m. and from 8:15 to 10:15 p. m.

This August 14 might prove a good one for the formulation of new ideas and putting them into practical use. Unfounded timidity may make some business men unduly cautious and inclined to be cantankerous. Good-natured ridicule might help restore their rationality and optimism. It may be a good idea on this date to remember facial expressions sometimes convey more meaning to the eyes than words can to the ears. The right expression on your face may prove helpful in both your business and social contacts.

If a woman and August 14 is your birthday, you have an unusual amount of determination, and the courage to carry out your convictions. Your unwillingness at times to be swayed by other people's opinions may make some think you are hard-headed, but it is this trait that may enable you to succeed where a weaker character would fail.

The child born on August 14, as it grows up, will prove to be a self-reliant youngster, full of original ideas and capable of expressing itself clearly and to the point. Inclined to be high tempered, it must be taught to control it. It may not be overstudious, but a retentive brain will offset that slight defect.

If a man and August 14 is your natal day, in any line of work you will probably prove to be a live wire, and have enough dynamic energy to accomplish effectively whatever you undertake. The younger you marry, the more happiness you should have.

Superstition Goes Overboard; Black Cat Becomes Popular

Washington Animal Rescue League Harbored Dark Feline Expecting No One to Adopt It, but It Was the Most Popular Animal There.

THE devoutly superstitious have long been defending their beliefs against the attacks of skeptics, but they have fought a losing battle. The skeptics have used their deadliest weapon—laughter, and now even such bad luck bringers as Friday the thirteenth, opening umbrellas in the house, and singing before breakfast no longer inspire terror.

The latest superstition to perish from the laughter of the debunkers that a black cat crossing one's path means bad luck.

While there are many who mourn the passing of this belief, the black cat that recently occupied a cage at the Washington Animal Rescue League is very grateful for the change in sentiment.

For death was inevitable for the cat unless some one wanted to adopt it.

"And who," the rescue officials wanted to know, "would adopt a black cat? Everybody thinks they are bad luck."

The Most Popular Cat.

Which just shows how ignorant the rescue officials were of the good work done by the antisuperstition league. For the black cat had scarcely started crossing the path of its cage, arching its back and glaring at all comers, before visitors began asking for it.

"It's about the most popular cat we've had here," an official observed in a surprised tone. The same official was shocked almost speechless when a colored woman came in and said:

"Mister, what about that black cat out there? Could I adopt him?" The official replied that the cat was spoken for, and added:

"Aren't you afraid that cat will bring you bad luck?"

"No, sir," she answered, "I don't care how many times he crosses my path, 'cause he is really a beauty. Will you let me know next time you get a cat like that?" And she started out.

Angel Canine.

In the doorway she almost bumped into another colored woman who carried a brown paper bag. The bag wriggled. When she opened it a little, very thin, hollow-eyed dog appeared.

"Mister, I brought him over," she said. "I thought you might give him some treatments that will make him well."

The official looked the dog over, expertly, critically.

"I'm afraid it's too late," he said. "The dog can't be cured. Just leave him with me. He'll be a little angel soon."

"Now she had a good reason for leaving her dog," said the official when the colored woman had gone. "But you should hear the crazy reasons some people give for getting rid of their dogs. One day we had two women in here leaving dogs at the same time. One was leaving hers because it wouldn't bark. The other wanted to leave hers because it barked too much. The truth was they were just tired of them. People ought not to have pets if they aren't willing to take care of them."

Beauty Mask Lends Glow At 11th Hour

Egyptian Wife With Roving Eye Started the Treatment.

By Frances Manrum.

BEAUTY masks are accepted as the surest means to eleventh hour loveliness.

The woman who returns home late in the afternoon, tired out, can not look forward enthusiastically to an impending engagement. Her mirror tells her the strain of the day shows in the lines of her face. It is then she turns to the mask to smooth out the lines and bring a glow to her cheeks.

There was a time many hundreds of years ago when masks were unheard of. It was only by chance they were discovered by an Egyptian woman long before the reign of Cleopatra. The story goes that an angry husband who saw his wife looking too engagingly at his friend dragged her down to the river bank to throw her to the crocodiles.

The Miracle.

Becoming suddenly soft-hearted, he vented his rage by smearing mud over her face. The frightened wife continued to lie where he left her while the sun overhead beat down on her face. At length a group of neighborly women came for her, lifted her up and washed the mud from her face. It was then they believed a miracle had been wrought. Her face was devoid of wrinkles. Thereafter women of the town visited the river banks every day, spread their faces with mud and sat in the sun for it to dry.

Centuries have passed since then, centuries which have seen the beauty mask gain in popularity and grow from simple mud packs to wonderful herbal creams.

A Soft Mask.

Most of them harden after they have been applied to the skin. There is one, however, of a marshmallow consistency which remains in its soft creamy state throughout the treatment. It has the color and fragrance of fresh crushed strawberries. A second or two after it has been applied you feel a cool tingling sensation. When it has remained on for 20 or 30 minutes it should be removed with soft cleansing tissues. That tired, drawn look has miraculously disappeared.

Before applying a mask the skin should be thoroughly cleansed first. When the mask has been removed it should be followed by a rich nourishing cream. After this, pat the skin with tonic or astringent. Some like a final ice rub.

U. S. Collegians' Favorite Book "Forsyte Saga"

"Return of the Native" Gets Second in Poll Made for English Teachers.

JOHN GALSWORTHY'S study of the English upper middle class, "Forsyte Saga," is the literary favorite of American undergraduates, a recent poll indicates.

In another poll made last spring, college instructors named Jane Austen's "Pride and Prejudice" as the book most frequenty recommended for college reading.

A preliminary report on an investigation of reading habits of undergraduates in 44 colleges has been issued by Prof. Atwood H. Townsend of New York University. The study, made among 1,003 students, was for the committee on college reading of the National Council of Teachers of English.

Thomas Hardy's "Return of the Native" received second place in both the students' and instructors' polls.

The First Ten.

The third most popular book in the students' survey was "The Good Earth," by Pearl Buck. Others in the first ten named by the students are: "Arrowsmith," Sinclair Lewis; "The Magnificent Obsession," Lloyd Douglas; "Main Street," Sinclair Lewis; "Green Mansions," W. H. Hudson; "Of Human Bondage," W. Somerset Maugham; "Anthony Adverse," Hervey Allen, and "The Bridge of San Luis Rey," Thornton Wilder.

Immediately following the first ten were "Mourning Becomes Electra" and "Strange Interlude," by Eugene O'Neill; Cellini's "Autobiography;" Tolstoi's "Anna Karenina" and Charles Morgan's "The Fountain."

Among the classics published before 1800, Cellini's "Autobiography" easily led in popularity. Voltaire's "Candide" and Boccaccio's "The Decameron" ranked second and third, respectively.

Hardy Places Twice.

In nineteenth century literature, Hardy's "The Return of the Native" led, with "Tess of the D'Urbervilles" ranking second. In nineteenth century continental literature "Anna Karenina" led, with "Cyrano de Bergerac" second. In twentieth century continental literature, Emil Ludwig's "Napoleon" ranked first, Remarque's "All Quiet on the Western Front" second.

In nineteenth century American literature, Hawthorne's "The Scarlet Letter" led, with Owen Wister's "The Virginian" ranking second. In twentieth century American literature, "The Good Earth" was followed in popularity by "Arrowsmith" and "The Magnificent Obsession."

W. C. T. U. President Urges Grape Juice

Mrs. Boole Discourses on Studies of Subject.

New York, Aug. 13 (Spl.).—The espousal of grape juice by the late William Jennings Bryan as a substitute for alcoholic liquor is finding an echo among modern prohibitionists.

Mrs. Ella A. Boole, international president of the W. C. T. U., who has returned from the organization's convention in Stockholm, reports that efforts are being made by women's temperance groups throughout the world to invent tasteful, nonalcoholic grape drinks. A hopeful feature of the Stockholm meeting, Mrs. Boole said, were the reports on the studies being made to determine beverage uses for the grape.

Mrs. Boole declared the prohibition movement throughout the world had not diminished in the least, and that women delegates to the convention from the United States have gained new determination to seek the return of prohibition.

Mme. de Pompadour's Palace Turned Museum

Versailles, France, Aug. 13 (AP).—Madame de Pompadour's private palace, the Hotel des Reservoirs, has been bought by the French government and becomes a national museum.

It was converted into a hotel after the revolution in 1800, and has sheltered many illustrious guests.

Present plans are to use the building as a carriage museum to house the state coaches and other old vehicles now at the Trianon.

Weaver Makes Mining Camp Mecca for Parisian Stylists

BASIN, Mont. (U.P.).—From this tiny, lonely mining camp, high in the Rockies, come style dictates that are awaited and heeded in New York, London and Paris.

It seems strange that Basin, with its scant half-dozen clapboard buildings and general store, should attract attention from Fifth avenue, Bond street and Parisian ateliers—but it does.

Mary M. Atwater is the reason.

Mrs. Atwater is recognized as one of the world's few experts at a quaint craft so old that regretful moderns are striving desperately to relearn its intricate mysteries—hand weaving.

Hand-woven fabrics now are the last word among stylists who can afford their rare charm. Fruits of the handlooms command fancy prices the world over—and their demand is increasing daily.

Because so little is known about "shuttlecraft" and because Mary Atwater knows so much more than most, she is consulted continually by buyers and stylists representing large stores in the world's fashion centers.

Following an early hobby, Mrs. Atwater has delved into the yellowed pages of volumes written thousands of years ago; has nosed around old monastery libraries—to shed new light on this old, nearly-forgotten art. Because of her proficiency, she has come to be the oracle whom thousands of disciples follow.

During long winter days, when the mercury sometimes drops as low as 60 degrees below zero, Mrs. Atwater props her loom alongside a fireplace in her big, white house and keeps it humming.

From the flying shuttle, bright threads form magically into tunics, table covers, draperies, rugs, dresses and fine linens. Some days her work goes untouched. At those times Mrs. Atwater might be found a few miles up the wooded canyon, where her son runs a fox farm.

When summer comes, Mrs. Atwater literally "goes back to civilization." She visits New York, Chicago and St. Louis, to confer with the heads of smart shops.

Too Many Try Musical Profession As a Living, Holds Federation Head

Music Should Be Avocation, Not Vocation, Says Mrs. Jardine.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

TOO many persons are trying to make a living out of music. That is why disgruntled conservatory graduates eventually become typists and book agents; why weary men and women trudge the streets seeking in vain a market for their melodies, according to Mrs. John Alexander Jardine, president of the National Federation of Music Clubs.

"Even if there had been no depression, there would be a large number of unemployed musicians simply because there are too many people with music to sell," said Mrs. Jardine yesterday afternoon in her suite at the Mayflower.

"Music should be an avocation, not a vocation," she continued. "It should be a part of everyone's education, like arithmetic and grammar. But only a few of the millions who study arithmetic expect to earn their living by it. Music should be regarded in the same way."

What about the geniuses, those with great, shining talent?

Genius Wins Out.

"Oh, they'll always get to the top, hard times or no hard times," Mrs. Jardine said. "We needn't worry about the geniuses. They'll get along. But it's heartbreaking to see boys and girls with average talent encouraged by their parents to make music their profession."

The head of the National Federation of Music Clubs, whose home is in Fargo, N. Dak., is spending a few days in Washington on her way to Philadelphia, where she will confer with the program chairman of the federation's 1935 convention. From Philadelphia Mrs. Jardine will go to White Top Mountain to a music festival. Folk tunes will be presented at the festival.

"And it is from folk tunes that I expect our national music to come," she asserted. "Not just from Negro spirituals or from cowboy ballads or Indian songs or mountain tunes. But from a blending of all of them. That's why we've been so slow in developing our own music. We have so many things to draw from, our country is so big and so sectionalized."

Composers Treated Unfairly.

Another reason America has been slow in developing its own music is the indifference of the American public to native composers.

"We're unfair with our composers," said Mrs. Jardine. "We listen to things they have written and before we have learned to understand them we condemn them. We should hear them over and over again until they are as familiar to us as the European classics we've grown up with."

And Jazz?

There's no use waging an out-and-out battle against it, the head of the music clubs has decided.

"Instead of telling young people jazz is cheap and shoddy and they shouldn't listen to it, I believe in making it possible for them to hear and participate in good music. Gradually they lose interest in the kind that has nothing but rhythm to recommend it. And sometime the day will come when radio broadcasts are controlled. Then a lot of the questionable music now being broadcast will be prohibited and young people will not be exposed to jazz from morning 'till night."

Crooners?

Mrs. Jardine had nothing to say about them. Or if she had, she refused to say it. They were completely beneath her notice.

"I'm so busy with other things—important things—that I don't even have time to think of them."

But from the dry expression on her face it was easy to see that if she ever did get around to thinking about crooners, the thoughts would not be pleasant ones.

The interviewer decided not to ask Mrs. Jardine what she thought about torch singers.

Underwood & Underwood.

Americans fail to appreciate American musical compositions because they don't hear them often enough, according to Mrs. John Alexander Jardine, president of the National Federation of Music Clubs, who is spending a few days here.

PILLAR TO POST

Numerous Descendants of Washington Clan Reside Here.

LLOYD W. WASHINGTON died in Latanes, Va., not long ago, leaving $1,000,000 in bequests to nieces, nephews and several charities with the residue to be distributed among "his nearest relatives." This last phrase is causing no end of speculation among the Washington clan living in this city, many of whom are descendants of Samuel, brother of George Washington, and his five wives.

• • • •

Most of the Washington clan living in this city are descended from Ann Steptoe Washington, Sam's last wife. Some of the Washington blood are very rich, as was Lloyd; others here had few advantages, which seems a pity since their illustrious kinsman did so much to establish America.

• • • •

They have preserved their family records through great hardships—fires, floods and other disasters. One branch, of a hardy pioneering strain, but if little education, prepared a float for a bicentennial celebration in the Middle West with the title misspelled in silver letters "DESENDENTS."

Scattered Family.

Branches of the family are scattered all over the world. A medical missionary lives in China, a naval operator in Hawaii and a tobacco trader in Trinidad. Ironically, one Ann Washington married into the British nobility, and the descendants of Lady Ewing are living in Essex now. Another Washington, Mrs. James Cumming, occupies the Villa San Michela at Levanto, and in Florence there is a Washington who bears the name Gino Cappani.

• • • •

Mrs. George K. Bradfield, who lives here at Alban Towers, is related to George Washington on both her father's and her mother's side. Her mother traces her descent through Ann Steptoe, last wife of Samuel Washington, and her father is descended from Col. William Washington, hero of the battle of Cowpens.

• • • •

Mrs. Bradfield was named Eugenia Washington Moncure, after her mother's sister, Eugenia Washington, who was one of the three founders of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Her aunt, Eugenia, made the remark to a reporter that afterward became famous

"A lady's name should appear only twice in the public prints, once when she is married and once when she dies."

In Public Prints.

Mrs. Bradfield recalls with amusement her own confusion when she was married and a glowing account of her appeared in the Washington Mirror, a magazine now defunct, that was the gossip medium of the gay '90s. She had been a genealogist, working in the offices of the D. A. R. and she had been generous in helping a young reporter.

• • • •

He sought to repay her by writing the very complimentary article about her that appeared in the magazine, not knowing how unmercifully her family would rib her about it. But times have changed, asserted Mrs. Bradfield, and people are more tolerant today about their names appearing "in the public prints."

A grandniece of Mrs. Bradfield bears the name Eugenia, that has been carried down through so many generations of the family. She is Eugenia Bachshmid, 18, daughter of Mrs. Audre Moncure Bachshmid, whom Mrs. Bradfield raised.

Bar Dresses Interest Stars In Hollywood

Shakers of Cocktails Wear These Utilitarian and Decorative Gowns.

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 13 (AP).—And now, of all things, a bar gown. Drue Leyton, Carole Lombard and Fay Wray and a host of other Hollywood hostesses are among those who have bar gowns in their wardrobes.

Since its duties are functional as well as decorative, it must be 7 inches from the floor to avoid impeding the progress of the energetic hostess. It must have short or sleeveless effects so that cocktail shaking my go unhampered. It is frequently designed with interesting apron-front and bib tops, glorifying the bartender's uniform.

It is, however, fashioned of glamorous materials to lend formal conviction to its informal silhouette, says Royer, who is designing many of them. He is responsible for the description of the average bar gown.

Butcher-Boy Motif.

The butcher-boy silhouette is another fashion whimsy of completely practical nature. Miss Leyton wears one in "Charlie Chan in London," of white dotted steel-blue rabbit wool. The butcher boy sleeve is fully gathered into a snug pointed cuff just below the elbow, giving full scope for action.

Hollywood is starting a craze for "faded shades" for formal evening attire. Many of the boulevard shops are showing gowns for the fall and winter in a smoky flesh-beige color which is an excellent example of the new tendency to scorn the definite color card which fashion followed this summer.

And Unmentionables.

Outer garments will not be the only fashion problem of the smart woman this season: The natural silhouette requires that the unmentionables which go under these styles become very mentionable. Frances Drake, for instance, has designed an ideal satin slip, made bias with an extremely low decolletage. It is as carefully fitted to the figure as the gown itself.

The Oriental tunic motif is effectively modernized in a gown designed for Margaret Lindsay. The sculptured black crepe has a collar of silver-flecked red scarfs which loop through a large rhinestone slide at the throat and fall gracefully over the shoulders to a duplicate clip at the waist in back. The underskirt of red metal cloth hangs in deep folds below the sleek tunic.

Strictly Speaking

Try These.

1. Should one bow to custom and say "punkin pie" instead of PUMP-kin pie?
2. What is Shanghai properly called?
3. Who was Claude Debussy, and how is his name pronounced?
4. How did the famous Florentine, Brunelleschi, pronounce his name?
5. What is a Zollverein?

Answers Here.

1. Yes, if one chooses. Webster, after giving the proper pronunciation for pumpkin (PUMP-kin) adds this note, "This word is colloquially and commonly PUNG-kin."
2. Shang-HAH-y, not Shang-HIE.
3. Debussy (de-BOOS-se or de-boos-SEE) was a widely known French composer.
4. Broo-nel-LES-ke.
5. A Zollverein (TSOL-fer-ine) is a union of states or nations for regulation of customs.

Feminine Auto Drivers Are Vindicated at Last

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—The long-maligned woman driver at last has been vindicated.

The Pennsylvania Bureau of Motor Statistics announces that women are more careful automobile drivers than men and produces statistics to prove it.

Its 346,500 women motorists constitute 18 per cent of the State's licensed drivers. This 18 per cent, however, was involved in only 6 per cent of the motor accidents of the State in the first five months of 1934, in 4 per cent of the fatal injuries and in 8 per cent of the non-fatal. Of 3,528 operators whose licenses were withdrawn because of law violations, only 66 were women.

Gumdrops Ward Off Heat Illness

Gumdrops and salt tablets are being used by steel workers in Pittsburgh, Pa., to ward off heat prostration.

At the Brackenridge plant of the Alleghany Steel Co., the workers use the candy and salt freely and in addition drink their water in a warmish state—48 degrees Fahrenheit.

The salt is used because the body loses this element in perspiration. The gumdrops renew the sugar in the system and thus keep the bodily energy from running down. One or two salt pellets a day are used by the steel workers. The gumdrops are consumed in larger quantities.

The women's session will be held Wednesday and will be presided over by Mrs. W. L. Dudley. The Bible School session will be held Thursday afternoon when a special message will be presented by the Rev. Minor C. Miller, general secretary, Virginia Council of Religious Education. The Young People's session will be held Thursday night with Miss Helen I. Saum presiding. The closing address will be delivered by the Rev. Percy Thomas.

Lay speakers and local ministers participating in the program will include George Riley, Harry Clower, Charles Crabill, S. J. Good, F. D. Maphis, Miss Frances Spiggle, Miss Dorothy Hockman, Mrs. Eva Sager Hottle, Mrs. Arthur Wake, Mrs. Clarence Butler, Mrs. Kathleen Rhodes Waye, and the Revs. F. B. Snapp, D. H. Rhodes, W. L. Dudley, Arthur Wake, and G. H. Easley.

Music will be under the direction of the Rev. Arthur Wake.

Peace Disturber Killed by Fall

Pearisburg, Va., Aug. 13 (AP).—Harry Peters, 22, died in St. Elizabeth's Hospital here today of injuries which police said were inflicted by a householder he disturbed late Friday night.

Police were told that Peters, cursing and talking loudly, became incensed when John P. French ordered the man away from in front of his home. The police version was that Peters then armed himself with a brick, but that French emerging from the house, wrested the brick from Peters and knocked the younger man down. Peters' skull was fractured when he struck the sidewalk.

French took the younger man to his home and put him to bed. Saturday his hurts were found to be serious and he was removed to a hospital.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Blackie Plans His Work and Works His Plan.

About the only thing that Blackie ever sleeps on is his bed, but this was different. He knew he couldn't act on the ham matter till the next night, no matter how quickly he decided about it, and so he slept over it.

It really was a good deal of a job, and it took a lot of thinking to fix up any plans that would work.

One thing certain, he wasn't going to get Hound Dog into any trouble. That was settled. Another thing certain was that he and the boys were going to have Aunt Lindy's ham for their Sunday dinner. That was settled, too. The one thing that wasn't right certain was how to get the ham without getting Hound Dog into trouble.

It took three pipes of tobacco that morning to fix Blackie's mind so it could work it out, but at last he dropped his pipe on the floor and leaned back in his chair and grinned. And he smacked his lips, for he could almost taste that good old ham.

It was going to be a lot of fun, but he wasn't going to tell the boys much about how he was going to work it till the very last minute, and then he was going to show them. He gave a lot of directions to different ones during the day, and among other things he had Jay Bird go over late in the afternoon and see if the ham was in the spring house. Jay Bird came back and told him that it was there, and that it was in a big pan right down on the bottom shelf, so he could easily find it in the dark.

Jocko had hunted up a lot of heavy twine and some pieces of rope, and he had fixed a dog muzzle and tried it on Howler to see if it would fit, and he kept working on it till it was so tight that Howler couldn't bark. Blackie told him all about how to fix it, and he told Howler that he needn't worry, for it wouldn't ever go on again. And now a nice clean bag to put the ham in. Oh, yes, the ham was coming back with them!

Late in the afternoon Blackie called them all up and told them all about his plans, so they would all know just what to do. And the plans worked out all right.

Aunt Lindy and Tom had both been asleep a good while when Hound Dog heard a noise just outside of his door. He didn't make a bit of noise but crawled to the door and stuck his head out to see who was there. The very minute his head got out of the door Jocko grabbed it and slammed the muzzle over his nose so he couldn't bark nor bite and Howler grabbed him on the other side. It didn't take them but a few minutes to tie his feet together so he could not walk or scratch, and they fixed the muzzle so he couldn't rub it off. The muzzle didn't keep him from breathing and it didn't hurt him at all; it just kept him from biting or barking till Aunt Lindy took it off in the morning. Then they laid him back in his bed and shut the door. There wasn't a bit of reason why he couldn't sleep all the rest of the night, and after he got through wondering what all the crowd would take and finally gave it up, he went soundly to sleep.

When Jocko and Howler got to the spring house, there was Blackie just opening the door, and when Jocko went in and brought out the ham, Blackie stood there in the starlight and rubbed his paws over it, and then stood back and looked at it just like it was a Christmas tree. Then Jocko put it in the bag and three pretty happy Creek Folks started back to Blackie's house.

And now don't you worry about Hound Dog. He is fast alseep, and he isn't going to have a bit of trouble with Aunt Lindy.

Danville Studies Power Contract

Danville, Va., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—The subcommittee of the citizens' power survey committee met today to hear a proposal from the Appalachian Power Co. on furnishing Danville with electric current, in compliance with a recent request by the committee for a proposal.

Some misunderstanding apparently prevailed about the needs of the city, which wanted quotations on primary power rather than dump power, and for that reason it was understood the company would offer new figures later.

Though the figures were officially kept secret, it was learned from other sources that the minimum the city would have paid to the power company for surplus power would have been $42,000 per annum, or at the rate of 7½ mills per kilowatt-hour.

CHEVROLET'S KNEE-ACTION RIDE Doubles the pleasure of motoring

Chevrolet prices have been reduced as much as $50

Drive it only 5 miles and you'll never be satisfied with any other low-priced car

DEALER ADVERTISEMENT

CHEVROLET The best way to prove that Chevrolet's Knee-Action actually makes motoring twice as pleasant as before is to drive the new Chevrolet over all kinds of roads. You will find that the continuous jars you used to get even on smooth pavements are ended. The steering wheel is free of vibration. Back seat passengers are comfortable and relaxed. You can maintain higher speeds over rough roads that used to slow you down. You will find, in fact, that probably for the first time in your experience, every foot of every mile is equally enjoyable.

This fine feature is combined in the new Chevrolet with beautiful, luxurious Fisher Bodies, safe, weatherproof, cable-controlled brakes, the flashing performance of an 80-horsepower engine, and the great economy of six-cylinder, valve-in-head construction. This combination is exclusive with Chevrolet. Perhaps that explains why so many people are buying and recommending this extremely low-priced car.

Cards Top Tigers, Granting Five Hits

Detroit, Aug. 13 (AP).—The St. Louis Cardinals scored three runs in the first inning on two singles and a home run by Medwick, then went on to defeat the Tigers, 7 to 1, behind the 5-hit pitching of "Wild Bill" Hallahan in an exhibition game here today.

The Cards found Clarence "Red" Phillips, youngest member of the Tiger pitching staff, for 16 safeties and the score would have been larger except for sparkling fielding by Detroit.

It was the second time the Tigers had bowed to the Cards in exhibition games this summer, a game at Battle Creek, Mich., ending, 6 to 1, two weeks ago.

Yankee Leads Weetamoe by Minute

Adams Craft Comes From Last to Win Due to Skilfull Handling.

MATTAPOISETT, Mass., Aug. 13 (AP).—Yankee of Boston, skippered by Charles Francis Adams, former Navy Secretary, today again whipped her rivals for the responsibility of defending the America's Cup.

She finished a 32-mile course more than a minute ahead of Frederick Prince's Weetamoe, more than two minutes ahead of Harold S. Vanderbilt's Rainbow and five minutes ahead of Vanitie, Gerald Lambert's old cup boat, now ineligible.

The Boston boat overcame the disadvantage of a poor start, caused in part by a desire to protect her new light weather mainsail. A stiff breeze—about 17 knots—swept Buzzards Bay as the cup boats got away but it faded throughout the day until it did not exceed 10 knots.

It was a race of many changes in position of the contenders. At one time or another each of the four held the lead. The course was leeward-windward, twice from a buoy off Mattapoisett to Negro Ledge Buoy off New Bedford and return.

Vanitie rounded the first mark in the lead, with Rainbow, Weetamoe and Yankee following in that order. On the next windward leg Weetamoe gave her best performance of the season, and after crossing Rainbow's bow took the lead. At the second mark Yankee, too, through some skillful tactics on the part of her skipper, was able to wear down Rainbow and Vanitie to move up into second place.

Petrin, Brown Wait Until Tonight

Drizzle Forces Delay of Card But Fails to Dampen Rivalry.

A CONTINUOUS drizzle from the heavens yesterday forced the postponement of the Griffith Stadium card featuring a ten-rounder between Don Petrin and Natie Brown until tonight. The drizzle failed to cool the resentment of Al Lippe, comanager of Petrin, toward Brown, who is accussed of giving the managerial duo of Lippe and Jimmy Erwin the merry-go-round marathon— or run-around.

So incensed is Al Lippe toward Washington's leading heavyweight contender that he will break a rule of several years' standing tonight and second Petrin against his arch-enemy. Lippe's ire was aroused by Brown's failure to continue to fight under the joint jurisdiction of himself and Erwin after they had rescued him from the fistic ash heap by maneuvering him into a draw with Walter Neusel. Jimmy Bronson's new German protege. No sooner did Brown get the draw under his belt than he bolted the Erwin-Lippe party to align himself once again with William McCarney, who had piloted him in days gone by.

Lippe to Second Petrin.

"I know every move that stumble bum's gonna make before he mades it," fumed Al Lippe yesterday. "I haven't been in a corner for two or three years, but I'm going in Petrin's tomorrow night. If there ever was any doubt about Don pinning Brown's ears back, there shouldn't be with me in his corner."

Brown and his manager, William Aloysius McCarney, greeted Lippe's verbal blasts with a covey of ha, has and a sprinkling of Brooklyn berries.

"That's stuff," quoth Natie, winding up his active training by smoking three long, black cigars in rapid succession. "I could lick Petrin and Lippe if they were both in the ring at the same time. I don't see what good Lippe's gonna do Petrin's stomach when I get to it. He should

Prize Ring's Lure Beckoned Grimes

Pittsburgh, Aug. 13 (AP).—Big Burleigh Grimes, veteran spitball pitcher of both major leagues, today disclosed a suppressed ambition to be a prize fighter.

"You know a fellow is on his own once he bounces through those ropes and ties into some other guy. If you take the count there you can't blame it on the bad hops, or on some infielder.

"When you start swapping punches it's a case of everybody for himself and no team work. Sometimes I think that should have been Burleigh's game."

Fiebleman Surprises in 3 Sets; Davis Cup Aces Advance Easily.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 13 (AP).—Racing against threatened showers, the Fifty-third Newport Casino tennis tournament, which drew the most promising field of the Eastern grass season, got under way with such speed today that 56 of the week's singles schedule of 75 matches were completed before nightfall.

Fifteen of the first 20 ranking players, including every member of America's vanquished Davis Cup four, were in the competition, although George Lott and Lester Stoefen, who will be called upon to defend their National doubles titles next week, remained out of the singles competition.

None of the seeded list of ten, topped by Francis X. Shields, Davis Cup singles player and last year's winner, was extended. The only decision that might be classed as an upset came when the veteran E. W. "Bill" Fiebleman, of New York, who found the heavy court to his liking, blasted Robert "Lefty" Bryan, of Chattanooga, Tenn., out of the competition 9—7, 3—6, 6—4, in the third round.

Miss Jacobs Blanks Foe In Debut

All Seeded Stars Win on Slippery Courts at Forest Hills.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Aug. 13 (AP).—Playing on rain-soaked courts as slippery as a dance floor, eight seeded American and foreign stars, paced by Champion Helen Jacobs, today survived the first round of the forty-seventh women's national tennis championship.

Miss Jacobs opened the tournament by whitewashing Marjorie Sachs, of Cambridge, Mass., in straight sets without the loss of a game.

Miss Jacobs' brilliant showing, coming a little more than two weeks after her defeat in the finals of the Seabright invitation tournament, served to dispel the fears of some who had visions of the title crossing the Atlantic this year with Betty Nuthall, the bounding English star who turned the trick in 1930.

Beats Miss Merwin.

Miss Nuthall eliminated Priscilla Merwin, of Los Angeles, with almost equal dispatch, 6—1, 6—1. She ran Miss Merwin dizzy from corner to corner with deep backhand shots and played effectively at the net.

Two of the champion's chief native threats, Sarah Palfrey, of Brookline, Mass., and Carolin Babcock, of Los Angeles, seeded second and third, respectively, in the American group, gained the second round. Miss Palfrey easily defeated Ruby Bishop, of San Marino, Calif., 6—0, 6—0, while Miss Babcock met with stubborn opposition from Josephine Cruickshank, of Santa Ana, Calif.

The meeting between the Misses Babcock and Cruickshank, who rank fifth and sixth, produced one of the finest displays of the day. Miss Babcock dominated the first set, 6—1, but she had to call on all her repertoire to take the second set, 6—4. Neither player won her service until the tenth game when Miss Babcock finally did.

House of David Hurler Signs With Nats

Benson Reports Today as Nats Open Series With Indians.

By Frank H. Young.

IT is suggested that barbers having an off-day keep away from Griffith Stadium this afternoon as the Cleveland Indians invade for the opener of the Nats' last home stand of the year against Western invaders. The warning to the razor-wielders is to save them much mental suffering when they get a look at the hirsute adornment on the chin of a rookie pitcher whom the Nats will give the once-over.

The gentleman referred to is Allen Benson, a graduate of the House of David team, who sports the finest crop of red whiskers seen in Washington since Gen. Coxey's "army" invaded the Capital three decades or more ago. The barbers' scissor-fingers will itch and they will writhe in agony at not being able to go to work on the newcomer.

Benson, a 26-year-old right-hander, has a record of 18 victories as against but 5 defeats while performing with the bearded boys. He is 6 feet tall, weighs 186, and his forte is a fast ball, although he modestly admits he also has a good curve and a fine change of pace. Clark Griffith, Nat owner, yesterday signed him.

As there is a rule prohibiting major league clubs from signing players direct from sandlot or semi-pro ranks, Griffith planned signing him for the Albany Club and then buying him from the International Leaguers. He later learned that Benson once pitched for Minneapo-

A's Nine Runs In 1st Beat Nats, 9-0

Thomas, Russell Routed; Only 500 See Game; Finale Rained Out.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

PHILADELPHIA swept the series with Washington yesterday as Connie Mack's hirelings drove two pitchers to cover with an unrelenting barrage of ten hits, scored nine runs, and all but exhausted the limited supply of Mr. 'Frisco Cronin's optimism. They came pretty close, too, to draining the patience from some 500 fans who still think enough of the Nats to go out and watch them play.

These nine runs and ten hits, mind you, were made in the first inning when Tommy Thomas and Jack Russell went up like a stratosphere balloon, and it wasn't until Alec McColl presented himself at the mound that order was restored.

Holds 'Em Scoreless.

McColl finished out the game in fine style, holding the A's scoreless with seven hits. He, it was, too, who came closest to scoring for the Nats, who found Johnny Marcum serving up his best brand of twirling for the visitors.

That first inning was the ball game. After that the fans just sat back and waited for the second, but there was none. No sooner had the first and only game been concluded than the gray pall overhanging the park unloosed a thin cold vapor that prevented further base-knocking.

Cronin finally arrived at McColl by a series of eliminations—Philadelphia's healthy, redundant hits providing the test. Thomas pitched a single to Cramer as an eye-opener

Miller's Boat Takes Lipton Cup Trophy

Easton, Md., Aug. 13 (AP).—Garland Miller, of Norfolk, Va., counted the Lipton Cup of the Chesapeake Bay Yacht Club today among the trophies he has won with his trim yacht Flapper.

The Virginia yatchsman captured the prized trophy over 23 competitors yesterday in the forty-second annual sailing races of the club on the Choptank River off Oxford.

Capt. Doehler, of Gibson's Island, Md., was second with his yatcht Restless, and F. W. Robertson, of Philadelphia, third with his Juno II.

The Graham Johnson Memorial Cup was won by Doehler's Restless. Miller's Flapper was second, and Robertson's Juno II, third.

Bookmakers See Detroit Reaction

Bank on Yanks Despite Power of Rivals and Winning Habit.

40,000 to See First 2; Crowder and Rowe Due to Start.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13 (AP).—Riding the crest of the baseball season's most sensational winning streak, the rampant Detroit Tigers come to town tomorrow to begin a five-game series with their arch rivals, the second-place New York Yankees. They are scheduled for a double-header tomorrow, followed by three successive single games, in a battle that should go a long way toward deciding the outcome of the American League pennant race in which the Tigers hold a 4½-game lead.

Despite the sharp contrast between the inspired rush of these battering Bengals, batting at an amazing .310 clip, and the highly erractic performances lately of the Yankees Broadway betting commissioners tonight made the New Yorkers favorites in the series.

Reaction Is Seen.

The theory seems to be that the Yankees, well known for their recuperative powers, will rise to the challenge on home grounds, while the Tigers may experience a reaction from their swift pace. Jack Doyle quoted 7 to 10 against the Yankees for the opening game of tomorrow's double-header and even money against the Tigers. Doyle's book showed 2½ to 1 against the Yankees winning the series and 3 to 1 against the Tigers on the same proposition.

The Tigers will be a 1-to-2 shot to win the pennant, however, if they succeed in taking at least three out of the five games, Doyle predicted.

Tigers Are Confident.

Detroit, Aug. 13 (AP).—Detroit's Tigers, idols of a baseball mad city, entrained for New York tonight, their claws sharpened and every man confident — from Manager Mickey Cochrane down to Bat Boy Albert Willis—that they will win the "crucial" series with the Yankees, opening tomorrow.

Lynwood Rowe, the Arkansas "schoolboy," and "General" Alvin Crowder, Washington cast-off, are the probable pitching selection for tomarrow's double-header that starts Detroit's final Eastern invasion. A crowd of 40,000 is expected at the twin bill.

Manager Cochrane refuses to concede that the New York series is any more "crucial" than any other. Just the same he sent Rowe and Crowder ahead last night to get all the rest possible. That is a practice usually reserved for World Series engagements and the like.

Names Other Starters.

Who else will start against the Yanks?

"Bridges, Sorrell and maybe Rowe again," Cochrane said. "It all depends on how the series looks.

"Of course, we want to win," Manager Mike continued, "but after all it's just another series. If we win, of course it's going to prove pretty conclusively which is the better team, but if we should lose, we aren't making any concessions. I think we'll still be up there on top when it's over."

Trumped-Up Aces Finessed by Golf Liars

Hole-in-One Tourney Is Improving Breed of Links Ananiases.

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13 (Spl.).—One of my colleagues in this mad, mad newspaper business is operating a pitch at Salisbury, Long Island, these days that I can not denounce strongly enough. That it also happens to be one of the most unique of all sports events seems to be no excuse for fostering and promoting the breed of golf liars. I refer to the Hole-in-One Tourney now taking place on Paul Lannin's No. 2 links, just opposite Roosevelt Field, which is being run by a newspaper which shall for obvious reasons be nameless. For the purposes of this article we will refer to it as the New York World-Telegram.

All contestants, in order to enter, must have made a hole in 1 at some time or other in their golfing careers, and I understand that a certain Col. Williams, who is operating the pitch, is taking their words for it. This encourages parties to tell deliberate untruths, falsify and exaggerate. I almost had a hole in 1 once. Another half-inch and it was in. Well, it practically was in. If you're just taking my word for it, I did make a hole in 1.

Made His in Greece.

A party approached the contest directors with his entry, I am told, and when asked where he had scored his ace said that it was in Greece. This has a certain ring of truth to it, because it would have taken the boy running the show just as long to check up if the party had said England, France, Germany or the Orkney Islands. My first hole in 1, the one I was telling you about, I made at Glen Oaks, Long Island, but my second, the one you haven't heard about yet, was scored in Mesopotamia. Or was it Irak? Ask the Bey, Mirza, Baba Ba-Y Sha-Ba, if you don't believe me.

The theory of this tournament is a good one. In effect the promoters say, "You makers of holes in one insist that it is skill. We will give you five shots at the pin at 150 yards. Let's see you do it again." In theory this is a commendable notion, as the first year it was run nobody came near the can, and the general tendency was to shut up the hole-in-one golfers and keep them quiet, something which under ordinary circumstances is very difficult to do. A hole-in-one golfer is the kind of guy who can always bring the conversation around to his hole-in-one, no matter what you are talking about.

Droughts Don't Help.

You will say, "My that is a terrible drought in the West, everything turned to dust," and he will chirp, "Yeah; say, I'll bet those golf courses out there are hard as rocks. Speaking of golf courses, did I ever tell you about the time I got my ace? Well, we come up to the seventh, which is a hunnert and sixty-eight and I'm 2 down to Doc and 1 down to J. R. So I'm up first,

Duffer Comes Into His Own

Westbury, N. Y., Aug. 13 (U.P.). Slim, bespectacled Bill Kilminister, Salisbury Plains golfer, dubbed a grass-cutter to within less than a foot of the pin today and won first honors in the third annual "hole-in-one" tournament.

In a field of 170 entries, Kilminister—who considers himself a champion when he breaks 80—teed off on the 148-yard third hole of Salisbury's No. 2 course, hit the ball with a duffer's prayer and watched it scud up to within the charmed 10-foot "birdie circle."

It measured 6¾ inches from the can, the best shot of the day in a field that included Gene Sarazen, Paul Runyan, Babe Ruth and Byrd. Byrd and Runyan defeated Sarazen and Ruth in an exhibition match earlier in the day, winning 2 and 1.

They Take Your Word for It, So Gallico Sees Self Eligible.

Gallic, 12 to 1 Shot, Scores by Neck Over Flying Don at Narragansett Park

Victor Goes To Front in Stretch

Dornoch, Choice, Fails and Finishes Sixth; Polyfon Third.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Aug. 13 (AP).—With the featured 1 1-16 miles allowance race called off, nine platers, each eligible to be claimed for $1,500, held the most important spot on a mediocre program at Narragansett today.

The race, a 6-furlong sprint, went to C. A. Hanson's Gallic. The 4-year-old gelding ran the distance in 1:16 3-5 to pay 12 to 1. He trailed at the start, but moved up fast to take command in the stretch and score by a neck over Mrs. J. Burke's Flying Don, another outsider. J. D. Mikel's Polyfon, winner of his previous start, lost the place by a half-length while W. G. Merion's consistent Dornoch, the favorite, failed to show his usual mud-running ability, finishing sixth.

Fourth For Uppermost.

Saratoga Race Track, Aug. 13 (AP).—Uppermost, Morton L. Schwartz's unbeaten 2-year-old filly, won her fourth straight purse here today in the thirty-second running of the Troy, claiming stakes at 5½ furlongs. The chestnut daughter of Cohort—Summit found it an easy matter to outfoot eight other juveniles all the way, her margin at the end being three lengths. Mrs. Payne Whitney's Cheshire finished two lengths clear of Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Black Gift for the place.

Uppermost, a 7-to-10 favorite, ran the distance in 1:06 1-5 and collected $2,025 for her easy task. Although there was a chill in the air and the sun made only occasional peeps from behind the clouds, a good-sized washday crowd viewed the sport.

Long Prices Rule On Detroit Card

Double Nuggett Pays $57 to Top in Upsets.

Detroit, Aug. 13 (AP).—Form players were routed at the Detroit Fair Grounds today, three winners out of the first five paying off in double figures.

The top price was $57, on Double Nuggett, which won the second race, with Screen second and Divert third.

Second high was $31, the pay-off to holders of win tickets on Myturn, from the Fishburn Stable, which finished 1¼ lengths in front of Campagna to win the fifth race. Half Day finished a neck behind Campagna.

Joe Macaw, another long shot, beat Marechal by five lengths to win the fourth race and reward holders of straight tickets with $19.40. Emery took the show money.

Chifally won the first race, paying off at $7.60, while Main Event took the third, win tickets being worth $9.40.

The rout of the form players continued in the sixth race, which Zenka won, with a stretch drive that nipped Lotta Airs by a head at the finish. Bob Dozier was third. Straight tickets on Zenka were worth $9.60.

Chart of Narragansett Races

Monday, August 13, 1934.

WEATHER, CLOUDY. TRACK, HEAVY.

FIRST RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:30. Off at 2:30½. Winner, W. H. Gallagher's b. g. (7), by Pandion—Carrie Hogan. Trainer J. L. Donovan. Value to winner, $600; second, $115; third, $60; fourth, $25. Time, 0:25 2-5, 0:50 1-5, 1:16, 1:43, 1:54.

Horses	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Jockeys	Straight

SUNNY SADIE	103½	4	4	3	4½	5	5	5	Bastone	16.45

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PADDOCK, $7.60, $4.00, $2.90; BIG GRASS, $4.70, $3.20; SHAUN PADRAIC, $3.30.

PADDOCK took command at once, drew into a good lead while racing along under stout restraint, was placed under intermittent punishment all the last five-sixteenths, and held BIG GRASS safe at the end. The latter dropped back after straightening out on the back stretch, came to the outside in the stretch and closed gamely, but was unable to reach the winner. SHAUN PADRAIC, under steadying restraint, moved up determinedly leaving the back stretch, but was unable to improve his position in the closing drive. GRACIAS moved up threateningly approaching the far turn, but weakened in the final drive. SUNNY SADIE had early speed, but stopped badly.

SECOND RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 2:57½. Off at once. Winner, W. F. Axton and H. Friedberg's b. g. (3), by Blind Play—Loretta Brooks. Trained by T. Morris. Value to winner, $600; second, $115; third, $60; fourth, $25. Time, 0:25, 0:50, 1:16 3-5, 1:43 3-5, 1:51 3-5.

Horses	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Jockeys	Straight

DAISABURO	110	3	6	7	7	7	7	7	Renick	11.75
CELENO	108	8	8	8	8	8	8	8	Sasso	32.20

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLIND BROOK, $7.40, $3.50, $3.20; SQUEEZE OUT, $3.10, $3.20; HORATIO HUGH, $3.90.

BLIND BROOK, steadied along in closest pursuit of the pace established by SQUEEZE OUT, wore down the latter when reaching the stretch and drew out steadily through the closing furlong. SQUEEZE OUT took command in the run to the first turn, drew into a good lead and, despite holding on determinedly in the stretch, was no match for the winner in closing test. HORATIO HUGH was under punishment to keep close up, but was no match for the first two. LINE OF FIRE, on the outside all down the back stretch, weakened in the last three furlongs. LUCKY PRINCE tired. DAISABURO was always outrun. CELENO was eased up after a half-mile.

THIRD RACE—Five and a half furlongs. Purse, $800. For 2-year-old colts and geldings; maidens. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:26. Off at 3:26½. Winner, Guyberzer & Marchant's ch. c. (2), by Man o' War—Exalted. Trained by A. G. Marchant. Value to winner, $600; second, $115; third, $60; fourth, $25. Time, 0:25, 0:49 3-5, 1:10 2-5.

TRACKER	115	7	1	1h	7	7	7	7	Rose	4.60

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RIGHT RANK, $9.90, $4.30, $3.00; COLORIST, $3.10, $2.50; PETEE BLUE, $3.70.

RIGHT RANK, on the outside and under steadying restraint for the first three-sixteenths, went to the front with a rush while racing wide and drew out as if minus the best. COLORIST moved up on the inside, continued with good courage to the end, but was no match for the winner. PETEE BLUE made up some ground and held on well through the stretch. PROHIBITION, slow to begin, moved up gradually and held on gamely, though unable to reach the leaders. ON OUR WAY and TRACKER both wheeled badly and did not have fancied the going.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:56. Off at 3:59. Winner, C. A. Hanson's b. g. (4), by Galetian—Gay Gold. Trained by M. Kuykendall. Value to winner, $600; second, $115; third, $60; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:48 4-5, 1:16 3-5.

SUNNY VOICE	103	1	8	8nk	9	9	9	9	Rollins	42.20

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GALLIC, $26.00, $13.00, $6.20; FLYING DON, $7.60, $4.60. POLYFON, $3.40.

GALLIC moved up fast on the outside after reaching the opening quarter-mile, fought it out gamely all through the stretch and outlasted FLYING DON at the finish. The latter worked his way up gradually and closed with a rush in the closing furlong. POLYFON, well placed from the outset, was much used in racing with SUN ALLEY, assumed a brief lead in the stretch, but weakened slightly right at the end. SUN ALLEY had good early speed, but weakened in the last three-sixteenths. THATCH came with a belated burst of speed in the last quarter-mile. DORNOCH moved up on the outside approaching the stretch turn, but was unable to improve his position when placed under punishment. MONKS STAR, a forward factor for the first half-mile, faltered badly through the stretch. JAZ AGE tired badly.

FIFTH RACE (substitute).—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:29. Off at 4:29½. Winner, T. F. Swords ch. g. (3), by Campfire—Hazal. Trained by J. L. Roberts. Value to winner, $600; second, $115; third, $60; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 4-5, 0:49 4-5, 1:16 2-5.

LEAFLET	104½	2	8	8	8	8	7	8	Lynch	3.55

†T. F. Swords and Miss L. C. White entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LIBERTY (entry), $7.80, $3.70, $2.90; RHODIUS, $5.40, $4.00; FLAGHORN, $5.30.

LIBERTY OAK went to the front in the opening quarter-mile, drew clear leaving the back stretch and, continuing with good speed, was never seriously threatened. RHODIUS worked his way up gradually and closed with good speed through the closing furlong. FLAGHORN saved ground at the stretch turn and finished with good energy. OUR SALLIE came with a belated burst of speed in the late stages. VACILLATE, well placed from the outset, weakened in the last furlong. TODY WEST had good speed for the first three furlongs. MEROVECH moved up on the inside leaving the back stretch, but faltered badly in the last quarter-mile. LEAFLET was never a factor, racing far back all the way.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:58. Off at 4:58. Winner, Jersey Stable's ch. m. (5), by Olambala—May Ella. Trained by C. H. Trotter. Value to winner, $600; second, $115; third, $60; fourth, $25. Time, 0:25, 0:50 2-5, 1:16 3-5, 1:47 4-5, 1:51 3-5.

Horses	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Jockeys	Straight
OLAMAY	108	7	5	3½	2½	2½	2h	1nk	Hanford	$3.80

DISMUTE	111	6	7	8	8½	7	7	7	Bastone	20.10

Two-dollar mutuels paid—OLAMAY, $9.10, $4.10, $2.70; TAUNTON, $3.60, $2.70; CORVINE, $3.60.

OLAMAY, closer up than usual during the early stages, moved up on the outside in the closing three furlongs, was brought to the outside of the leaders in the stretch and outgamed TAUNTON at the finish. The latter outran his field to the first turn, was taken out into the better going down the back stretch and, despite holding on gamely, was unable to withstand the closing bid of the winner. CORVINE, under restraint while following the pace, held on well through the last quarter-mile. TUFFY G., a trailer early, closed an immense gap and saved a world of ground at the stretch turn. FOLKING had good early speed, but tired. FURPUR tired after racing well placed for the first half-mile.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 5:26. Off at 5:28. Winner, A. A. Baroni's br. g. (3), by Friar Marcus—Vilna. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $600; second, $115; third, $60; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 1-5, 0:49, 1:15, 1:41 3-5, 1:47 3-5.

DUNSTAR	111	6	8	8	8	8	8	8	Vaughn	45.35

†Miss L. C. and Mrs. M. M. White entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FRIAR MARK, $4.60, $3.10, $2.60; MANAGER BILL, $5.40, $3.50; ZEMBLA, $3.80.

FRIAR ROCK moved up fast approaching the half-mile pole, drew out to a long lead, but began tiring through the final furlong and had to be ridden out at the finish, though never seriously threatened. MANAGER BILL, prominently placed from the outset, continued gamely and was wearing the winner down at every stride. ZEMBLA, far back early, improved her position steadily in the last half-mile and closed willingly. GRAND ACRE had good speed, but tired after going the first six furlongs. JAMBALAYA never could enter into serious contention. BABOO faltered after going slightly more than five furlongs. BOY CRAZY never could gain a promising position.

At the Post . . .

Dear Al: Narragansett, Aug. 13.

Two weeks make a whale of a difference. Here I am back in the witchcraft country when I had pictured myself spending my nights around the Chicago Loop. I received a wire from Joe that we were going to make this the center of operations. This virgin racing territory suits me. In fact, everything is hunky-dory, except the fact that Clocker Mike has wiggled himself into a hospital. I was depending on Mike for a lot of information when I returned. He may be tired and want a few nights' sleep in a clean hospital bed, but if that guy is sick then I sank with the Titanic. I'm going over there tomorrow and tell him he can't clock horses for me from a sun parlor. Joe has his own system so, with Mike on the shelf, the speed books are badly in need of greasing. I'll admit that I don't know a 2-year-old from a toadfish tonight, but I'm going to know something—and soon.

BILL.

First race—Home Loan's recent win stamps him as the one to beat in this field. Must break with the outside group, but I believe he has speed enough to overcome that handicap. Peters is slated to ride and I will be satisfied with a $7.20 mutuel. Sweet Broom and Radiator for the other awards.

Second race—Knight of Old seems best suited of those accepting this 6-furlong test. Looks like the chalk, but he just can't be discarded. Eldee and Silver Wrack to take care of the others. The last named is a possible upsetter should the track be heavy.

Third race—Wilrob is my comeback day special. I arrived here today in time to get the lowdown on this fellow. There are days and days and tomorrow is the day. Gay Banner and Step Brother to make money appearances.

Fourth race—Prince Tokalon has been scratched several times while awaiting the right spot. Seems to be well placed here. Erebus will go to the post at something like 10 to 1 and will be dangerous. Fast Move for the show.

Fifth race—Blackbirder has been fairly consistent of late and has a fighting chance to get home ahead of this group. I'm stringing along. Currants and Sailor Beware have an edge on the others.

Sixth race—Adobe Post, Curacao and War Plane present a close fit in this test. I prefer them in the order named. The race is wide open, however, with Biff and Bittybit ready to move into the money if any mistakes are made.

Seventh race—Periodica' is a rather undependable sort. One of his good efforts would earn a set of brackets in this company. Bylona's recent win must be respected. Prince Abbot may find the course to his liking and awake with a bang.

Eighth race—Chain, Lerack and Lamp Black is the way I fancy them in the day's finale.

Frederick Nine Wins League Game, 5-1

Victor Over New Windsor; Thurmont, Union Bridge, Brunswick Score.

FREDERICK, Md., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—Frederick defeated New Windsor, 5 to 1; Thurmont set back Taneytown, 6 to 0; Union Bridge took the measure of Woodsboro, 3 to 1, and Brunswick and Middletown played to a tie, 5 to 5, in 16 innings in county league play. The Brunswick-Middletown tilt was one of the longest in the history of the county circuit.

Frederick won in the first inning when singles by Strine, Wagner and Twenty and a double by L. Rice counted for two runs. New Windsor's lone tally came in the second frame on a triple by Talbot and an error. After this session D. Rice held the Carroll County team scoreless and allowed but two hits.

Union Bridge moved into second place, one game from Frederick in the pennant race, by defeating Woodsboro. The cement burners clinched the game in the second round when a walk, sacrifice and singles by Minnick and J. Kiss put over two runs. An error was responsible for the last run in the eighth inning. Woodsboro's lone tally came in the seventh when Shank reached first on an infield hit and scored on singles by W. LeGore and Shaw.

Clinches Game in First.

Thurmont clinched its game with Taneytown in the first inning when two walks, singles by Shafer and Shuff and a triple by Birely produced four runs. A single by Shuff and Birely's second triple sent across another run in the seventh inning and a walk and double by Ward brought in the last run in the eighth frame.

Brunswick scored one in the first inning of its long tilt with Middletown and added two more in the third frame. Middletown put over one in the third and moved to the fore by scoring three times in the fourth. Brunswick evened matters in the seventh inning and after this neither side scored until the fifteenth when each team made one run and darkness ended the game.

McElvenny and Welsh Advance in U. S. Parks Play With Impressive Victories

Third Round Is Gained by Mitchell

Draws Bye in First and Survives by Default in Second.

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 13 (AP).—A pair of smashing, straight-set victories by husky Ralph McElvenny marked the sweeping advance of the triple entry from Washington, D. C., in the National Public Parks tennis championships, which opened here today.

McElvenny, former intercollegiate doubles champion while at Stamford University, vindicated his unseeded position by overturning Ted Heuermann, of St. Louis, 6—2, 9—7, 6—4, in the first round and then eliminating Maynard Weisberg, of Boston, 6—1, 6—2, 6—3, to gain the third round.

Beats James Ratliff.

Barney Welsh, Washington champion and seeded No. 4, won his first round match impressively with a 6—1, 7—5, 6—1 triumph over James Ratliff, of Cincinnati. Dooley Mitchell, runner-up for the Capital title and seeded No. 6, gained the third round without lifting a racket. The veteran drew a bye for the first round and then gained a default verdict over George Robson, of Duluth.

Arnold Simons, of Louisville, the defending champion, advanced to the third round by defeating Maxwell Gurman, of Kalamazoo, Mich., 6—3, 6—2, 6—1, after drawing a bye for the third round. Attempting to regain the title he held for four straight years starting in 1924, Ted Drewes, of St. Louis, seeded No. 2, lost only three games to Howard Camper, Fort Dodge, Iowa, all in the second set, to enter the second round.

Nats Routed

and got one man out as Williams sacrificed. But Philadelphia Frank Finney rapped one to deep right that went for three bases and scored Cramer with the first Philly run.

Walks Jimmy Foxx.

Thomas shook himself like a St. Bernard, looked down at the moon-face of Jimmy Foxx and decided to pass him. But he didn't pass Higgins and Frankie poked a double to right that scored Cramer and advanced Foxx to third. Thomas got another grip on himself and pitched another double to Coleman and started for the showers.

Jack Russell relieved him and made the mistake of pitching a clean single to McNair, which scored Coleman. But Berry flied to Harris in right and the fall appeared to disapear for the moment. Johnny Marcum, however, happened to be a hitting pitcher and he hit one to left that was good for a single and placed McNair on second.

More and More Runs.

Then came Cramer, up for the second time, who singled to right, scoring McNair and sending Marcum to second; Williams, who singled to center, scoring Marcum and putting Cramer on third; Finney, who singled to right, scoring Cramer and sending Williams to second. And then came McColl.

Alec opened with a fast ball to Foxx that the Philadelphia strong boy garbled up and rammed to left for a double that scored Williams, but after that he pitched superbly.

McColl's valiant effort to save his side from a complete whitewashing occurred in the third, which he opened with a surprise double to right. Schulte struck out, but old Alec went to third on Susko's fly to right, though he almost wore himself out getting there. He was stranded, however, as Manush swung at a third one.

The Nats got men on base in each of the first four innings, sixth, seventh and eighth, but they were as immovable as the sphinx. The old punch was A. W. O. L. when called for and Marcum breezed home with the honors.

Mike Palm Joins West Va. U. Staff

Mike Palm, former assistant football coach at Georgetown University under the Lou Little regime, yesterday was appointed backfield coach of the University of West Virginia.

The selection of Palm completes the Mountaineers' coaching staff, which finds Charles Tallman succeeding Ira Rodgers as head coach.

Palm flashed to fame as a heady and hard-running quarter back with the Penn State teams of the Glenn Killinger area in 1922-23 and was Lou Little's assistant at Georgetown throughout the latter's five-year term here. He was an unsuccessful candidate as Little's successor at Georgetown and in recent years has been affiliated with a sporting goods company.

have a stomach specialist, not a fight manager in his corner."

"Brown's nailed these hit-and-run boys before," averred Manager William McCarney, eagerly scanning tomorrow's weather reports. "The faster they run, the less they can take it, and some time during the ten rounds Brown'll get to Petrin's midsection—which will be just too bad."

Brown Has Advantage.

Brown tipped the beam at 188¾, Petrin at 176 at the official weighing-in yesterday. The contestants will not be required to weigh in again today, but should the fight again be postponed, probably will be required to go through the motions again.

Eddie Burl, Jacksonville featherweight, clocked up exactly 121 pounds, thus saving a weight forfeit which he had posted for his eight-round semifinal with Billy Landers. Landers weighed 117½.

Moguls See Game; Deal Is Suspected

Red Sox, Cards, Yanks, Reds, Braves Represented.

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 13 (AP).—Baseball fans wondered why a host of Major League owners and officials attended the Redwing-Syracuse game here today.

The onlookers at the International League contest included Tom Yawkey, owner and president of the Boston Red Sox; Eddie Collins, general manager of the Red Sox; Larry MacPhail, general manager of the Cincinnati Reds; Branch Rickey, vice president and general manager of the St. Louis Cardinals; Rabbit Maranville, Boston Braves' infielder, recovering from a broken leg; Paul Kritchell, scout of the New York Yankees, and Kaiser Wilhelm, former manager of the Philadelphia Nationals.

Fans recalled that Cincinnati just sent Pitcher Don Brennan to Toronto and that the Red Sox had ordered Catcher Gordan Hinkle to the leafs. They sensed something doing between th two Major League Clubs but no word of an official deal was forthcoming.

Hook, Line and Sinker

By Jean Monk.

EARLIER in the season some of our local writers were telling their readers that the bay was full of trout and bluefish, the inference being that these trout and blues could be caught if the anglers would go after them. The anglers went and came back.

Now that the bay is more or less full of trout and blues, and now that these fish can be caught with more or less ease, these same writers announce the good news as though it were something startling. Funny, isn't it?

This column has been saying all along that the blue fish season would not get under way until August. But do not get the idea that you are going to pull them in like you've been pulling those bull croakers. You are going to fish for every blue fish that you catch, and you'll just about pay for him by the time you land him. But it's good sport.

I suggested Raggedy Point, across from Tall Timbers and Piney Point, for pan-size rock fish. Several people took the sug >stion seriously. The catches have been running from 28 to 60 per cent. Some 3 and 4 pounders have been landed.

Rocks Caught Trolling.

They are caught trolling. The equipment is a 36-inch piano wire leader, a 2-ounce trolling (long) sinker, and a No. 1 or a No. 2 Huntington drone. A 3 or 4 ounce sinker may work as well. Try it out.

A lot of inexperienced trollers have trobule with their lines twisting. There is no excuse for this. If a swivel is placed at the top of the leader, next to the sinker, and no swivel at the bottom the line will not twist.

Paul Garst, Navy Yard worker, and Harry C. Weirich, of Avalon Shores (Shady Side), Md., were playing cards last Saturday night in Weirich's cottage at the Shores when they heard a disturbance in the water near the cottage. Sunday morning they went out and found the shore strewn with small alewives, 150 or more of them.

Such a happening took place last summer at Kenwood Beach. That time it was the long, branch minnows that were the victims of a school of bluefish swimming close inshore. The minnows, facing certain death if they remained in the path of the pirates, chose a heroic suicide on the beach. The alewives might have done the same thing last Saturday night. And it could have been a school of large trout instead of bluefish.

One Caught by Accident.

I have wondered why some oen did not devise a scheme for landing those big rockfish off Point Patience, Solomons, at the mouth of the Patuxent. There must be many whoppers in those waters. They break water every season from early in the spring until late in the fall. Many of them are accidentally caught. We are told that such an accident, an 11-pounder, happened there last week.

Gallico

so I take out my old three iron . . ." This goes on and on.

Last year, however, a party by the name of Jack Hagen, a professional at the Lannin links, stepped up to open the tourney and on his second try used a spade mashie. The ball flew into the cup and stayed there and the damage was done. Mr. Hagen insisted he had aimed it there and was angry and disappointed that he had missed it on his first shot. He said the wind blew or somebody coughed, or he got an itch just as he was about to hit his first try or he would have sunk that one.

Plenty of Bragging.

It was the only ace made in the two days that the tourney was run, but that didn't stop the hole-in-one-ers from bragging about it, advising everyone who would listen that but for a bad kick, a high wind or an act of God, they, too, could have duplicated their alleged holes-in-one.

You would not mind a hole-in-one-er so much if he would admit that he came up to the tee wondering whether he would ever hit the green, what club he should use and what he would do if he hooked over into the pond on the left or sliced into the yawning trap at the right. A hole-in-one is a matter of pure unprincipled luck and no man ought to maintain having made one without blushing.

But the members of the ace club will all tell you how they gauged wind, weather, terrain and distance, drew the proper club from the bag, squinted at the distant flag, took aim and poked the ball into the bowl. A hole-in-one such as this is a rarity that happens but once in a million times, like my hole at Glen Oaks, where, noting the peculiar construction of the seventh and an offshore wind, I took out a No. 3 iron instead of a spade mashie like the rest of them were using. I observed that a fore-caddy had taken up a position just off the edge of the green and so I very cunningly played a low carom shot into the woods at the left, aiming for the right side of a tall stout bole at the edge of the forest.

Striking this tree on the far side as I had planned, the ball caromed off to a large rock that had not escaped my notice, bounced high in the air and, coming down, glanced off the fore-caddy's breeches and trickled to within a half-inch of the hole. I was incensed that it had failed to sink and upon investigating discovered what had happened. I had figured the caddy's breeches to be of stout tweed. Instead, they turned out to be a poor grade of cotton twill which failed to give the ball the necessary impetus to carry it over the last turn to the cup.

Here, you see, was close, heady figuring and legitimate. But I find it most offensive when absurdly lucky shots are described by their makers as honest efforts. It is the sort of thing that is being fostered. If an amateur should score a hole-in-one on his official try of five shots, life will be just hell from then on. I view with alarm.

lis and so grabbed him by the direct route.

There is one ray of encouragement for the barbers, though, for Benson intimated yesterday that, if he makes good here, he may consider having his facial lawn mowed, so it might not be a bad idea for hair butchers to submit bids.

Washington's rainy spell has not done Walter Johnson, Tribe manager, who has been recuperating here for several days from a serious illness, any good, but he hopes to be able to put on his feather headpiece, smear on the grease paint and lead his Indians today against the Nats. "I'm feeling pretty good," he said last night, "but I'm not as strong as I might be and Owner Alva Bradley telephoned me from Cleveland suggesting that I lay off for a few more days. I'll try to go back on the job tomorrow, though, and hope to be able to continue with the club right on to the end of the season."

Johnson plans to use Mel Harder against the Nats today, if he reports himself fit; otherwise, Oral Hildebrand will get the call. Lefty Walter Stewart will fling for the natives.

Bob Johnson, Athletics' left fielder, was missing yesterday. He was called back to Philadelphia due to the serious illness of his wife.

Catcher Charley Berry, of the Mackmen, was in the same predicament yesterday as the fellow who happened to be in the piano department when fire broke out in the big store. While all of the others were grabbing up little souvenirs, Charley got nothing. He was the only visitor not to share in the 16-hit attack of the aliens.

Pitcher Bobby Burke, due to pitch yesterday's second game, watched the first from the stands. With threatening weather keeping down the crowd to a minimum—whatever that is—Bobby explained that he went into the stands to help make the attendance look larger. The kid's clever—he knows how Owner Clark Griffith loves to see largely populated stands.

Sometimes it pays to forget. Catcher Cliff Bolton did so in the fourth inning of yesterday's game and a double play resulted. With Coleman on second and McNair on first, Berry popped to the Nat catcher. Bolton made the catch and then, thinking it made the third out, rolled the ball to Pitcher McColl. Both runners immediately tried to advance and old Alec grabbed the ball and whizzed it to second in time to nip the Mackian shortstop there.

Strange as it seems, the Nats were charged with no errors in that nine-run splurge of the A's opening yesterday's proceedings. None of the Nats ever got close enough to make any miscues.

Forgetting was all the rage, Marcum tying Bolton's previous mental lapse by forgetting that Foxx was not holding Myer, who had walked, on first in the eighth. The Mack pitcher wheeled and threw to the uncovered base.

Peacock and Diffenbaugh Triumph

Best Ball of 65 Wins in Pro-Amateur Sweeps; Roger Gets Eagle.

BALTIMORE, Md., Aug. 13 (Spl.).—Clipping five strokes off par, George Diffenbaugh and Roger Peacock, of Indian Spring Country Club, scored a best ball of 65 today at Suburban's course to win first prize in the pro-amateur sweepstakes sponsored by the Middle Atlantic P. G. A.

Rattling off five birdies and an eagle, the Indian Spring pair toured the first nine in 33 and the second in 32. The eagle 3 was bagged on the fourteenth hole by Maryland State Amateur Champion Peacock with the aid of two potent wood shots and a putt.

Johnny Bass, Mount Pleasant pro, and Spencer Overton, Hillendale amateur, tied for second prize with Leo Walper, pro at a Bethesda driving school, and Frank Williams, of Washington Golf and Country Club. The District golfers shot 33-34—67.

A number of teams scored 70's, including that of Al Houghton and Maury Fitzgerald, of Kenwood.

The Post Sandlotter

THE presidents of the various week-day leagues under the banner of The Washington Post Association will meet at 8 p. m. Thursday in The Post sports department to discuss plans for the interleague championship series to be conducted within the next few weeks.

The following leagues are requested to have representatives at the meeting: National Capital, Industrial, Departmental, Department Store, Federal, Georgetown Church, Army-Navy-Marine and the Maryland Suburban.

Team trophies and individual gold baseballs will be awarded by The Post Association to the champion clubs.

Renroc Athletic Club will meet the Mount Vernon Cycle Store team today with the resumption of play in the East Washington League. Play will be called at 5:15 o'clock. Five more games are listed in the month's schedule as follows: August 16, Public Documents vs. Mount Vernon; August 21, Renroc vs. Capital Power; August 23, Mount Vernon vs. Capital Power; August 28, Public Documents vs. Renrocs; August 30, Capital Power vs. Public Documents.

Secretary Buchanan has called an important meeting of managers of the Northern Virginia League teams for 8 o'clock Thursday at Bergman's Branch Laundry in East Falls Church. Important business concerning play-off of postponed games will be settled. The Northern Virginia League games for Sunday will be played according to the schedule, it was intimated by Buchanan.

Heurich Brewers will be out to clinch the Industrial League crown tomorrow in the second game of the play-off series against Pig 'n' Whistle on the West Ellipse. The Brewers won the first series contest against the Pigs last week and a victory tomorrow would bring them The Post Association title and the right to represent the Industrial loop in the Week-day Interleague championship games. Adger Adair and Reggie Brown are probable pitching choices.

occupied. Shields and his international teammate, Sidney Wood, who was ranked second in the draw; the eighth seeded Jack Tidball, of Hollywood, Calif., and the tenth and last seeded junior champion, Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, who is not due here until tomorrow, were among the few who failed to get out of the third round.

Wilmer Allison, who played the greatest tennis of his career Saturday when he defeated Berkley Bell in the Longwood Bowl final, led the advance into the fourth round. The other seeded players matching his pace were Gregory Mangin, of Newark; Bell, Frankie Parker, Bryan ("Bitsy") Grant, of Atlanta, the clay-court champion, and Johnny Van Ryn, of Philadelphia.

Shields, in action for the first time since his ill-fated efforts against the British in the Davis Cup finale, played under wraps. Clad in a bulky sweater, he swept through the first three games of both of his sets against H. Hunter Lott, of Philadelphia, and coasted to a 6—2, 6—2 victory.

Homer Peel to Millers.

Minneapolis, Aug. 13 (AP).—President Mike Kelley of the Minneapolis American Association Baseball Club announced today the outright purchase of Outfielder Homer Peel from the Nashville Club of the Southern Associaton. He will join his new team immediately.

Stock Trading Is Enlivened By Brisk Rally

Upturn in U. S. Bonds Sets Pace for Recovery in Securities.

New York, Aug. 13 (AP).—Stocks came back into the speculative limelight today with a brisk rally that stirred the market into lively activity for a time.

Traing quieted before the finish, but closing prices were around the best of the day. Gains of 1 to 3 points were numerous and Union Pacific rebounded for a net gain of 5 points. Industrial shares on the average moved to a new top on the recovery from the July 26 lows.

A sharp upturn in United States Government bonds, following their declines last week, set the pace for recovery in security markets. Corporate bonds also improved after further liquidation in rail issues had been absorbed at lower prices.

Speculative interest in commodities waned as widespread rains in farm areas improved crop prospects somewhat. In security markets the news that the drought had been broken partially helped to brighten sentiment.

Dollar Flurry Subsides.

The flurry of selling in the dollar in foreign exchange dealings also subsided. While demand for packing, metal, rubber, oil and other "commodity" shares pointed to inflation psychology in speculative quarters, the action of Government bonds and the dollar did not confirm it.

Reports that advancing food prices had led to stocking of canned goods and further indications of rising prices focused attention on food and canning shares. Continental Can jumped more than 3 points and American Can 2½. California Packing crossed 40 to a new 1934 peak, closing one-half higher. McKeesport Tin Plate spurted 3½ points. Armour of Illinois preferred advanced 3¼.

Gains of 1 to 3 points were recorded for American Telephone, Air Reduction, Beechnut Packing, Chrysler, General Mills, Johns-Manville, U. S. Gypsum, Montgomery Ward and International Nickel.

Government plans to speed up the housing improvement program brought buying into building shares. Steel shares rallied with the market despite the American Iron & Steel Institute's estimate that operations of the industry had fallen off 3.5 percenage points from a week ago to 22.3 per cent of capacity, the lowest operating rate since the institute began to compile its statistics last fall.

Volume Increases.

Volume on the stock exchange increased to 811,200 shares, compared with 772,310 Friday. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 stocks rose 1.7 points to 72.8.

Early losses of around 2 cents a bushel were recovered before the close and it finished about unchanged. Rye scored gains ranging up to 2 cents. Actively traded commodities generally were mixed and little changed on the day, cotton ending 10 to 25 cents a bale higher.

Some Wall street observers felt a little more cheerful about autumn business prospects, partly because the rains in drought areas tended to shift attention elsewhere. Industrial reports did not portray much change from the seasonal pattern of dullness, but retail trade accounts over the week-end were considered encouraging.

The move by the railroads to enjoin enforcement of the pension bill passed in the last session of Congress aroused hopes the carriers would get some relief in the courts from their mounting burden of costs. Santa Fe, New York Central and other carrier shares joined the industrials on the rally.

Wool Market.

Boston, Aug. 13 (AP) (United States Department of Agriculture.)—Demand for wool was very light in the Boston market. While there has been some slight improvement in the call for spot Western grown wools since the downward revision in asking prices, mills were apparently doing no more than covering near future requirements. Most sales were very moderate in volume, although buyers occasionally looked over large lines.

Estimated receipts of domestic wool in Boston, reported to the Boston Grain and Flour Exchange during week ended August 11, amounted to 4,800,800 pounds compared with 24,386,200 during the previous week.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Rate at Which Direct Loans to Industry Are Being Made Indicate That They Will Not Be a Significant Recovery Element.

By Ralph West Robey.

About as much progress as could be expected is being made in the direct loans to industry under the amendment made to the Federal reserve act by the last Congress. Week before last the Federal Reserve Bank of New York stepped in with loans of $20,000. The total shown on the weekly reserve system statement as of last Wednesday was $28,000. Obviously, it is going to take a long time for such advances to have any appreciable effect upon the business structure of the United States.

That this would be the case has been evident from the start. There is, as shown by various studies, no lack of credit in the country for those of satisfactory credit standing. There is, and it is to be hoped that there will continue to be, a serious lack of credit for the wildcat borrowers who can offer nothing more than hopes-for-the-future as a basis for getting advances. We had enough of that type of borrowing, one would think, in the 20's.

Can Not Expect a Rapid Growth of Such Advances.

One must not expect, therefore, that there will be a rapid growth in the volume of these loans. At least it would be an error to expect a rapid growth, granting the reserve banks limit their advances to the loans that properly may be made. In brief, these loans would be those of borrowers who, in addition to offering a high degree of safety, need funds for a longer period than it is proper for commercial banks to lend, but who do not need a large enough amount to justify going into the capital market.

How much of a demand there is for such credit in the country is an open question. It is doubtful if it amounts to any great volume. By and large our commercial banks have been rather free, in fact too free, in making advances running over three, four and five years. That has been one of their sources of weakness in the past. They have taken the attitude that any loan, so long as ultimate payment seemed assured, was suitable for their portfolios. To some extent they have revised their opinion on this during the last five years, but with their present volume of excess reserves they will hesitate a long time before turning down a good loan that pays a reasonable rate of interest, even though it does run for a considerable period.

Should End the Charge That Banks Refuse to Lend.

Even though not many loans are made, nevertheless, the power that has been conferred upon reserve banks to make such advances should serve one purpose. This is to put an end to the constant chirping of those who maintain that recovery has been delayed because the banks refuse to cooperate with the Administration. Every one at all familiar with the banking system knows, of course, that there has been no such lack of cooperation, but those who make the charge enjoy the bliss of not being familiar with the banking system.

With the reserve banks authorized to make direct loans, to say nothing of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation having the same power, it appears reasonable to assume that no one could have the courage to make such a charge in the future. The reserve banks do what they are told. If they fail to make such loans, or make only an insignificant amount of them, accordingly, it will have to be granted that it is because there is no appreciable demand for this kind of credit, not because the credit is not available.

Part of Recent Loss Recouped By U. S. Bonds

Many Prime Investment Loans Fractionally Lower, However.

New York, Aug. 13 (AP). — The Government bond market recovered a substantial portion of its recent losses today, but while corporate issues developed a slightly steadier tone, there were many prime investment loans closing fractionally lower.

Government bond dealers reported good buying of various Treasury issues by both New York City and out-of-town banks and insurance companies, and foreign investors were said to have picked up substantial blocks of the Government guaranteed Home Owners Loan Corporation and Federal Farm Mortgage issues.

Transfers approximated $17,186,000 par value, compared with $16,826,000 last Friday. The turnover in Governments was $9,810,000, compared with $9,670,000. Standard Statistics Co. average of 60 domestic corporate loans declined one-tenth of a point to 82.5.

3½s Close at 101¼.

With three or four exceptions, all Government issues closed one thirty-second to nearly a full point higher, including the 3½s, which lost around 2½ points Saturday. This issue ended at 101¼ for a gain of slightly less than a point and the 4s of '44-'54 closed more than ½ higher at a fraction above 107. All the Federal Farm and Home Owners Loan issues remained below par, although there were gains of from one thirty-second to eleven thirty-seconds in the two groups.

The trend of high grade corporate issues was slightly steadier, although brokers reported a scarcity of buyers at times for the moderate offerings that trickled into the market. Fractionally lower prices were made by some loans of American Telephone, Santa Fe, Bethlehem Steel, C. & O., Cincinnati Union Terminal, Detroit Edison, General Petroleum, National Dairy, Ohio Public Service, Pure Oil, Union Pacific, and West Penn Power.

Low Priced Bonds Rise.

Lower priced bonds fared slightly better in general and such issues as Western Pacific 1st 5s, Missouri-Kansas-Texas adj. 5s, Nickel Plate 5½s, Montana Power deb. 5s, New Haven deb. 4s, and Southern Pacific 4½s, were major fractions to more than a point higher.

The new 4½ per cent notes of the Baltimore & Ohio were quoted at 93⅜ to 93¾ over the counter, contrasted with the original offering price of 100. The books on the issue closed last Saturday.

The foreign section was featured by a 5½ point break in Austrian 7s at 60½. German 5½s were slightly higher and Argentine issues were inclined to softness.

Curb Prices Advance After Unsteady Start

Oils, Metals, Alcohols and Utilities Score Gains.

New York, Aug. 13 (AP).—Values improved generally in exchange dealings today. Advances of fractions to several points occurred in oils, metals, alcohols, utilities and various specialty shares.

The list was a bit irregular at the start, but prices stiffened at the end of the first hour. Buying broadened moderately during the noon period and in a subsequent lull gains were largely maintained.

Singer Manufacturing rose 5 points in odd lot transfers. Bunker Hill & Sullivan and Dow Chemical advanced 3 each. Swift Internacional, actively traded, was up 2⅛ points for a new 1934 high.

Shares improving sizeable fractions to around a point included Aluminum Co. of America, American Gas & Electric, American Cyanamid B, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, Fisk Rubber, Flintkote A, Lake Shore, Glen Alden Coal, Hiram Walker, International Petroleum, Standard Oil of Indiana, Gulf Oil and Swift & Co.

Transfers approximated 172,000 shares compared with 146,000 last Friday.

The Markets at a Glance

What the Stock Market Did.

	Mon.	Sat.
Advances	415	123
Declines	107	204
Unchanged	96	111
Total issues	618	438

Stocks—Stocks came back into speculative limelight with a brisk rally. The average gain was one and seven-tenths points. Transfers increased to 811,200 shares.

Bonds—Government bonds recovered a portion of recent losses while corporate issues became steadier. Prime investments closed lower. Declines averaged one-tenth of a point. Sales volume totaled $17,186,000.

Curb—Values improved in exchange dealings. Oils, metals and alcohols advanced. Transfers totaled 172,000 shares.

Wheat—Statements that 1935 crop curtailment plans would be abandoned gave impetus to rallies of grain values. Gains lifted wheat more than 3 cents per bushel. September wheat sold at 1.03¾; December, at 1.06¾.

Cotton—Trading was in moderate volume and prices moved within a range of 10 to 15 points. The general market advanced 2 to 5 points higher. October sold at 13.48, December at 13.60.

Rubber—Crude rubber was easy. September sold at 15.74, October at 15.86.

Sugar—Raw sugar was unchanged at 3.32. Refined closed at 4.75.

Coffee—Spot coffee was steady. Rio No. 7 sold at 9⅞, Santos No. 4 at 11⅝.

Silver—Bar silver was unchanged at 49¾ cents per ounce in New York.

Gold—Bar gold advanced 1½ pence. It sold in London at 138 shillings and 3 pence.

Dollar—The United States dollar was steady on foreign exchanges. It stood in New York with reference to other currencies $5.10¾ to the English pound, 6.69¼ cents to the French franc, 39.85 cents to the German mark.

Trade Trends.

Fuel oil—The market is easier and price shading is more frequent according to reports from trade quarters. Spot purchases are light. Diesel oil is quiet.

Linseed oil—Prices have moved up a little in step with a rise in seed quotations.

Knit goods—The price structure in cotton underwear has strengthened following the sharp rise in raw cotton. Hosiery sales continue small, but quotations are steadier.

Paper—Some divisions of the industry report a fair increase in inquiries, notably for kraft paper and summer specialties.

Burlap—A substantial seasonal increase in American consumption of burlap in July has been reported in trade quarters. The amount used increased 4,000,000 yards over the June figure to 39,000,000 yards. The July gain last year was 6,000,000 yards.

Plan of 1935 Crop Curb Aids Price of Grains

Reversal of Administration Statements Followed by Brisk Rallies.

Chicago, Aug. 13 (AP).—About-face reversal of statements that Washington Administration 1935 crop curtailment plans would be abandoned gave impetus to brisk rallies of grain values today.

The rallies lifted wheat more than 3 cents a bushel after early breaks of about 2 cents had carried quotations down to 9 cents below recent top points. Profit-taking on bulges, however, caused some reaction at the last from the day's best figures.

Wheat closed irregular ¼ off to ¼ up compared with Saturday's finish, corn at ⅜ decline to ¼ advance, oats ⅛ to 1⅜ down, and provisions showing a rise of 25 to 32 cents.

Although the Liverpool wheat market today reflected but in part Saturday's severe downturns here, heavy fresh liquidation of Chicago wheat holdings was witnessed temporarily. The new selling was due largely to a mass of left-over selling orders that could not be executed Saturday, but on today's downturns of prices commission house buying became aggressive, with Eastern houses conspicuous on the purchase side. Strength of securities at New York, with some revival of inflation talk, had a contributing bullish influence.

In numerous quarters, relief also was expressed that today's early recession of the wheat market to 9 cents under recent peaks indicated a proper stage to reinstate sold-out speculative lines. The fact that foreign markets did not drop as far as many traders had expected also was taken as encouraging.

In addition, word came of active purchasing of wheat at Winnipeg for shipment overseas. There were advices, too, of flour sales at Minneapolis and of expectance that mills shortly would be replenishing supplies.

Corn rallied with wheat and in consequence of the best corn shipping demand experienced for some time. Belated liquidation made the oats market weak.

Provisions advanced, influenced by a rise of hog values to the highest point since October, 1931.

Steel Output Rate Rises to 27½ Per Cent

In Some Districts Scale Reached 30 Per Cent in Week.

Cleveland, Aug. 13.—In the first ten days of August considerably more finished steel was booked than in the corresponding period of July, the increase in some districts reaching 30 per cent, states the magazine Steel.

The comparison is not particularly heartening in point of tonnage because early July was as dull as any time during the depression, but it denotes the return of numerous small, miscellaneous buyers to the market.

In the main, these consumers are rounding out requirements they can not draw from their stocks. A fair number of orders can be traced to PWA financing. First releases of radio manufacturers for their fall programs are maturing.

Watching Bids.

It is not known that any real tonnage is being held back, but large buyers, especially in the East, are watching the opening of bids on naval construction August 15 to ascertain if steelmakers have responded to the President's invitation to make concessions up to 15 per cent below the market in quoting the Government. The attitude of steel producers is that deliveries on Navy steel extend over a 2-year period, and to quote approximately current levels would be discounting the future.

But orders, like production, are likely to be spotty over the remainder of August and past the Labor Day period of September. Last week, the National steelmaking rate was lifted one point to 27½ per cent as gains were recorded in the Youngstown, Buffalo, Detroit, Wheeling and Birmingham districts. The rate would have gone higher were it not for the fact open-hearth steel furnaces are not being pushed, being tapped by some operators for an average of 1½ heats per day, compared with a normal 2 to 3.

This week, with National Tube Co. plants starting a two-week shutdown, some Carnegie Steel Co. capacity in the Mahoning Valley being dropped and Buffalo mills retrenching, the rate promises to surrender all of the gain of last week—and possibly more.

A price development forecasting what the scrap trade thinks of the market for the short pull is the break of 25 to 75 cents a ton in quotations and reductions up to $1 a ton in some bids for railroad offerings. This follows the purchase, a week ago, of some 30,000 tons of scrap by steelmakers, the filling of these requirements leaving a vacuum.

Loses Buoyancy.

Tin plate has lost some of its buoyancy generated by the prospect of 175,000 tons being required for canning meat animals the Government is buying in drought areas. It appears that some plate rolled for the corn pack, which is proving disapointing, will be diverted to the meat program, and considerably less than the original tonnage will be needed.

Nevertheless, small miscellaneous releases put the tin plate production rate up 5 points last week to 65 per cent. Export tin plate has been advanced 12 cents a base box by the international cartel.

Standard Oil Co. of California will buy about 14,256 tons of 12-inch steel pipe for a Western line. Republic Steel Corporation is delivering 4,125 tons of steel pipe for a line now being laid in Michigan by subsidiaries of the American Light & Traction Co., Chicago. Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. has booked 400 tons of steel pipe for the Midwest Refining Co., Detroit. New York City is soon to take bids on 4,000 tons of cast-iron pipe, its largest tender in a year.

Seaboard Air Line has placed five locomotives, requiring 200 tons of plates, with the Baldwin interests and 100 special freight cars with Pullman. July freight car orders, totaling 19, compared with 1,835 in June and 306 last July, brought the seven-month total to 23,278, against 872 in the comparable period of 1933.

Structural shape orders hold close to the seasonal average, aggregating 14,742 tons last week. Five thousand tons were placed for a bridge at Buzzards Bay, Mass. Largest pending job is 7,000 tons for the St. Louis postoffice, plans for which have been approved.

Steel's rewised iron and steel composite was off 5 cents last week to $32.23; the finished steel composite was unchanged at $54; the scrap index dropped 21 cents to $9.96.

LEGAL NOTICES

VENABLE, BAETJER & HOWARD, Attorneys.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR the District of Maryland, in re the Washington Consolidated Title Company, Debtor. In Bankruptcy, No. 17760. Pursuant to Order of Court, notice is hereby given to the creditors and stockholders of the Washington Consolidated Title Company that an order was entered in the above-entitled cause on July 23, 1934, requiring all creditors and stockholders of the debtor to file in said proceeding proofs of their claims and for stockholders of the debtor on or before September 19, 1934, after which date no such claim, unless so filed, may participate in any plan of reorganization except on order for cause shown. Said claims shall be evidenced by Proof of Claim, in similar form as that certified in the same manner as Proofs of Claims in other proceedings in bankruptcy. 2. That by Order of Court, dated July 20, 1934, a hearing has been set for September 19, 1934, at 10 a. m. before the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland for the purpose of considering a plan of reorganization for the debtor proposed by a committee representing certain holders of the 25 Year 5% Collateral Trust Gold Bonds of the debtor, under an agreement dated May 1, 1923; and all creditors and stockholders of the debtor have been directed to file their acceptance of or objections to said plan on or before September 19, 1934. Copies of said plan are open to inspection in the office of the clerk of the United States District Court for the District of Maryland and at the office of the undersigned trustee.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Caution — By Harry J. Tuthill

UP THE BACK STAIRS. I DIDN'T WANT TO TAKE ANY CHANCE ON RUNNING INTO IKE AND TESSIE AT THE FRONT DOOR. THEY DIDN'T GET HERE YET, EH?
I CAN'T TELL YOU HOW LITTLE I GOT DONE IN THIS HOUSE TODAY WAITING FOR A WOMAN WHO EXPECTS TO PRANCE IN HERE AND...
THERE'S A CAR.... SLOWING DOWN....IT'S THEM. I JUST KNOW. ....AH! THE CAR PASSED. WHAT A RELIEF.
I'M READY FOR TESSIE. IT SEEMS TRIVIAL BUT TODAY I GOT TO THINKING ABOUT THOSE PILLOW-CASES THAT YOUR MOTHER'S AUNT LUELLA INSISTED, UP TO THE VERY LAST MOMENT THAT SHE LOANED TO TESSIE.
IMAGINE ANYONE WHO WON FOUR OR FIVE WHAT-HAVE-YOU EATING CONTESTS COMING HERE. PHOOIE!
WHAT GETS ME MORE THAN ANYTHING ELSE IS THE TELEGRAM THAT CAME FOR IKE. HA! FOR TWO CENTS I'D ASK TESSIE TO STAY HERE LONG ENOUGH FOR ME TO TELL HER A FEW THINGS.
WE'D BETTER AIR THEM AT THE DOOR. LETS NOT FORGET THAT IKE MAY BE IN TRAINING RIGHT NOW FOR ANOTHER CONTEST.

NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY — By Clifford McBride

THIS MAKES THREE DAYS NAPOLEON'S BEEN LOST! GUESS I'LL PHONE THAT NEWSPAPER OFFICE.
SOLLY, YOU SAY SIXTY ONE PEOPLE AT YOUR OFFICE ANSWERING MY AD WITH DOGS, EH? --JUST A MOMENT WHILE I ANSWER THE DOOR BELL.
WELL, BOYS, I'LL HAVE TO MAKE IT FIVE DOLLARS REWARD TO THE ONE WITH THE SHORTEST ROPE 'CAUSE HE'S CLOSEST TO NAPOLEON. THE REST OF YOU GET A DOLLAR APIECE.

DIXIE DUGAN — Not Too Far, Dixie — By J. P. McEvoy and J. H. Striebel

MICKEY— I SAW HER TOO! —THAT GIRL WITH EDGIE—!
WHAT DOES SHE LOOK LIKE?
I DON'T KNOW— I DIDN'T GET CLOSE ENOUGH TO SEE HER FACE..... BUT I CAN JUST IMAGINE WHAT KIND OF GIRL SHE'D BE WHOEVER SHE IS, DIX—I'M SURE EDGIE'LL WAKE UP TO TH' FACT SHE'S NOT WORTH TH' LITTLE TOE OF YOUR LEFT FOOT
WHY SHOULD I CARE?— I'M THROUGH WITH HIM— FOREVER
DON'T SAY THAT DIXIE! I'M SURE HE'S STILL FOND OF YOU, AND YOU'RE FOND OF HIM—
—AND HE'S KIND OF FOOLISH ABOUT SOME OTHER GIRL FOR A MINUTE— WELL—FELLOWS LIKE EDGIE DON'T GROW ON BUSHES! —IT'S ALL RIGHT TO SLAM TH' DOOR IN HIS FACE— BUT DON'T LOCK IT 8-14

THE GUMPS — Yes, Yes, Go On

WE MAKE OUR OWN DRINKS UP HERE— JUST TAKE A KERNEL OF THAT CORN WE RAISE AND A CIDER PRESS— SQUEEZE OUT A GALLON MOST ANY MORNING—
TALK ABOUT GROW— JUST DROP A KERNEL OF CORN IN THE GROUND— STAND THERE WITH AN AXE AND CHOP OFF THE EARS WHEN THEY GO PAST— GOT TO BE QUICK— IF YOU MISS ONE YOU'VE GOT TO CLIMB FOR IT— IT'S DANGEROUS TOO— A FELLOW GOT CARELESS ONE DAY— HE WAS PLANTING CORN AND STOPPED TO LIGHT HIS PIPE— AN EAR PICKED HIM UP AS IT WAS GOING BY— CAUGHT IN HIS BELT— SAY IT TOOK HIM UP SO HIGH—
WE HAD TO SHOOT DOUGHNUTS UP TO HIM TO KEEP HIM FROM STARVING TO DEATH—

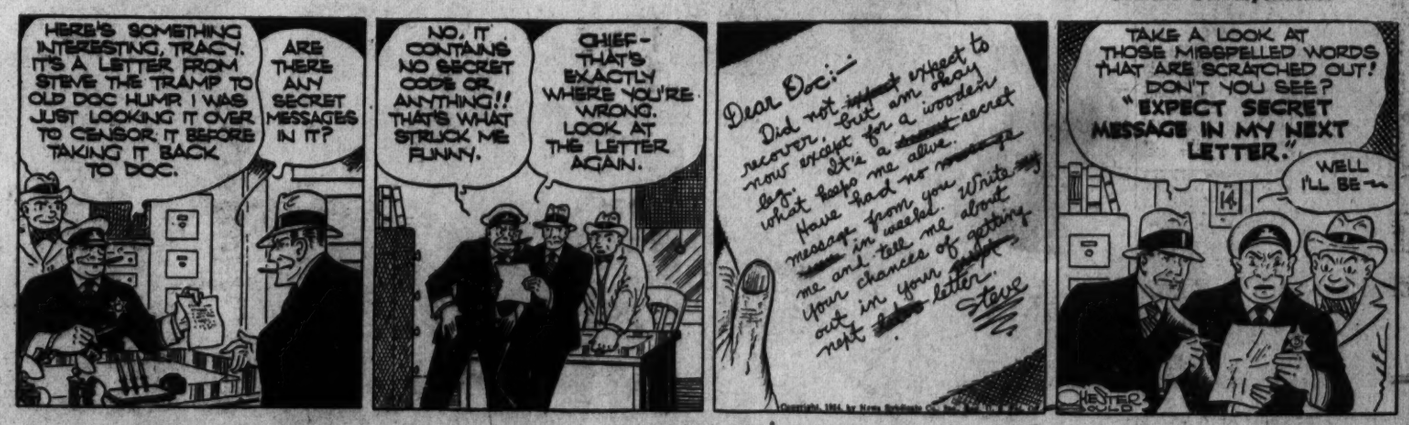
DICK TRACY — Private Correspondence



HERE'S SOMETHING INTERESTING, TRACY. IT'S A LETTER FROM STEVE THE TRAMP TO OLD DOC HUMP. I WAS JUST LOOKING IT OVER TO CENSOR. IT BEFORE TAKING IT BACK TO DOC.
ARE THERE ANY SECRET MESSAGES IN IT?
NO. IT CONTAINS NO SECRET CODE OR ANYTHING!! THAT'S WHAT STRUCK ME FUNNY.
CHIEF— THAT'S EXACTLY WHERE YOU'RE WRONG. LOOK AT THE LETTER AGAIN.
Dear Doc:— Did not expect to recover but am okay now except for a wooden leg. It's a ... what keeps me alive. Have had no ... message from you in weeks. Write me and tell me about your chances of getting out in your ... next ... letter. Steve TAKE A LOOK AT THOSE MISSPELLED WORDS THAT ARE SCRATCHED OUT! DON'T YOU SEE? "EXPECT SECRET MESSAGE IN MY NEXT LETTER."
WELL I'LL BE—
CHESTER GOULD

Walt Mason, Himself

Dry Weather.

In certain stricken sections the farmers wail and sigh; they have no recollections of weather quite so dry. The sun is always burning the parched and parboiled plain, the corn land, which is yearning for 40 drops of rain. The farmer and his daughter to heaven make appeals; they have to haul the water nine miles to cook their meals. The crops are gone to thunder, with Pluvius insane; the farmers weep and wonder if it will ever rain. The cows are sadly lowing for drinks they can not get; the roosters cease their crowing until their throats are wet. The mules are loudly braying, they voice a thirsty hint, and what the ducks are saying is scarcely fit to print. The wind is hot and gusty, and brazen is the sky, the cisterns are all dusty, the wells are all gone dry. And still the sun is sizzling, until it causes pain; and not a drop is drizzling of good old-fashioned rain. We talk about our troubles, of all the grief we see, as we sit blowing bubbles beneath our banyan tree. We've water here in oceans and pails of lemonade, and all the cooling potions that science ever made. And we have balmy zephyrs to cool our fevered brows, while farmers lose their heifers and try to save their cows. Grief comes, a thing in armor, as gloomy as a hearse, to goad the weary farmer and make his life a curse. Grief sometimes is a stranger to dwellers in the town, but it pursues the granger, and always runs him down.
